Fire set by school children playing around a bonfire threatened the entire lower part of the Park avenue residence district at Minneapolis, destroyed a small lumber yard and damaged sixteen houses and barns in a spectacular blaze fanned by a high south wind to the extent of about $30,000.

The fire zone extended five blocks and Fire Chief Charles Ringer was forced to send in a 3-11 alarm, bringing out all available fire fighting apparatus, and for a time it seemed as though St. Paul would have to be appealed to.

Burned to Death in Box Car.

A farmhand who has been working in the vicinity of Morton recently was burned to death in a box car. He had been drinking heavily for several days and crawled into the car to sleep. The only clew to his identification was a peculiar pocket knife in the ruins of the fire. He went by the name of Doyle and hailed from New Jersey. The man was about thirty years old.

Makes Attack on Jailer.

Martin O'Malley, who last October was sentenced to be hanged for the poisoning of his two stepchildren and who is confined in the Le Sueur county jail, tried to kill his night watch. He hurled a cuspidor at the keeper, Thomas Mouldry, but it hit the door and was broken.

Minnesota Legislator Dead.

W. A. Fisher, member of the house of representatives from Minneapolis, is dead in that city. Mr. Fisher had been sick since early in the session and his death was not entirely unexpected, although recently it was said that he had a chance of recovery.

Mill City Gambler Ends Life.

R. L. Scott, familiarly known as "Scotty," a gambler, is dead at Minneapolis, a suicide. He attempted his life Thursday by shooting, and it was believed for a time he would survive.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

For the first six months of the crop year, which includes the period from Sept. 1, 1910, to Feb. 28, 1911, the flour mills of Minneapolis produced 8,110,060 barrels. This is less than the production of the corresponding period of 1909-1910, by 995,310 barrels, but it exceeds the corresponding period of two years ago by 785,950 barrels and is 1,153,010 greater than the total for the first six months of the crop year of three seasons back.

The first allotment of $25,000 worth of seed, covered by an appropriation by the legislature for the benefit of settlers in Roseau, Beltrami and Koochiching counties, whose property was ravaged by the forest fires of last fall, will be sent to the county auditors of the three counties for distribution in a few days. Dean Albert F. Woods of the agricultural college is sending the seed.

An automatic speed indicator for automobiles that will be readable at a distance of a city block has been patented by John F. Wilkie, a Hibbing attorney. The object of the invention is to place the speed of automobiles and other vehicles under police supervision. It can also be applied to street cars, trains or any other vehicle which moves upon wheels.

The Duluth, Missabe and Northern road will be one of the first railroads in the Northwest to install solid steel passenger trains. The company is about to award a contract for the equipment, to be delivered in August. It will include steel combination baggage, express and mail cars.

The Socialist candidate for mayor of Two Harbors, Alex Halliday, was elected by a large plurality in a field of three, defeating Charles Cotter, head of the Citizens' ticket, and John Kinsella, independent. Two Socialist aldermen at large, C. E. Bergen and H. J. Irwin, were elected.

Captain William Milligan of Faribault has been retired from the Minnesota national guard with the rank of captain after thirty-four years of continuous service. He is the ranking officer on the retired list. He is also a veteran of the Civil war and is seventy years of age.

Adjutant General Wood has certified to the war department the names of about eighty officers of the Minnesota national guard who are able to attend the army maneuvers in Texas.

The present spring is witnessing the arrival of more immigrants than in any two years in the past decade throughout the northern part of the state.

The state senate has passed the Putnam bill providing non-partisan conventions to nominate judges of the supreme and district courts.

The pope has appointed Very Rev. Edward H. Devlin, vicar general of the diocese of Winona, a papal domestic prelate.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Henry C. Williams, aged forty-six, proprietor of the Davenport hotel at Winona, died after physicians had administered chloroform as an anesthetic and were working over him. Several hours before he had greeted a friend by shaking hands and a sudden jerk dislocated his shoulder. Physicians were called to adjust the dislocation and heart failure caused death after the patient had been anesthetized.

Henry Kersell of Two Harbors was accidentally killed at Pronovost's spur, about three miles east of Remer. Kersell was driving a load of logs to the landing and was passing where a crew of men were burning brush when a partly burned stub fell, knocking him from the load and pinning him to the ground. He died before he could be rushed to a hospital.

While cleaning the Presbyterian church at Dilworth preparatory to services Leslie Burr discovered the $1,000 draft and other booty stolen from the Dilworth postoffice several days before. The registered draft, together with a number of stamp books, was found concealed in the altar.

Philip Coleman, an old resident of St. Paul and a well known bartender, committed suicide by shooting. Coleman was forty-two years old. He had been despondent lately, it is said.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Rebecca Kirkwood, wife of Rev. W. R. Kirkwood, D. D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, St Paul, is dead. She was born in 1834 in Ohio. For forty years she was devoted to temperance and rescue work and was one of a group of girls who made the flag for the first Pennsylvania regiment sent to the front in the Civil war. She took part in the anti-saloon movement in 1874 in Ohio.

Patrick Hanley, aged eighty-seven years, who hunted ducks nearly sixty years ago where the Nicollet House at Minneapolis now stands, is dead in that city. He arrived in Minneapolis with his wife in 1852 and ever since has made that city his home.

A. I. Hannaford, former county treasurer of Wright county and member of the legislature, is dead at Monticello of tuberculosis at the age of fifty-one. He was a farmer and had long been prominent in politics.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

The indicted Chicago packers lost their fight against going on trial on the indictment secured by the government several months ago when Judge Carpenter, in the United States district court at Chicago, overruled their demurrer to the charges and held that the immunity granted by Judge Humphrey of the federal circuit court in 1906 did not apply to the present charges, which, he held, were based on evidence not included in the Humphrey decision.

William P. Harrison, millionaire head of the World Manufacturing company and several subsidiary concerns, was found guilty in the United States court at Cincinnati of using the mails to defraud. The conviction is one of the first growing out of recent raids made by Postmaster General Hitchcock in connection with the department of justice in an effort to break up fraudulent concerns.

Out of the tangle of financial transactions which were first made known by the collapse of Joseph G. Robin's chain of banks in New York city, ruined by skyrocket financiering, the grand jury drew the indictment of William J. Cummins, directing head of the Carnegie Trust company, for the alleged larceny of $335,000 from the institution a year ago.

For two hours six masked men held St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern passenger train No. 104 at a standstill on the prairie about six miles south of Coffeyville, Kan., while they blew open a safe in the express car and escaped in two automobiles, carrying with them money and valuables which it is believed will amount to $20,000.

In a raid on the stock-brokerage offices in New York city occupied by Wisner & Co. and the Standard Securities company postoffice inspectors charged that irregularities amounting to more than $2,000,000 had been brought to light.

The Bank of Ottawa branch at Kinistino, Sask., was robbed of $6,000. No locks were broken. The cash just disappeared. This is the third time similar robberies have occurred in this bank branch.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

There is no intention on the part of the administration to order the troops now in Texas to cross the Rio Grande river. President Taft has never thought of issuing such an order. The paramount reason for dispatching the troops to Texas was to be ready for any emergency. The entire movement has been precautionary. The president acted solely with a view to protecting the lives of Americans in Mexico and of keeping intact the hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property there owned by United States citizens.

Charging the American Federation of Labor with planning to aid the railway mail clerks in circumventing a presidential order Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart has abandoned his former stand that the department opposed "all secret organizations among its employes" and admitted that objections to the present plan of the clerks to organize were directed solely against the "labor union" phase.

At the invitation of President Taft, Baron Uchida, the Japanese ambassador, called at the White House. It is understood the president assured the ambassador that the United States has nothing but the greatest friendship for Japan and that all the reports to the contrary, which have grown out of the Mexican situation are absolutely without foundation.

A mild winter certainly does make a difference in the size of a fellow's coal bill.

There are only about 100,00 pounds of whalebone in the world, and all of this amount is owned by one man, who has control of the market in this product.

The present is a good time to start the campaign against flies by removing from the premises all filth and garbage piles, which are the breeding places of these disgusting and dangerous pests.

In the interest of public health a more active campaign should be waged against the custom of grocers of displaying foodstuffs without protection from dust and flies. An even greater menace to health are the fruit and candy stands to be found on the streets of all large towns and cities.

A faucet often leaks not because the metal parts are played out, but because the patent valve packing, which is often made of poor stuff, is done for. We fixed just such a leak the other day by cutting a piece of cowhide as a substitute. It was cheap, and the dingus hasn't leaked a drop since.

There are all too many girls who try to get a beautiful complexion by means of powders, washes and lotions when if they would take more exercise at the small end of a broom, sleep eight hours out of every twenty-four, breathe deeply and frequently pure, fresh air their color as well as complexion would take care of itself.

One of the most striking instances of the tremendous power exerted by growing roots is to be seen at El Portal, the entrance to Yosemite valley, where a great sandstone bowlder has been cleft from top to bottom by a live oak tree, which has reached a good size and seems to get along very well on its seemingly thin bill of fare.

Do You Want to Make The Women Happy?

Shopping by Mail is vastly unsatisfactory to the Female.

There isn't a woman in Christendom—or in Islam—who doesn't prefer ten times over the trip through a store to the trip to the postoffice.

Why, Lord bless their hearts, the ladies love to shop! It's just as unsatisfying and artificial to shop by mail as to make love by mail—and that's the limit.

But, while the women love to walk through aisles of bargains, they love also to read about the bargains. When a newspaper comes to the house, which page does the woman peruse first? The page with the biggest shopping ads. Sure thing! Won't fail one time in ten. Test it and see.

In communities where the merchants don't advertise big enough to tempt the women, what happens? The Mail Order Catalogue comes along, full of attractive ads., with prices put down in black and white. The women read the catalogue; they are tempted by the bargains offered; they send their money by mail.

Thus they miss nine-tenths of the glory and joy of shopping. But what else can the poor ladies do?

Now, Mr. Merchant of Our Town, be good to the ladies. Give them some interesting reading matter. Print some of your bargains in your home paper. Put the prices there in black and white.

Isn't it really a pity to deprive the ladies of one of their supreme delights—shopping, seeing things, inspecting before taking!

BE GOOD TO THE LADIES AND YOU'LL BE PROSPEROUS.

Mme. Alexandria Viarda, the Polish tragedienne, once propounded the following:

"It is a strange thing, but ask a man to mend a rip in his coat.

"No; he is not a tailor.

"Ask another to stop the faucet from leaking.

"No; he's not a plumber.

"Or another to do a bit of cabinet work.

"No; he is not a carpenter.

"But ask any one of the three or all of them to enact a little part in a play and each will smile in fatuous confidence and instantly acquiesce.

"But watch him act!"

Saintliness Unpopular.

That state of mind which let us call the ignominy of the virtuous is not entirely confined to boys of nine years. I have seen grown men and women, being accused of saintliness, over whose faces passed an expression of mortification. They would accept with more complacency the tribute that they were getting to be devils in their old age.—Atlantic.

Lack of Tact.

"That man is about the most tactless person I have ever known."

"I agree with you. He would have no more sense than to ask a barber to subscribe to a fund for the purpose of providing a monument for the inventor of the safety razor."—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Knew Her Dad.

Smithers—Do you know any one who has a horse to sell? She—Yes; I suspect old Brown has. Smithers—Why? She—Well, papa sold him one yesterday.—London Punch.

Not Homemade.

Defending Counsel (to witness in bandages)—Are you married? Witness—No; I was knocked down by a cab last week.

The suggestion by Secretary Ballinger in a recent public report that the nation's natural resources, including coal, mineral and oil lands and water power sites, ought to be placed under the control of the several states in which they happen to be located is interpreted by many thinking people to mean favoring a plan whereby corporations of one description and another can the more easily gobble on to the public domain and its resources. Past history in state management shows not only monumental carelessness and indifference in regulation, but under it such resources have been thrown into the hands of men who have been wantonly designing and corrupt. If the people of the country and their representatives at Washington are wise they will keep this wealth in the hands of the federal government and see that it is administered for the benefit of all.

The practice of covering strawberries and tender raspberries in latitudes where the winters are severe is common in many of the northern states. More rarely is the same plan followed in the case of fruit trees, such as the peach. One Colorado grower has followed this practice for years, and the results following such covering have been uniformly successful. From the time the trees are transplanted he root prunes so as to do away with a taproot as well as the roots extending in two opposite directions. When ready to cover, a trench running at right angles to the remaining roots is started about four feet from the trunk and dug toward it, being gradually deepened. The soil about the roots is then moistened by thorough irrigation, and a little later the trunk is carefully pushed over into the trench, the limbs bent down, covered with straw and a three inch layer of earth. The grower in question harvested last fall over $1,000 worth of peaches from 438 trees thus covered, while from a whole row not covered he picked just one peach.

Have you thought to empty the spray tank and drain the spray pump carefully? If not you have probably got some trouble ahead.

A man or woman cannot work advantageously on poor and scant fare. Neither will horses, hens or dairy cows give satisfactory returns under the same conditions.

We have seen people of normal size and possessed of what would be considered a fair amount of courage who just didn't have the nerve to set one of those little "devil" mouse traps.

Buckwheat cakes, a favorite dish with many during the winter months, are both more palatable as well as more wholesome if the batter is made of buckwheat and wheat flour, half and half.

Disease is often very closely associated with discomfort and dampness in the case of both animals and poultry; hence care should be taken that these unfavorable conditions are so far as possible removed.

Warmth Not Wanted.

"This would be a pleasanter world if people put more warmth—genuine warmth—in their letters," said the man of sentiment.

"I don't agree with you," replied his worried friend. "there was a warmth about some of the business letters I got this morning that I didn't at all like."

Didn't Hide His Joy.

Janet—Viola says there was only one drawback to her wedding. Fanny—What was that? Janet—She says her father looked too cheerful when he gave her away.—Boston Globe.

It is just as easy to form good habits as bad ones, and this is an important point not only in the formation of character in man, but in the training of animals that serve him.

As with cattle, the breed of poultry to be selected by any individual should be the one which he prefers or which will best suit his purposes, as any one of a number will pay well if given proper care and attention.

New Mexico has approximately 500,000 acres already under irrigation, with 3,000,000 more that can be watered artificially. When this shall have been accomplished New Mexico's place as an agricultural state will have been secured.

A fellow can have a dish of ham and eggs now and then since the egg corner collapsed without borrowing money on his life insurance policy to foot the bill. Ham and eggs used to taste pretty good, but it was so long ago the most of us will have to learn all over again.

In all too many instances a fellow's attitude on this matter of bovine tuberculosis depends upon whether it is up to him to drink the milk or eat the flesh of animals affected with the disease or whether he has some of them on his hands that he is anxious to get rid of and lose as little as possible.

Contrary to an idea that seems to have got root in the minds of some folk here and there, careful experiments with the tuberculin test prove conclusively that the application of tuberculin will not only not cause tuberculosis in a healthy animal, but has no harmful effect whatever upon an animal that is affected with tuberculosis or other disease.

The one great point in favor of corn silage is that it comes nearer than any other winter ration to duplicating the succulence of the lush grasses of May and June. It is because of this fact that stock is so fond of silage and that the feeding of it results in such a generous milk flow in the dairy cow and the rapid gain in flesh of the other farm animals to which it is fed.

If the writer ever had any doubt that birds know a good thing when they see it, it was dispelled last season when he noted the certainty with which they singled out the ripest and reddest cheeked peaches and devoured them completely, leaving nothing but the pit hanging to the limb. Other fruit in garden and on mountain slope was scarce at the time, and this doubtless accounts for the trespass of these feathered friends.

While it is a mighty fine thing for the farmer to have an automobile and all right for him to do so if he has the money in the bank with which to purchase the machine, it is a very questionable procedure for any fellow who has to increase his indebtedness to buy one. We have in mind a fellow who did just this thing, and in the end it meant that he lost the farm, as he couldn't get his money's worth out of the machine without using it, and he couldn't do this without neglecting the farm work.

One of the reasons why the dairy cows give the largest returns in milk yield in May and June is that the water they drink does not chill them to the bone. This condition can be reproduced in the winter by warming the drinking water with a tank heater by the use of cobs or other fuel instead of making the cow do the job, utilizing corn and other high priced feeds for the purpose. Every bit of heat which the cow has to furnish in the warming of ice cold water means that the energy and vitality which she can devote to milk production are reduced by just so much.

In all too many co-operative creameries the buttermaker is kept tied down too closely to scrubbing, cleaning and stoking work when this could be done just as well by much cheaper help and the buttermaker given this time to inquire more carefully into the stable and milk house conditions to be found on the farms of the several hundred patrons of the creamery. Owing to this shortsighted effort at economy there is little question that creameries of this type lose thousands of dollars annually, which they might just as well save in an improved butter quality by giving their buttermaker more help, thus enabling him to give them more of his service as a specialist.

Persons afflicted with tuberculosis would do well to keep in mind the curative power of fresh air, whether in the east, west, north or south. Many people of limited means might better stay at home, using the precautions they would take elsewhere of sleeping and living in the open air, in the meantime enjoying the comforts of home, than to go to some far away, strange place without means sufficient for real needs. Still another class might as well stay at home, those who have money, but who go and live in stuffy boarding houses in some large city, keeping late hours and disregarding the fundamental requirements of health with the expectation that climate alone will work a cure, and that without its being given a fair chance.

Weary—Gee! if I kin keep up dis speed till I reaches de pound, me fortune's made.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Difference of Opinion.

"I ought to get a hand on that scene," said the actor proudly.

"Hand, nothing!" ejaculated the critic. "The audience ought to put its foot down on it."—Baltimore American.

If automobiles are an evidence of prosperity, this city must surely be prosperous.

Many new machines are coming in, and if the statement is true that every automobile owner becomes a good roads advocate, we should see some good results from the organization of a club with that object in view.

If anything was needed to justify the building of the Auditorium, two recent events surely, furnished that justification. We refer to the visit of Governor Eberhart, when with a seating capacity of 1300 it was unable to furnish standing room, and to the magnificent audience that greeted the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra on Sunday night. It was a matter of pride to the citizens to be able to accomodate so many out of town people on that occasion, and it is regretted that the condition of the weather prevented their further entertainment as planned.

AUDITORIUM

Small Cast Plays.

Prominent Theatrical Managers Demand Quality instead of Quantity.

When "The Climax" played a trial matinee at Weber's Theatre, New York, and scored such a tremendous success that it ousted the attraction then playing the house and finished a year's engagement there, theatrical managers awoke to the fact that a discriminating public would be more than satisfied with a play of four people providing the play and players were out of the ordinary. "Paid in Full", "The Fighting Hope", "The Wolf", and other small cast successes should have proven the trend of sentiment but it required "The Climax" to thoroughly convince the most skeptical. Managers now, instead of filling a stage and wasting an audience's time with mediocre people, employ fewer, but make each part important because it is played by the best artist obtainable. Practically all of the late successes are along this line and public approval of the departure is assured.

"Managing Mildred", the sparkling musical comedy which comes to the Auditorium, Thief River Falls on April 1st is fashioned after this new style in theatricals. Like The Troubadours, New York's reigning musical success, the entertainment is not dependent upon a large chorus, but rather upon the ability of the performers, the merit of the book and music, and the attractiveness of the staging. "Managing Mildred" contains twenty song hits, is filled with clean wholesome comedy and has an interesting and connected story running throughout. The company is exceptionally strong and includes Jaunita Rush, Chas. Picquet, Carolyn Miles, Alma Le Galley, Louis Ritzius and others. A special feature of the entertainment will be the music of the companies own solo orchestra.

Strandquist

Stop. Think. Remember. Come to the basket party on Saturday, April 8th, at N. P. Nelson's home, to be given by the Strandquist school. Everyone try and come. A most enjoyable time is guaranteed by those interested.

A. R. Vik, of Aberdeen, S. D., is visiting at the Lewis Anderson place. Judging from hearsay and experience, this town would be far livelier if we had a few more of his personality living here. Here's hoping we have them.

Attorney Naplin, of Thief River Falls, was a business caller here on Monday.

Fred E. Stohrer, representing the people who are contemplating putting in a bank at this place soon, was in town for one day only last week and informed us that the bank would be soon started, and was in hopes that in thirty days everything would be running smoothly.

W. O. Addy transacted business at Thief River Falls last Friday.

We had a Farmers' Institute here on Monday. Mr. Carlson, of Erskine, and Mr. Smith were the speakers, and a fine and instructive lecture was given by both. A great many took advantage of the opportunity to inquire personally of these men their experience in farming, and learned many valuable points.

A Young People's society met at N. P. Nelson's place last Sunday, and one of the largest crowds since the organization was present. Let this good work go on and see if we can not have a larger crowd yet at Mr. Carlson's place, where the society will meet on April 16th. Everyone try to come and buring your friends.

Dr. Johnson, of Newfolden, was called here on Saturday last to attend Mrs. Belle Larson, who has not been in very good health this winter.

Mrs. E. T. Haulotte, of Newfolden, has been visiting her folks, the N. P. Nelsons of this village.

Bought Farms Here.

Emil Pladson and Sivert Halvorson, both of Waterville, Iowa, arrived in the city last Saturday, accompanied by their families. Both Mr. Pladson and Mr. Halvorson purchased farms up near Germantown last fall. Mr. Halvorson will move onto his farm immediately, but Mr. Pladson will let his farm and will reside in this city, having purchased a residence on the East Side. Both are young and sturdy men and enterprising farmers.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our bereavement, also the teachers and pupils, the A. O. U. W. and the R. N. A. Lodge for their beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller and Family.

THE PEAR BLIGHT.

Considering the fact that there is probably no menace to apple and pear orchards that is so serious as pear blight, it will be well to be on the lookout for it as soon as the sap begins to flow, as the blight in question is a bacterial disease of the sap. It is especially important to see that all holdover cases—that is, cases in which the germs have kept alive during the winter season—are cut out before the sap begins to run so as to prevent their becoming sources of a spread of the disease by bees and other insects to the blossoms and tender twigs of other trees of the same family. The presence of dangerous cases of blight is indicated by a dark colored and sweetish tasting ooze or sap which exudes from the cambium layer through the bark. The bees visit these places, very naturally, get their feet smeared with myriads of the bacteria and as a result are likely to infect a majority of the blossoms which they visit in the course of a day. In view of the fact that bees often cover a territory included in a radius of two miles, the possibility of a spread of the blight will thus be seen to be very great and emphasizes the necessity of destroying completely and thoroughly every holdover case. The wild hawthorn and crab, belonging as they do to the pome family, may be sources of early infection, and if such trees are in the neighborhood they should be inspected. Later on if trees in the orchard are found to be infected through the blossom in the manner indicated the only preventive measure known is cutting out with a knife well below the point of infection all diseased branches and limbs. After each cutting both the wound and knife should be sterilized with a one one-thousandth solution of corrosive sublimate (mercuric chloride), which is a deadly poison, and at the close of the day the parts cut away should be burned. By careful cutting a tree can often be saved even though the blight has got into the trunk or has reached down into the roots. The fighting of the blight will be greatly simplified and the damage from it lessened if all water sprouts are kept cut away well up into the head of the tree, as it is through these that infection is most often as well as most quickly carried to the main limbs and trunk.

BUYING ALFALFA LAND.

There are many sections in the south where alfalfa will do well, and it goes without saying that land which will grow the legume is worth a good price. Notwithstanding this there are some facts in connection with the growing of alfalfa which it is well to take into account. One of these is that it will not do well on land that is not well drained, which means that a lot of land which is being sold to northern buyers as prime alfalfa land will not be worth a continental for this purpose until it is drained. Neither will alfalfa do well over a hardpan of any kind which comes too near the surface nor on a stiff clay subsoil. Weather conditions which are likely to prevail during the making of the hay should also be taken into account, rain and heavy dews being very detrimental to a good quality of hay. For this reason the drier or irrigated sections of the west and southwest are preferable for alfalfa growing. We are led to make the above remarks as the result of a conversation with a friend who recently was shown a lot of alfalfa land in a southern state where the holes dug by land crabs were visible in every direction. This simple fact showed that the water was too near the surface to make successful alfalfa growing possible.

Daisy Cornucopia Pauline, a Holstein cow owned by a New York breeder, lately established a world's record for a week when she produced 33¾ pounds of butter in the seven day period. This exceeds the former record by two pounds. The new record holder is four years old and gives promise of winning other laurels before she is through.

The observance of Arbor day by the children should be encouraged at school and at home as well. It will be most interesting to them to watch their trees grow, and they will come to have a regard and affection for them which will extend to trees in general. This is one of the best methods of spreading the gospel of forest conservation and will have its effect when the children have become men and women.

Some otherwise honest people seem to think it perfectly legitimate to beat the railroad or any other large business corporation out of all they can and consider doing so a good joke. There are others who will profit by what they know to be the mistake of a merchant in quoting a price on goods who wouldn't for one minute think of taking that amount of cash out of his pocket. Still another class of people, employed by others, who would never be guilty of tapping the cash drawer, will loaf and steal time for which their employer is paying his good money. Queer codes of ethics these people have.

After several years of seemingly futile effort to pass the White mountain Appalachian forest reservation bill, the chief objection against which has been that it was unconstitutional for the federal government to buy and hold as a private owner for forest reserve purposes land belonging to the several states, the bill was enacted into a law by the congress just closed. While it will accomplish the desired results, the law is so framed that it authorizes the government to purchase lands at the headwaters of navigable streams in the White mountains and Appalachian mountains "to prevent the erosion of soil and to preserve the hardwood forests" in the latter territory. The bill carries with it an appropriation of $12,000,000, which may be devoted to the objects named. The enactment of the measure into law is a most commendable step in the direction of needed conservation.

If the prognostications of the bug men are correct there are considerable sections of the country which will in the course of two or three months be visited by the seventeen year locusts. While the locust is in the mind of many synonymous with the grasshopper, there is really very little resemblance between the two insects, the former being a transparent winged insect with broad head and stocky body of a greenish tinge closely resembling a large fly. On hatching the female locusts will be active during a period of five or six weeks. The chief damage done by them will be to young fruit trees, the young and tender twigs of which they will split in depositing their eggs. After these are deposited the mature insects will disappear into the ground for another seventeen years' sleep. It is predicted that the damage which will be done by the brood due in 1913 will be much more extensive than that of the present season's batch.

30 Days Trial in your own Home

$1 A Week Payments

These are the remarkably liberal terms upon which we sell that new and improved sewing machine which was recently invented by Wm. C. Free, which has been so widely advertised in Women's Magazines, and which is revolutionizing the sewing machine business,

The FREE Sewing Machine

Because of the fact that The FREE is sold so much lower than the best known sewing machines, we have agreed never to publish the price broadcast. You would judge its quality by its cost. You would not believe that absolutely the best sewing machine in the world could be obtained at such a bargain.

So instead of talking price, we have decided to make it easy for you to own The FREE and find out its quality yourself. We will sell it to you at your own terms, as low as $1.00 a week, and to show you how we place our whole establishment back of this wonderfully perfect machine without the least qualification, we offer it to you on 30 days Trial in your own home. Sew on it for 30 days. Give it any hard test you can think of for 30 days. Compare it point by point with any other machine. Then if you have not been convinced that it is the best machine you ever heard of, the most convenient, the most improved, and if the low price does not delight you—return the machine to us. We will refund your deposit so that the trial will not cost you one cent.

SENATORS ARE BELLIGERENT

Dare Governor Eberhart to Call an Extra Session.

Senators who defeated the Congdon reapportionment bill are daring Governor Eberhart to carry out his threat of an extra session. They assert flatly that there will be no reapportionment until the constitution is amended and that there is no chance now for a bill to pass, either at the present regular session or at an extra session if it is called.

The house committee on general legislation approved the bill establishing experimental substations at Duluth and Waseca. The bill, however, will be amended so that the appropriation for Waseca will be cut to $35,000 and for Duluth to $65,000.

Gas Fatal to Two Men.

William Schroeder, aged thirty-three, a carriage painter of Minneapolis, and John Gallagher, thirty-six years old, of Jordan, Minn., said to be a private detective, were found dead in Schroeder's room in Minneapolis by Mrs. B. Leroy, from whom the room had been rented. The coroner said death was due to accidental gas poisoning.

Miner Perishes In Swamp.

A miner who has not been identified met with a terrible fate near Hibbing during the winter. He was caught in the muskeg in a swamp near the Albany mine and was frozen to death. His body was found submerged to the hips.

The Filial Chinaman.

Many examples of Chinese filial piety strike the occidental reader as ridiculous. There is the famous story of Lao Laitsu, which Mr. R. F. Johnston repeats in his "Lion and Dragon In Northern China." Lao's parents lived to such extreme old age that he was himself a toothless old man while they were both still alive. "Conceiving it his duty to divert their attention from their weight of years and approaching end, he dressed himself up in the clothes of a child and played about in his parents' presence with the object of making them think they were still a young married couple contemplating the innocent gambols of their infant son."

A similar case is that of Wang P'ou, whose mother had an unconquerable dread of thunder and lightning. When she died she was buried in a mountain forest, and thereafter, when a violent thunderstorm occurred, Wang P'ou, heedless of the wind and rain, would hurry to her grave and throw himself to his knees. "I am here to protect you, dear mother," he would say. "Do not be afraid."

Making a Gunstock.

A party of men were out hunting, and an old woodsman who was with them broke his gunstock in some way or other. It was just about nightfall when the accident occurred, and inasmuch as he was very anxious to do some shooting early the next morning he decided to fix up his shooting iron. Finding a walnut fence rail, he set to work. His only tools were an ax and a big pocket knife. All night long he labored vigorously at his task, and by morning the gunstock was finished and back in place, and worked like a charm.

"How did you do it?" asked one of the number, greatly surprised.

"Very easy," was this old hunter's reply. "No trouble at all. Just get a piece of wood about the size and kind that you want and then whittle away all that you want whittled away. When you have all the wood cut off that you don't want you have a gunstock."—Kansas City Journal.

A QUEER UNIVERSITY.

Cairo Has the World's Oldest Educational Institution.

"When we think of Harvard or Yale, the former dating from 1638 and the latter from 1701, we think of them as old universities," says a writer in the American Educational Review; "but when we pass to the other side of the world we discover that even the oldest American universities are in reality very young institutions.

"The oldest educational institution in the world is the University of El Ashar, Cairo, founded in the year 988 by the great Saladin. It is the central seat of learning for the whole Mohammedan world, as well as a fountain of spiritual life. It occupies an ancient mosque in the Arab quarter of Cairo, surrounded by a confusing maze of narrow streets where the population is made up of representatives of every race that follows the prophet.

"The old mosque covers several acres and consists of a series of courts surrounded by long cloisters with low roofs supported by forests of columns. The floors of red tiles are covered daily by a multitude of men and boys, squatting in semicircles around their teachers, who sit with their backs to the columns lecturing in monotones.

"The chancellor of the university is always a descendant of the prophet and is usually a man of ability and learning. He occupies apartments in El Ashar and is not only the supreme educational but the ecclesiastical head of the church of Egypt.

"There is no organization similar to that in modern universities. Any reputable man who desires to teach can obtain the privilege by application and is assigned a column where he may sit and impart the truth as he thinks proper. His fame or ability will attract more or less students and disciples, who pay him fees according to their means."

The worth of boy or girl is just as often due to the handicaps which they have to overcome as to the favorable conditions or environment under which they may be reared.

If the nesting boxes are kept supplied with clean material there will be no need of washing the eggs before putting them down to keep—in fact, they will keep much better if no water touches them.

Those who have traveled through eastern Oregon and down the Columbia river have noticed with much interest the barriers erected along the track in many places to stop the shifting sands and keep them from blocking the track. Notwithstanding this precaution not infrequently trains have to stop until the sand drifts have been removed.

There is no enterprise along agricultural lines that can be set afoot in a community that will do more to contribute to its material wealth, contentment and prosperity than dairying. Fundamentally this is because it means the establishing of a system or type of farming which means soil replenishing instead of soil robbing and impoverishing.

Sago and tapioca are two food products used extensively in American cooking. The first is prepared from the starch secured from the pith of several species of East Indian palm trees. Tapioca is made by heating in a moist state the starch made from the root of the cassava or tapioca plant, which is a native of several South American countries.

Research work which has been conducted by the biological survey in the Blue Ridge apple district in Virginia shows that some twenty-five species of native birds prey upon the codling moth, and it is estimated that they destroy from 50 to 85 per cent of the hibernating pupae. This means that birds are a more effective means of keeping this pest in check than all the rest of their natural enemies combined.

An eastern florist is said to be getting remarkable egg returns by screening off a portion of one of his greenhouses and keeping the flock of hens there within view of the growing and blossoming flowers. The secret of his success, and there would seem to be no good reason to doubt it, lies in the fact that he has in large measure reproduced for the hens springtime conditions, which are very favorable to egg production.

More often than is the case life insurance should be viewed as a systematic and regular method of saving than as mere insurance against death. There are many men who take this view and who put practically all of their surplus earnings into insurance premiums. Payments must be made at regular intervals, are anticipated and a definite plan made to meet them. In the matter of being able to afford the carrying of life insurance it is more often true than not that the fellow who says he is too poor to carry insurance is the one whose family is in need of just such protection and who would be left destitute and unprovided for in case of his death.

Failure to use the Babcock test in the determining of the butter fat product of each member of the dairy herd not only prevents an effective elimination of the loafer, but also prevents adjusting the grain ration of the individual to her actual needs—that is, to the amount of butter fat produced. A feeding rule based on this test which is followed by many dairymen is to give each cow as many pounds of grain per day as she produces in butter fat per week. For instance, a cow giving twelve pounds of butter fat per week is given twice as much grain as the cow producing but six pounds. Yet how many dairymen continue in the same old rut, giving a cow so many quarts of feed, whether she is producing much or little butter, just because she is a cow and is giving some milk!

Shippers of the country and especially growers of perishable fruits will note with interest the outcome of a case brought by Dumas, a Columbia river valley fruit grower, against the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company for loss sustained because of a failure of the transportation company to provide cars at specified intervals as per terms of a special contract. In giving its ruling on the case the court—the United States court of appeals for the Ninth district—held that such contract was not invalid as discriminatory and contrary to public policy and that the carrier's inability to furnish cars at specified times, as agreed, owing to an unusually heavy traffic at the time they were demanded, constituted no defense to an action seeking to recover damages sustained because of such failure.

VERY FEW CASES REPORTED

Statement That Infantile Paralysis Originated In Sweden Apparently Without Foundation—Statistics on Industrial Development In Norway. Censor for Amusements Proposed In Denmark.

SWEDEN.

The recent statement in a St. Paul newspaper to the effect that infantile paralysis originated in Sweden will undoubtedly cause a lot of mingled amusement when it reaches the other side. The statement which occurs in the St. Paul Pioneer Press for last Wednesday reads as follows: "The theory advanced at a recent meeting of the Society of Medical Jurisprudence at the Academy of Medicine, New York, that infantile paralysis was carried from Sweden to New York and thence to Minnesota through the Scandinavian population of this state, is scouted by Dr. H. M. Bracken of the state board of health. There is no doubt that the disease is infectious," said Dr. Bracken, "but not necessarily violently infectious. How the theory can be advanced that it was brought to Minnesota through the Scandinavian population is more than I can explain. Minnesota is doing about all it can to regulate infantile paralysis. Law requires that cases must be reported and kept isolated and children having the disease are not allowed to attend school. There might be more efficiency in handling it in the rural districts, but even there a great deal is done to prevent its spreading. No further legislation is needed." There are comparatively very few cases of infantile paralysis in Sweden, indeed the disease is practically unknown there. The Swedish papers seldom or ever refer to it.

In some parts of Sweden the population is not only not holding its own but is on the decrease. One of the local papers of Western Warmland laments the fact very much. Emigration is stronger than the natural increase. As soon as the young people grow up they leave either for America or for the large cities. The writer thinks that were there better railroad facilities to that part of the country so that its resources would find a better market it would improve matters.

Madame Emily Wijk has donated 25,000 crowns to the Dickson library in Gothenburg, 20,000 to a hospital for invalids and 20,000 to a fund for needy merchants. Madame Wijk is considered the wealthiest woman in Sweden.

The dressmakers of Stockholm declare that neither the hobble skirt nor the harem skirt will have any followers in that city and that it would be impossible to introduce the new style in Sweden. Good for Sweden.

NORWAY.

Says a Norwegian Christiania correspondent: "The national budget prepared by the government contains a statistical report on the industrial development of Norway during the past forty years. In the course of the past ten years the average value of the crops has increased from about $50,000,000 in 1880, to about $55,000,000 in 1910. During the same period the increase of the value of the land was much more rapid. The hay crop has increased very much. Potatoes, rye and barley show a decrease as compared with the figures for 1876, but there was a slight increase in the production of wheat and oats. In 1870 there were 2,400 manufacturing establishments, and now there are about 4,550. During the same period the number of factory employes increased from 32,200 to about 110,000. In 1895 the manufacturing concerns used 110,000 horsepower which since that year has increased to about 600,000 horsepower. In 1880 the value of the exports of manufacturing products was $2,770,000, in 1909 the figures were $26,500,000. In 1870 the combined foreign trade was $68,850,000, in 1908 it was $203,300,000. In 1870 the returns of the fisheries were $5,670,000, and this amount was almost doubled in 1909. In 1850 Norway was supposed to own 2.75 per cent of the merchant marine of the world, and in 1900 the percentage was 5. In 1909 the tonnage of the merchant marine averaged one and a half tons for every inhabitant of the country, which was twice the proportion for England, and eleven times the proportion for Germany. The population of the country increased from 1,740,000 in 1870 to almost 2,400,000 in 1910, and during the same period over 276,000 persons emigrated fro mthe country."

Miss Rogstad, the first woman to represent a constituency in the storthing, made her maiden speech before that body the other day. She is a school teacher and represents one of the seats made vacant by the resignation of General Bratlie, president of the storthing, who was compelled to retire temporarily in order to assist in the work of reorganizing the army. The entire assembly arose when Miss Rogstad began her speech. She said the day would be a memorable one, as it was the first time a woman had ever participated in the discussion in the nation's parliament, and predicted that the movement for political enfranchisement of woman was bound to succeed and to result in many reforms.

In a letter from Christiania to friends in St. Paul E. H. Hobe, Norwegian consul at that city, says that the Norwegian Steamship company has just completed arrangements to put in a new line of passenger boats running between Norway and New York. The company expects to buy three modern passenger boats, constructed to cross the ocean in ten days, and seven freight steamers. The capital stock of 10,000,000 crowns has now been raised and the company is ready to begin business as soon as arrangements have been completed.

Guides and porters in different parts of Norway have for some years been required to take a course in English before they could obtain and hold lucrative positions, as Norway has become such a summer resort. But in recent years so many Germans have visited Norway in the summer season that arrangements are now made for a German course also. The Germans are said to outnumber all other nationalities visiting Norway in the summer season.

Johannes Rogneby celebrated his 103d birthday the other day. He was born in 1808 and has lived under nine kings. During the last few months the aged man has been confined to his bed, but his appetite is still good. His mind is still clear and he takes a great deal of interest in knowing what is going on in the world and has some of his great grandchildren read newspapers and periodicals for him.

According to recent statistics there are at present in Norway 628 newspapers and periodicals. Of these 267 are printed in Christiania, or about 44 per cent of the entire number. The subscription price varies between 17 crowns a year down to 10 ores.

General Director Eide has recently purchased a vast mining tract in Grorg, in Trondelagen. The ore is all copper, which will be shipped to Swedish smelters.

Claes Bohlin, rector of the Falun Mining school, is seeking the chair of metalurgy in the Technical High school in Trondhjem.

DENMARK.

There has been a remarkable protest recently in Denmark against the number of cheap plays and picture shows that have and are in vogue at present in all cities of the country. Some time ago some enterprising person got up a petition to the effect that an amusement commission should be appointed, whose duties it should be to censor all kinds of plays and moving picture shows, etc., and when it began to circulate it was an easy matter to secure signatures. Not less than 80,000 persons have signed the petition, which will go to the rigsdag in the very near future. It is believed that that body will act favorably on the petition almost at once.

Bjorn Jonsson, premier of Iceland, popularly known as "Iceland's Michelsen," has tendered his resignation. King Fredrick has received and accepted same, but has requested him to serve until another man can be appointed in his stead.

According to the census of Feb. 1 the population of Denmark is 2,756,873, which shows an increase of 307,833 for the past decade. The annual increase for the past five years was 1.27 per cent.

GOOD SEED.

As the springtime with its sowing and planting is again with us it is well as in the years gone to take stock of the kind of small grain and corn which is to be used in the production of the new crop. If one does not have plump, well filled small grain seed of his own raising it can be got at a reasonable price from neighbor or seedsman. Care should be taken that such seed is well cleaned and free from noxious weed seeds. The extra quality which a few cents a bushel will secure is more than made up in the better stand and more vigorous growth which will be obtained. The earth bed in which this seed is put should not be given scrub preparation, but should be made fine and mellow and the seed drilled in to an even depth. In the case of the seed corn a careful individual ear test should be made. A farmer of good sense and eyesight who has had experience in the matter can without doubt tell whether a given kernel of corn will germinate in a majority of cases by cutting through the chit, or germ, with a jackknife; but, since the kernels on one side of an ear may be good and on the other bad, the testing box method is a good deal safer. There are a number of inexpensive ready made testers on the market which are very conveniently equipped, but a homemade tester consisting of a shallow box about 2 by 3 feet and four or five inches deep and three pieces of muslin exceeding the dimensions of the box by about eight inches will answer the purpose nicely. About three inches of sawdust or earth should be put in the box, leveled off and firmed down. Over this should be spread one of the pieces of muslin, previously marked off in two and a half inch squares and numbered consecutively, beginning at one corner. The edges of this should be tacked to the inside of the box so as to keep it in place. Six kernels of corn—three from each side—from ear No. 1 should then be placed in square No. 1; the same number from ear No. 2 in square No. 2, and so on until six kernels each have been taken from as many ears as there are squares on the cloth. When this has been completed the second cloth should then be placed over the one bearing the seed and on this the third, the edges of which should extend well over the sides of the box. On this should be carefully spread about two inches more of sawdust or earth.

The testing box should be kept in a room having a temperature of from 65 to 75 degrees, and if the filler was not moist when put in the box it should be watered. Seven or eight days will tell the story, when the good kernels will show vigorous sprouts. The upper cloth, bearing the earth or sawdust, should be carefully removed so as not to disturb the second cloth covering the seed. This should then be removed. By comparing the ears with the corresponding kernels on the key numbered squares the worth of a given ear for seed will be determined. Any ears the kernels from which do not show five strong germinations out of six should be discarded entirely, while those showing one bad kernel out of six should be kept by themselves and not used at all unless there is a decided shortage of seed. Seed showing weak germination is worthless, and ears from which it is taken should not be used. The test may be repeated as many times as may be necessary, when all the approved ears should be put by themselves, shelled and the kernels sorted as to size and shape so as to give a uniform drop with the planter. Notwithstanding the fact that the past season seemed to be one especially favorable for the maturing of seed corn, complaints are coming from many quarters that the seed is very uneven in germinating quality; hence it would seem wise to use the testing box and take no chances.

KIDS AND PIE.

The utter lack of care or knowledge displayed by some mothers in the feeding of their infant children is little short of amazing. We came across a case the other day of a mother who was in the habit of taking her baby of two years to call at a home in which there were several children, whose delight it was to literally stuff the poor little baby with pie—"she liked it so." The mother calmly witnessed the performance, offering no objection and evidently seeing no connection between the sallow complexion and general puny appearance of her baby and the things it was allowed to eat. A child's taste is not a sure guide, especially when care in its formation has not been exercised. If never allowed to have things which it should not eat the child will not form a taste for them. And this is the easiest and safest method to follow.

If there is anything meaner than a balky horse we don't know what it is

The drinking of large quantities of cold water and deep breathing of fresh air is an excellent cold cure.

Efficiency, which is being made the watchword of many large industrial enterprises, might be adopted by the tiller of the soil with equal profit.

Great care should be exercised in looking after the health of all dairy cows, but especially those that supply milk for the babies and little folk, who, if in frail health, are especially susceptible to tuberculosis.

It is a commentary on our present day civilization that the most sacred rite and institution we have—that of marriage—often furnishes the occasion for a type of vandalism and horseplay that would shame a Fiji islander or a Patagonian.

A wise mother we know has prevented her little child from forming the candy habit by never allowing it to eat candy and so to acquire a taste for it. The necessary sweets are provided in other ways, and the child is encouraged to eat fruit, which is equally appetizing and much more wholesome.

Hair balls, sometimes reaching a diameter of two or three inches, are now and then found in the stomachs of cattle. They are usually covered with a shell-like crust or coat and are without doubt the gradual accumulation of hair licked from their bodies by animals at the time of the spring shedding.

A good idea of the size of the country is often obtained from reports covering the operation of a big railroad system for a year. The annual report of the Pennsylvania railway, recently published, shows that on the 4,004 miles of road belonging to the system there were hauled in 1910 441,010,033 tons of freight, while during the same interval there were carried 168,604,348 passengers.

There seems to be a disposition on the part of the railroads in the central western states, where the two cent fare laws were adopted, to let the rate stand, for since the new rate became operative it has been found that passenger traffic has been enough larger to more than offset the loss resulting from the reduction. If practicable in the sparsely settled western states it would seem as if conditions were such as to justify the rate in many an eastern state.

The world would probably be just as well off if a half or more of the dogs were put out of the way by some hurry up method, but now and then a valuable canine that one would really like to save gets a dose of poison. In such cases it is worth remembering that hot lard and milk will, if given at once, often induce vomiting, which will free the system of the drug. They also tend to act as an antidote for poisons having a corrosive effect. In the line of drug antidotes potassium bromide is excellent. It can be got at any drug store and may be given in a small quantity of water.

Brazil has a rival to our Niagara falls, called Iguassu, which is very similar in appearance to Niagara, having a horseshoe bend on one side. The falls cover a distance of about two miles, with a final leap of 213 feet. The depth at the foot of the falls is more than a hundred fathoms and is believed by the natives to be bottomless. During the rainy season the volume of water taking these wild leaps is much greater than that of Niagara, while Iguassu surpasses Niagara further in the fact that it stands in a primal wilderness, undisturbed and unmarred by commercialism.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York is lending aid to a back to the land movement that is, to say the least, unique and interesting. She selected twenty young women from many applicants and has placed them on her farm, Brockholt, on Long Island. They dress in bloomers, broad brimmed hats and boys' shoes and are to do all the work on the place, including woodchopping and caring for the horses. They are to be given thorough training in household duties, and when the time comes will take up plowing, planting and the raising of poultry. At the end of two months, if they like "farming," they will have an opportunity to purchase small tracts from their benefactress. This plan may work all right awhile, but the chances are that most of these girls will have a man around the premises before many moons.

The 1910 crop records have been compiled, and they are interesting. California takes the honors from Minnesota in the production of barley, New York from Iowa in the production of hay, Iowa from Illinois in the raising of oats. The two leading states and the percentage of the total crop which they produced are as follows: Corn—Illinois, 13.3; Iowa, 11. Winter wheat—Kansas, 13.12; Indiana, 8. Spring wheat—Minnesota, 40.7; South Dakota, 20.2. Oats—Iowa, 16.1; Illinois, 15.1. Barley—California, 26.8; Minnesota, 16.8. Rye—Pennsylvania, 19.6, Michigan, 16.2. Buckwheat—New York, 41.8; Pennsylvania, 32.8. Flaxseed—North Dakota, 41.5; Minnesota, 25.1. Rice—Louisiana, 52.1; Texas, 35.7. Potatoes—New York, 13.4; Michigan, 10.4. Hay—New York, 10.4; Pennsylvania, 7.3. Tobacco—Kentucky, 10.4; North Carolina, 10.2. Cotton—Texas, 27.5; Georgia, 13.8.

There have been frequent references in horticultural literature during the past two or three years about ever bearing strawberries, but nothing that seemed to give much promise that they would amount to anything. However, the recent experience of a Pulaski (N. Y.) grower with the new variety seems to indicate that it is something more than a curiosity. He got three pickings of berries after Aug. 15 last, which averaged more than 600 quarts to the acre and brought him 25 cents per quart. The fall or ever bearing strawberry, as it is known, differs from the common varieties in the one respect that it blossoms continuously from June until November. One crop is matured at the usual time in June, and the second crop may be secured by pinching off all blossoms about three weeks before it is desired to have the fruit ripen, when all of the strength of the vines is diverted to the half grown fruit. Those who have tasted the fall matured fruit state that it has fully as fine a flavor as the June product.

A few drops of lemon juice in the water in which rice is boiled will help to keep the kernels whole. Plenty of water is another requisite.

The season is at hand when the neighbors' hens constitute a perplexing problem with the one who takes pride in a well kept flower or vegetable garden.

A few days ago a shipload of dressed sheep were sold on the San Francisco market in prime condition. They were brought under refrigeration from Australia, a distance of 7,000 miles, and paid a duty of 5 cents a pound.

While fish make their homes in water they must have oxygen, which is always found in fresh water. It is a lack of this element that causes the death of fish in many a shallow pond and lake during the winter season when the water freezes to a considerable depth and prevents its purification by contact with the air.

The Eagle dam, located 100 miles north of El Paso, on the Rio Grande, the building of which has already been started, will create, it is claimed, the largest storage reservoir in the world. The dam is to be 265 feet high and 1,400 feet long on top. It will flood an area of 48,000 acres to an average depth of sixty-two feet and will furnish water for the irrigation of 180,000 acres of land.

Patent stump pullers operated by steam have been invented, and many of them are now being used to clear the cut over pine lands of northern Michigan and Wisconsin. The derrick hoist principle is employed in them, and it is said they will pull and pile from two to three acres of stumps in a day. Many thousands of acres of this land are rich and fertile, well suited to general farming, fruit growing, etc., and the new puller is bound to be an improvement over the tedious and expensive methods of clearing land which have prevailed in the past.

There is a very strict social regulation among seals that a mother shall furnish sustenance only to her own young, and because of this every year thousands of baby seals, left motherless by the sealskin traders, perish by starvation. This condition, which threatened extermination of the seals, has been remedied by the discovery of Boatswain J. Thurber of the United States revenue cutter Bear, who has found that by snapping a ligament in the mouths of the young seals and working their gums to aid in the growth of their teeth they can eat solid food and that under this treatment the little fellows thrive very well.

The man who is wise will not only take the precaution of driving a team which he thinks of purchasing for work on the farm, but will insist on the privilege of working them a little before closing the deal. If the owner of the team objects to this arrangement pass them up, for the team may be sound as a dollar, but possess some peculiarity or meanness of disposition which would render them practically worthless as a work team. Neither ability to travel nor good looks cut much figure when a fellow is dead anxious to rush his spring plowing and has to spend half his time trying to coax a balky horse to work. And it is certainly exhaustive of a man's store of piety and patience.

In spite of the vigilance and warnings of the postoffice inspectors, it is estimated that about $50,000 a day is sent to New York city to sharpers who have been selling blue sky to a lot of gullible folks—in other words, selling them stock in mining, oil or other wildcat investment schemes on the strength of outlandish returns on the money invested. The majority of the victims are clerks, schoolteachers and preachers. Anybody laying claim to a fair amount of gray matter will not bite on any investment scheme which promises a larger interest return than 8 or 10 per cent. Another thing that investors would do well to remember is that bona fide investment concerns are not hawking their stock in advertisements at from 10 to 30 cents on the dollar.

As a result of experiments which have been carried on for the past seven years by the federal department of agriculture along the line of acclimatizing and breeding Egyptian cotton from imported seed of the variety known as Mit Afifi two or three types have been developed which give much promise, possessing as much individuality of plant, boll and fiber as newer varieties which have been developed in the Egyptian plant breeding experiments. The experimental work which has been carried on has been the result of a desire to produce in this country this high grade type of Egyptian cotton, 72,617,893 pounds of which were imported during 1909 at a cost of $12,101,000 and which is used solely in the manufacture of the finest goods, especially mercerized and part silk stuffs in which finish and luster are desired. Samples of the acclimatized Egyptian fiber grown last year in the southwest have been pronounced by American spinners to be in every respect equal to the Egyptian grown article of corresponding grades. The details of these experiments are given in bulletin 200, issued recently by the bureau of plant industry.

OFFICIAL WHIPPER ON STAND

Admits Thrashing Training School Boys With Strap.

Coming all the way from Seabrook, Tex., to St. Paul to testify in the Red Wing boys' training school investigation F. G. Kenney, at one time assistant superintendent of the school and the "official whipper" from 1908 until a little more than a year ago, told the joint legislative committee how he had helped bare the backs of boys, place a wet towel upon them and lash them with a leather strap.

"I punished some over the end of a bed, some over a barrel and one or two —perhaps more—over a box," he said.

Shelled corn, grits and water may be all right for the bunch of old Biddies that are being fattened for pie, but if eggs are wanted something that will furnish a protein element will have to be provided—bran, oilmeal, tankage, bran, clover or alfalfa.

An investigation into the probable cause of rust spots appearing on apples shipped from some Pacific coast points made by Professor D. J. O'Gara, fruit disease expert, leads him to the conclusion that the spots in question are due to impurities contained in the arsenate of lead used in spraying the trees and not to any fungous or scale pest.

While they may not be able to analyze the philosophy of it, it is remarkable at how early an age little children seem to acquire a sense and appreciation of what is right, just and fair. Many a parent ignores this faculty in the early years, only to wake up later to a realization of the fact that both the respect and confidence of the child have been forfeited.

The jungle fowl of India, supposed to be a distant cousin of our modern breeds of domestic fowls, follows out her natural instinct and lays a clutch or two of eggs a year, as many at one time as she can effectively cover and incubate. It is because of this natural habit of their early ancestors that the modern flock of hens incline under average conditions to produce 60 rather than 200 eggs in a year.

Until recently plaster was seldom used in the interior finishing of Pacific slope houses, owing to the fact that it so frequently became loose and fell off during the rainy weather. Instead, the rooms were finished with matched sheathing, heavy building paper or cloth and the paper put on over this. Since the introduction of wood fiber plaster it is being quite generally used in the section mentioned.

In a recent statement published by Chief Forester Graves the estimate is made that 84 per cent of the loss from forest fires during the year 1909 was directly traceable to carelessness on the part of settlers in burning their timber clearings and similar carelessness on the part of the railroads through failure to use effective spark arresters. Here is a type of conservation of natural resources that can be put into practice without the necessity of legislative deliberation or executive decree to make it effective.

As the result of a law passed by congress last year it will hereafter be unlawful to offer for sale in territory under federal jurisdiction adulterated or misbranded insecticides or to ship such articles from one state to another. The act specifically mentions paris green and arsenate of lead, the two chemicals most widely used by orchardists. The new law will be a real boon to fruit and vegetable growers, as it will compel manufacturers to properly label their products and enable the purchaser to know exactly what he is paying for.

In Colorado, of mining fame, agriculture today outstrips the mines.

Many daughters—of capable mothers is this especially true—do not accept household responsibilities because they are neither expected nor allowed to do so.

In latitudes where the cotton plant is not killed by annual freezing it attains an age of several years. It bears freely, sometimes two crops in the long tropical season.

Dry farming has its place doubtless, but the hope of many sections of the west lies in irrigation. By it alone can a number of the states attain greatness agriculturally.

In the majority of cases it is the early hatched pullets—March or early April—that make the best winter layers. They begin laying in October and November and get the habit before the cold weather sets in.

The 1910 imports of silk into the United States totaled 25,000,000 pounds and were valued at $70,000,000. It is estimated that from this amount of silk the mills of the country will turn out products valued at $150,000,000.

Whole hearted appreciation of the service which those about us render, whether in business life or the home circle, doesn't cost a red cent, yet meets a longing which every one has and which money alone cannot satisfy.

If your liver is out of whack, instead of paying a fancy price for some booze stimulant and regulator try a sprig of green parsley now and then and tone your system up still further with a daily draft of clean, fresh buttermilk.

The Roosevelt dam on the Salt river, Arizona, to be dedicated by Mr. Roosevelt next March, is a mass of masonry 240 feet high, built at a cost of $6,000,000, which will retain the waters of a lake covering 17,000 acres. This water will be used to irrigate 200,000 acres, with an additional 40,000 acres to be supplied by pumping.

With hog prices at the present level and likely to continue the same or better for some time to come, it is a mighty shortsighted policy for the man who is in the pig raising business seriously not to provide his brood sows with proper shelter, which will keep them dry and comfortable. Tens of thousands of farmers are able to raise but three pigs per sow when they might raise six if they would provide the sows with proper shelter.

It is well to keep market facilities in mind in buying land in a new locality. We learned of an instance not long ago in which the purchaser failed to do this. The land bought was recommended by the agents as especially adapted to fruit raising when the tract being sold was all of eighty miles from a railroad. It makes one smile to think what apples, pears or peaches would look like after they had been "packed" over that distance. The pulp might be good for marmalade, but little else.

This winter season is just the time to let mother take that much thought of and long delayed visit to the "home folks." It will do her more good than may be imagined to get out of the old ruts and will prove the needed tonic, while the responsibility of the household is the very thing needful to develop the latent ability of Mary, who has no opportunity to show what she can do so long as mother is at home and "knows how to do it so much better," and mother's absence will show plainly to father and the boys what her presence means to them.

There are sections in northern Wisconsin where cut-over pine lands can be had at as low as $5 per acre, and for those who are looking for a home on the land they ought to be worth looking into. The soil is for the most part sandy, and while small grains do not thrive crops of early corn, potatoes, clover and fruits do well. The country is one in which dairying could be carried on with advantage and profit. Usually the land in question can be got for $1 per acre down, the balance in five years. The railroad lands in the same locality usually sell for $5.50 per acre and may be got on easy terms.

In view of the fact that it is an enterprise undertaken by a single state the New York barge canal bids fair to be one of the big transportation enterprises of the present generation. When completed the canal will have a length of 442 miles and will extend from the Hudson river at a point 125 miles from the sea to Tonawanda, near Buffalo, on Lake Erie, where the last stretch of the canal will have an elevation of 565 feet. The masonry structures will require 4,250,000 cubic yards of concrete and 112,000,000 cubic yards of earth and silt, while 11,000,000 cubic yards of rock will have to be moved before the canal is completed.

Many of the abandoned farms of New England are being bought up by Slavic immigrants, in some cases whole communities being settled by these people. While the native New Englander is inclined to be prejudiced against his foreign born neighbors, he cannot deny that they make honest, thrifty citizens. The Slavic farmer usually has a large family, and each member has his or her work to do. Even the mother brings her baby into the field. With so many hands working and no help to hire economic independence is assured. Another generation will see these people thoroughly Americanized and valuable citizens.

Ethel Ward
W. C. Spratt

Snow Fall Quelches Prarie Fires.

The snow and sleet which fell the first of week proved beneficial in one respect at least, inasmuch as it put a damper on the prarie fires that have been raging in this vicinity recently.

The gradual evaporation of the snow early this spring had left the ground with hardly any moisture on top and the dead grass and dry brush in its conditions this time of the year furnishes an excellent fuel for a real live prairie fire.

On Sunday evening quite a bad fire was raging about one mile east of this city which illuminated the whole sky and furnished an excellent midnight spectacle and is reported as having done an amount of damage out near Highlanding, Kratka and places where it traversed, traveling to within a mile of this city, but luckily as there was no strong wind, it did not gain much headway, otherwise, it might have proved threatening to the city.

The recent snow fall, it is thought, will furnish enough moisture to insure against any prarie fires doing any damage for some time to come.

Wins Championship Banner.

In the Interscholastic contest of the North Central Minnesota High School Declamatory association which was held at Akeley last Saturday, the championship banner was won by Miss Mona Flesher of the Bemidji high school. Miss Flesher is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Chas H. Flesher, formerly of this city, but now located at Bemidji. The individual prizes were as follows: Alfred Newman, Bemidji, first, serious; John Peterson, Akeley, first, humorous; Miss Mona Flesher, Bemidji, second, humorous; Will Powers, Grand Rapids, second, serious.

REHEARSAL TONIGHT

There will be rehearsal by the Concert and the Junior bands at 7 and 8 o'clock respectively, tonight, in the old city clerk's office in the city hall. Director A. J. Houle earnestly requests of every member to be present.

Time to Improve Roads.

Persons who travel extensively and frequently upon the wagon roads of this county tell us that they have found such roads in an exceptionally good and passable condition, generally speaking, this spring. However, there is room for improvement, as there always is and always will be. At this time, before the beginning of spring work in the fields road work could be done to advantage and with excellent results. "A stitch in time saves nine," and a day's work on the roads now might save a week's work later. That old stand-by of makers of country roads, the split-log drag, should be brought out from its winter quarters and set to work. The horses hitched to it will get, from pulling it over the grades, the exercise needed to harden them up and put them in good shape for the heavier work of plowing and seeding later on. So not only the roads and the traveling public, but the horses as well, will reap a benefit.

Organization of the Split Townships.

When Red Lake county was divided the new county line cut in two a string of townships across the county east and west. Fractions of townships, four by six miles are in Pennington county, and the smaller fractions, two by six miles in size, are in Red Lake county.

At the last meeting of the board of county commissioners official action was taken, organizing the fractions of townships as separate townships or annexing to other townships. The fractions of Polk Centre, Black River and River Falls are to have separate township orgrnizations and the township names are retained. The fraction of the old town of Wyandotte is attached to Emardville and the fraction of Mayfield to Garnes.

Provision has been made for the holding of the first town meeting in each of the newly organized towns of Polk Centre, Black River and River Falls.

Emardville and Garnes are now the two large towns of the county, each being eight by six miles in size. —Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A Good Production.

The "Managing Mildred" Co. played to a small audience at the Auditorium last Saturday evening. The class play which was presented the afternoon and evening previous played to full capacity houses and this accounts for the light house on Saturday evening. The company was composed of some very excellent musicians and singers and as a whole was quite a creditable production. The company which is composed of an orchestra and four entertainers have appeared at the Lyceum Theatre here before, as two separate organizations.

The company drove across the county to Warren Sunday where they played a return engagement having played to a very large and appreciative audience the evening previous to their engagement here.

Hearing Last Week.

The hearing of Thos. Riley, who was arrested here last week charged with entering an express car on the Soo line north of Thief River Falls, mention of which was made last week, was held Saturday morning before L. O. Johnson, justice of the peace. The evidence was such that he was held to the grand jury. His bond was fixed at $400, in default of which he will remain in the custody of the sheriff until the next grand jury meets. The hearing was attended by several of the railroad men, including the express messenger, brakeman and one of the secret service men of the Soo line. Riley claims to be entirely innocent but he will have hard work explaining away some of the evidence when he comes to trial.—Mahnomen Pioneer.

Miss Golda Hill, who is teaching in the Bemidji public schools, arrived in this city Saturday and will spend her Easter vacation at home.

A GOOD PERFORMANCE

Senior Class Play Presented Last Friday Afternoon and Evening Was the Best Ever.

Played to Very Large Houses Both In the Afternoon And Evening.

The Senior Class of the local high school presented its class play the "Red Acre Farm" at the Auditorium last Friday evening playing to almost a full capacity house. The students also gave their production at a children's matinee in the afternoon and was greeted by a large house.

This play is conceded to be one of the best, (if not the best) and the most successful of the class plays ever produced in this city and the students did themselves proud by their excellent work.

The play itself is a most pleasing one, being based on early New England rural life and holds captivating scenes and climaxes, and was certainly done full justice to by the excellent acting of the youthful players.

Another thing that speaks volumes for the students is that the stage setting required for the production of this play was of their own design and make and is a product of the manual training department. All these settings, among them the rustic well, log cabin and fire place were all true to life and has never been excelled by any used by professional troupes in this city.

The cash receipts from this play will be used to defray graduation expenses and to purchase a class memorial for the Lincoln High school.

The troupe goes to St. Hilaire tonight where they will play an engagement.

The graduating class this year is the largest in the history of the schools in this city and consists of thirty-six students, about evenly divided between girls and boys.

Leigh Makes Good Record.

Jess Leigh who officiated as a twirler for the local base ball aggregation the early part of last season, it is almost certain, will be acquired as chief slab artist for the strong Grand Forks Picketts this coming season. He has won a lot of admirers among the fans by reason of his good work the season past and according to reports from Grand Forks the Picketts are almost certain they have secured a regular "prize hog" in the Leigh person.

The Crookston Times in summing up the prospective base ball activities this season remarks in passing:

It has been definitely decided that Jess Leigh, the former Thief River Falls hurler, will be on the slab this season for the Picketts. Leigh is one of the fastest men in the northwest's ranks and is said to be of big league caliber. Last season he pitched against the Picketts in two games, winning from the Pickets on June 19 and holding the Picketts in this game to three hits. In the other game "Merry Widow" Alrick held Thief River to two hits and won the game for the locals. Leigh is also a strong hitter, he having secured the two hits on Alrick the day the Picketts won. His hitting all last season was of the A1 order and he will certainly be a good addition if the dope is right.

Emil Dryfoos In Hospital.

The many friends in this city of Emil Dryfoos, who left here about two months ago for his home in Nebraska will regret to learn that his condition has not improved as rapidly as had been expected.

He is at present confined in the Presbyterian hospital at Omaha, Nebraska, where he has been receiving medical treatment for the last five weeks, and to insure permanent relief from his ailment an operation was found necessary, which was performed last week.

His numerous friends here wish for his speedy recovery and early return to this city.

AIDS RAPID SETTLING

Machine Just Invented Will Pull Stumps and Make Roads at the Same Time.

$25,000 Set Aside by Pennington to Aid in Perfecting Appliance to be Ready April 1.

With a view of clearing lands in Northern Minnesota, Northern Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan to attract farmers to the Northwest and assist them in getting a foothold, President Pennington of the Soo Line has set aside $25,000 to assist in perfecting a stump-pulling machine which carries with it a road making machine. The machine is in the process of making and will be ready about May 1. Models have accomplished work said to be little less than marvelous.

From five to eight acres can be cleared of stumps of the meanest kind in a day, and ten acres can be cleared by the machine at one sitting. The road building machine is an addition to the rear of the stump-pulling machine and makes the road as the machine moves along. As soon as the machine is completed the Soo will start in Price county, Wisconsin. On each forty it is the object of William H. Killen, land and industrial commissioner of the road, to clear ten acres or more, build a road to it, build a small house upon it, and then dig a well, after which it will be offered to the actual settler.

This is a new departure in railroading in the Northwest. Mr. Killen figures that it will cost about $1 a rod to build a good turnpike road as fast as the land ahead is cleared of stumps.

The new machine will clear a space of 1,000 feet ahead of it of stumps, pulling a number of large ones at the same time. The engine is of eighty horsepower and weighs forty tons. After the stumps are pulled toward the machine a derrick picks them up, and this piles stumps thirty feet high. A crew of ten men is required and the cost per acre varies from $10 to $15 while the old way the cost for the same work is from $30 to $40 per acre, and is much slower and harder.

Should Protect Forests.

A campaign or agitation has been stated by the Minnesota Forestry association to secure pressure upon the Minnesota legislature, to insure the passage during the present session of the bill for the protection in the state from devastation by fire. It ought not be necessary to bring any pressure to bear on the legislature to make the passage of that bill certain. Minnesota has had many sad and fearful lessons on the subject. She has seen her natural wealth reduced to ashes by the flames; has seen the homes of hundreds and thousands of her people swept away in the rush of the element; has been called upon to succor the needy whose entire possessions have been swept away by the periodical fires. There have been examples galore of the folly of leaving the great wooded areas unprotected, and one of these examples is so recent and was so fearful that every member of the legislature is familiar with it.

The bill now before the legislature provides for an efficient supervision of the forests and for a patrol that would make certain the extinguishing of any incipient blaze before it reached uncontrollable proportions. That is just what is needed in Minnesota. To fail to provide such protection would be the rankest folly.—Duluth Herald.

Many Steam Outfits.

Several Steam and Gasoline plowing outfits have reached the city this past week, and will do their share in converting our praries into cultivated field. The scarcity of labor, both men and teams has been a serious hinderance to the more rapid development of the newer districts.

Cupid Had Buck Fever.

A very sad case of insanity has just come to light in connection with the story of Paul P. Sorenson, who was committed to Fergus Falls from Red Lake county and was taken down by Sheriff Fellman of that county. Sorenson has been a resident of this section for years and is well connected. He had a farm near Oakeley, Red Lake county, and was well-to-do. He had been engaged to a young lady and was to have been married last fall, but she jilted him.

From that time he was a changed man. About Christmas time he began acting very queerly and a brother at McIntosh took him into his family, but all efforts to get his mind away from his sorrow proved futile, and he went from bad to worse till at last the sight of a woman made him violent and, as he is a big husky fellow standing six feet high, he had to be sent away. He was as tractable as a child till he saw a woman, when he would rave wildly, and it required several men to hold him. He apparently wanted to tear them to pieces, the faithlessness of the girl he had loved having turned to the most insatiable hatred and it was feared he would kill some one if he was not placed in an asylum. He had to be securely strapped when taken away, as no matter where he saw a woman he became excited and thought of nothing apparently but his own grief and wanted vengeance —Crookston Times.

Mrs. Fontain dead.

Last Friday morning at 6:30 o'clock occurred the death of Mrs. James Fontaine at the age of 23 years, after an illness from the dreaded disease consumption. Mrs. Fontaine was taken ill with the disease about six months ago and has been confined to the bed for three months.

She leaves a husband to mourn the early and untimely departure of a loving wife and a number of other relatives in the city.

The funeral services were held from the Catholic church last Monday morning and the remains laid to rest in the Catholic Cemetery.

'MOST READY FOR WORK

Spring Work In the Fields Is Taking on Active Form.

Fine Condition of Soil This Spring Bids Fair to Produce Bouncer Crops

With favorable weather conditions prevailing, in a few days ought to see the usual spring work taking an active form in the fields. In many places the work had already been commenced on a light scale but owing to the recent moisture this work was abandoned for the time being.

From the farmers standpoint, conditions were never better than they are at present. Last year's early harvest and the excellent weather conditions permitted an unusual amount of fall plowing to be done in good season.

The winter's snow, which was heavier than usual has all been absorbed by the ground and the fields are in excellent condition for seeding. The indications are that the acreage will be very much increased this season.

To Improve Local Fishing.

Congressman Steenerson's attention has been called to the fact that the people of Manitoba, Canada, have built dams in the Red River of the North without providing the same with suitable fishways, thus obstructing the passage of fish up stream and that, as a result, the fish supply in the Red River of the North, which formerly was abundant, has been practically exhausted.

Mr. Steenerson has addressed a communication to the State Department calling attention to this matter, and requesting the department to take the matter up with the British government in order that the grievance may be remedied and it is hoped that favorable action will result.

This is a very important matter to people of this entire section of the country, as both the Red River and the Red Lake river are effected. The supply of fish in Lake Winnipeg is very abundant, and until the dams mentioned were built without fishways, the fishing was good in both rivers. Of late there has been no fishing to speak of excepting a few catfish, bullheads, and occasionally a sturgeon, the latter being very scarce, but very large when caught, one having been caught here last year weighing over 300 pounds.

If the Canadian government can be induced to order fishways put in, and it is believed such an arrangement will be made, it will result in good fishing throughout this territory in the two rivers, and in addition to the added sport available, means a valuable asset in the actual resources of this section.

In his efforts, Congressman Steenerson will be given the hearty co operation of the commercial clubs of this section and other bodies and individuals in every way possible, as the subject is recognized as of very great importance. —Crookston Times.

Which Roofing Shall I Use?

Answer that question for good and all. When you buy prepared roofing you expect years of wear and satisfaction. Here is the way to insure getting it. A simple way—an easy way and a quick way to find out just exactly how any prepared roofing will stand up under ten years of the hardest kind of wear on a building.

First, get our book from the dealer. It's called "Ten Years Wear in Ten Minute Tests." Then—get samples of any prepared roofings you are considering and subject them all to the six tests contained in the book. These tests correspond to ten years of extreme weather and emergency conditions. Choose the roofing that stands them best. It will last longest on your building.

If you really want to know which roofing is best, don't fail to include in your tests. We furnish the way of knowing. We furnish the samples. You do the rest. Decide for yourself which roofing you want to use. Base your decision on the way the roofing is going to wear. Don't let any one's talk influence you. Just choose the roof that makes good best.

You won't be sure of money's worth in roofing until you try these tests. Ask or write the dealer whose name appears below. He'll furnish the book and samples.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

FAVORS OUSTING WHITTIER

Position of Majority of Legislative Investigating Committee on Training School Affair.

After prolonged discussion of the evidence introduced the joint legislative committee appointed to probe the conduct of affairs at the state training school for boys at Red Wing has failed to reach a decision. With the vote standing 4 to 2 on the question of discharging Superintendent Whittier and at least three of his subordinates there remains to be determined the most mooted problem of the entire probe. This may be settled at the next committee meeting. It may not be settled for weeks.

The committee, in preparing its report, reviews at some length its deductions from the evidence. Then it sets forth its recommendations, which will be transmitted to the house and senate and in turn to the state board of control. The points so far agreed upon follow:

First—Abolishment of the "whipping machine" and the wet towel.

Second—Abolishment of punishment for boys over seventeen years of age.

Third—Immediate transfer to the reformatory at St. Cloud of all boys who are found guilty of infraction of rules sufficient to warrant their transfer.

Fourth—Prescription by the state board of control of a set of rules under which, and only under which, boys may receive corporal punishment.

Fifth—Perfection of a more satisfactory system whereby the officers of the school will be brought in closer relationship with the boys and the boys with the officers.

The committee is not ready to recommend the absolute abolition of all corporal punishment, because its members believe humane whippings for some inmates of the school almost a necessity.

DR. NORTHROP STEPS DOWN

Retires From Presidency of the University of Minnesota.

Concluding his valedictory to his students with prayer and in tones that faltered from deep emotion, Dr. Cyrus Northrop laid down the mantle of the presidency of the University of Minnesota and became president emeritus.

More than 1,500 persons crowed into the chapel, which has a seating capacity of only 900, to hear the retiring president say farewell to students and faculty. Hundreds of co-eds, as his words fell, sobbed aloud, and even men felt tugs at the heartstrings.

The address, cheered to the echo at intervals, and interpolated with outward expressions of emotion that the president could not repress, drew the tribute of absolute attention. Dr. Northrop's remarks abounded with expressions of love and gratitude to both students and faculty, and he seemed especially sincere as he told the students of the happiness he has always enjoyed as the head of the institution.

HOUSE PASSES RECALL BILL

Measure Differs Slightly From One Adopted by Senate.

Thomas Kneeland's recall bill passed the state house of representatives by a vote of 65 to 32. The bill does not differ materially from the John Moonan bill passed in the senate last week, which provides for recall when a petition is filed with the secretary of state signed by 25 per cent of the electors in the district.

The senate put in two and one-half hours' hard work on the calendar and as a result succeeded in passing forty-seven of the 103 bills pending.

FATAL FIGHT IN THE WOODS

One Man Killed and Another Injured in Claim Shanty.

Edward A. Davis, a woodsman, killed Charles Taylor and laid William Condon unconscious with blows from a canthook at Taylor's claim shanty near Brimson. Davis was arrested and taken to Duluth. He asserts he acted in self defense. All three of the men had been drinking. The spree culminated in a fight.

It is said that Condon will recover, but he is seriously injured.

Young Fishermen Drowned.

Carl Bushman, eighteen years of age, and Norman Nelson, twenty-four years old, were drowned in Lake Sarah, near Tracy, while fishing. A farmer noticed the boat floating keel up and gathering a number of neighbors with boats they searched the bottom of the lake adjacent to the boat. Both bodies were recovered. Both boys are sons of widowed mothers.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The 701 state banks of Minnesota, on March 7, showed a total increase in resources of $12,748,000 over the corresponding date a year ago. According to a comparative statement of the resources of the banks, issued March 29 by Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banking, the resources of the banks under his jurisdiction are $128,434,794. On March 29, 1910, the resources of the then 654 banks were $116,564,000.

Most of the small logging contractors in Northern Minnesota have broken camp and hundreds of lumberjacks have left for Duluth and the Twin Cities. Several of the larger contractors are still shipping logs, but only those who expect to continue their work a part of the summer. The breakup came much earlier than expected. The cut has been the heaviest in many years.

Willmar is the objective point of the interurban line which is to be built this year from Mankato to St. Peter, if nothing happens. The line will strike north from St. Peter, leaving the valley of the Minnesota river, and will touch at Norseland, New Sweden and other points. From Willmar it is proposed to go to the Twin Cities.

Half a million dollars is to be spent in Minneapolis by Eastern capital in the erection of a modern fireproof cold storage plant with 140,000 to 150,000 square feet of floor space. The cost of the site will be in addition to this amount.

James McCutcheon has been appointed superintendent of the Minneapolis free employment bureau of the state department of labor. He is sixty-three years old and well known in union labor circles.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Rev. N. Frykman, sixty-eight years old, for many years a pastor in the Swedish Evangelical Covenant, is dead at Minneapolis. Mr. Frykman, although known widely as a preacher, is more noted as a composer of hymns. His hymns are very popular in Sweden and are prominent in the official hymn book of the Swedish Covenant of America.

Sven Oftedal, one of the foremost educators in the Northwest, is dead at Minneapolis. For nearly forty years he has been actively connected with Augsburg seminary, during which time he was its strength and inspiration, and in addition he gave Minneapolis ten years' service as school director and ten years more as library director.

Marcus Wing, a pioneer resident of Olmsted county, and in his day prominent in the affairs of the county, dropped dead in the rear of his home at Rochester, a victim of apoplexy of the heart, with which he had been sufferer for a number of years. Mr. Wing was born in Michigan and was sixty-nine years old at the time of his death.

John C. Toberer, one of the first settlers of New Ulm, is dead. Mr. Toberer reached New Ulm in 1856 and conducted a jewelry store there continuously from 1863 up to the time of his last illness. He was one of the defenders of the city during the Indian massacre of 1862.

Joseph Schaaf, a veteran of the Civil war and a resident of Minneapolis since the early fifties, is dead at St. Alexander's hospital, New Ulm, at the advanced age of eighty-three. Mr. Schaaf resided in St. Paul until a short time ago.

Charles E. Jones, chairman of the board of county commissioners of Blue Earth county, dropped dead at Mapleton of heart trouble, aged fifty-three. He served on the county board seven years.

Chris Houston, county commissioner and resident of Polk county for twenty-seven years, died suddenly of heart trouble at Crookston. He was fifty-seven years old.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Andrew J. Wheeler, a Great Western engineer, was caught in his cab in a wreck of a Chicago Great Western passenger train near Cannon Falls and died several hours later as a result of shock from his injuries. His right leg was broken and he received severe cuts about the abdomen and head. He was about fifty-three years old and was a pioneer in the service of the Chicago Great Western road.

Putting a revolver to her right temple, Miss Ruth Grow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grow of Hector, this state, and a freshman at Hamline university, shot herself in the retiring room of the Milwaukee station at Minneapolis. She died six hours later. Nothing definite is advanced to account for the suicide.

While walking the tracks Frank Caldwell, a farmer living near Ashby was struck and killed by a fast train. It is said that Caldwell was deaf and did not hear the approaching train.

P. August Bark, manager of a Minneapolis stone quarry, was instantly killed when a buggy in which he was riding was struck by a street car.

Levi Ketchum, a farmer, hung himself in jail at Marshall. He was arrested for shooting at his wife's son with a shotgun.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

The official Government tests show Royal Baking Powder to be an absolutely pure and healthful grape cream of tartar baking powder, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

SUICIDE SHOOTS HIS WIFE

Duluth Man, Before Fatal Wound, Turns Revolver Upon Spouse.

Nick Boudreau is dead at Duluth by his own hand, and his wife, whom he shot before turning the gun on himself, is at St. Luke's hospital, perhaps fatally wounded. The Boudreaus have three small children.

Mrs. Boudreau is shot in the neck. The couple separated several months ago and since then he has been away and the woman has supported the family by common work. Boudreau went to the house after the wife and children had retired and fired three shots at his wife.

Boudreau shot himself in the temple. He died soon after he was taken to the hospital.

ARMED DEPUTIES GUARD MURDERER

Sheriff Fears Attempt at Lynching Will Be Made.

Threats have been freely made to lynch Martin O'Malley, in jail at Le Sueur Center under sentence of death for killing two stepchildren. Patrick Keogh, sheriff of Le Sueur county, has armed guards posted about the jail with a supply of guns and ammunition on hand sufficient to withstand a siege. He talked to the governor for some time over the telephone. The convicted murderer, O'Malley, is kept in solitary confinement, handcuffed, and has to be put to sleep with drugs. He has also refused to eat for days at a time and in the opinion of the sheriff is crazy.

The sheriff stated that the wave of feeling against O'Malley is widespread throughout all of the county in which the crime was committed and that open threats have been made upon the streets of Le Sueur Center. He said also that any ablebodied man with a sledge could break through the prison wall in ten minutes. The town is apparently quiet, but the O'Malley case, it is said, is the chief topic of conversation upon the streets and in the lounging places. He said also that the governor had promised him protection from the militia if needed.

REAPPORTIONMENT UP AGAIN

Question Occupies Attention of Senate for Brief Period.

The ghost of reapportionment appeared in the senate, lingered for a while—just long enough to see its doom forthcoming—then it flitted away to oblivion.

Clinton Robinson's joint resolution ratifying the action of congress in adopting an amendment to the federal Constitution authorizing a tax on incomes passed the house and was sent to the senate. There was no debate. The vote was 96 to 0.

PRICE FIXED AT $4 AN ACRE

Ceded Indian Lands in Minnesota to Be Opened.

Ceded Chippewa Indian lands to the extent of 43,000 acres, lying in Red Lake, Marshall, Polk and Pennington counties in this state, will be opened for settlement April 15, and for entry May 15.

The price fixed to settlers is $4 an acre, of which one-fifth must be paid down, while the balance must be paid in five equal annual payments.

PEOPLE TO ELECT SPEAKER

Novel Bill Introduced in the State Legislature.

With the written consent of the governor a bill was introduced in the state legislature providing for submission of a constitutional amendment whereby the speaker of the house in the Minnesota legislature shall be elected at large by popular vote, and not chosen by the body over which he will preside.

Vincent Succeeds Northrop.

Dr. George E. Vincent, recently chosen president of the University of Minnesota to succeed Dr. Cyrus Northrop, has assumed his duties. He was loudly cheered by the students on his first appearance as head of the institution.

THE LIME-SULPHUR SPRAY.

With both landscape gardeners and horticulturists the lime-sulphur spray is being used with increasing satisfaction as a substitute for the bordeaux mixture for shrubs and fruit trees while in a dormant condition. Not only does the lime-sulphur spray check fungous diseases, such as apple scab, leaf spot, leaf curl, etc., but it will kill the San Jose scale, the minute parasitic insect which is generally distributed over the country. If applied just before the buds burst in the spring the spray will also destroy many eggs of the several varieties of aphides. If one is in a section where much spraying is done much trouble can be saved by buying the ready made lime-sulphur spray, which should be diluted in about twelve times its volume of water. If this cannot be obtained the spray material can be made according to the following formula: Forty pounds unslaked lime, twenty pounds sulphur, fifteen pounds salt and sixty gallons water. Take ten pounds of lime and twenty pounds of sulphur and boil in ten gallons of water from one and a half to two hours, until the sulphur is completely dissolved, which will be indicated by the liquid turning a clear amber color. Slake the balance of the lime and to it add the salt. When this is dissolved add it to the lime and sulphur solution and boil from thirty to forty-five minutes longer. Add enough hot water to make the sixty gallons and apply to trees or shrubs while hot. To get best results the spraying should be thoroughly done, so that all parts of the trees will be reached. This spray is quite caustic to the human skin, and this effect may be in a measure counteracted by washing the face and hands before beginning the spraying in a weak solution of vinegar. In any case it is well to use gauntlet gloves and a broad brimmed hat to shelter the face. It should be remembered that the above spray is for trees and shrubs in a dormant condition only and will defoliate them and ruin blossoms or fruit if applied after they have started to grow. For use during the growing season the self boiled lime-sulphur solution is used and in a much more dilute form than the one described.

WHY IT PAID.

From time to time during the past three or four years the writer of these notes has made mention of the benefits to be got from tiling low and wet land. For those who know from their own or others' experiences the benefit of making such improvement further evidence would hardly seem necessary. We give the following concrete case of the advantage of tiling for the benefit of those who are still somewhat skeptical about the matter. The farmer in question owned a little less than a section of land, one-third of which, or about ninety-five acres, was too low to raise anything but swamp grass and weeds. Barring the small amount of pasturage which this furnished and the meager cutting of wild hay got from the edges, there had been no revenue from it for years. At last the owner got interested in the subject of tiling and under a competent engineer laid out a drainage system which cost him in the neighborhood of $2,000. Last spring he sowed to flax the reclaimed area, and when the crop was sold he found that this first crop paid for the improvement, which amounted to $20.10 per acre for the land drained, and left him, besides, $15 per acre, or $1,425, which would have been a fair revenue if he hadn't paid out anything for tiling at all. There are literally millions of acres of the richest kind of land that can and should be redeemed in this same way and which will be reclaimed when the owners wake up to the benefits of tiling.

CORN WITHOUT CULTIVATION.

A yield of 125 bushels of corn per acre was raised under rather unique conditions the past season by a farmer we read of the other day. The land in question—a small tract—was fall plowed sod. The owner put the soil in good shape last spring and planted corn. For some reason the seed was slow in germinating, and, thinking it would not sprout at all, he straddled the rows already planted and put in as much more. To his surprise, when the rains and warmer weather came on he found both plantings germinating nicely. The rows were so close together that he could not cultivate, so he let things jingle, planning to cut the whole for fodder. At harvest time he husked this field and gathered from it at the rate of 125 bushels per acre. The farmer doubtless wonders, in view of this yield, whether what he has been taught about proper stand and benefit of cultivation is correct after all. Two points that serve to explain the situation, however, are richness of soil and abundance of humus.

England imported 2,201,290,440 eggs in 1910, which cost $35,459,254, or an average of 19.2 cents per dozen. It would be worth knowing what these eggs cost the consumer when served on his table.

In any section of the country where land will produce two crops of clover or three or four cuttings of alfalfa one need not be afraid of paying from $100 to $200 per acre for land, as the growing of these legumes will give a generous interest return on the investment price.

Owing to facts which have recently been made very plain relative to the transmission of disease germs, the precaution urged by health authorities of having school children provided with individual drinking cups can no longer be looked upon as a fad, but is a sane and highly essential safeguard to health.

After May 1, as a result of new import regulations, a good deal of Chinese tea that has been quite uniformly green will assume a variety of colors—green, yellow and brown and intermediate shades. The uniformly green color which has characterized the cheaper grades of popular teas in the past has been due to the use by the Chinese of a harmless dye.

Recent experiments which have been made in the matter of using sows of different ages for breeding purposes show that, while a young sow, well cared for, will average seven pigs to the litter, the mature sow five or six years old will average between nine and ten to the litter. It has also been found that the offspring of mature sows weigh 12 per cent more at birth than those of young sows, grow more rapidly and are stronger.

There are a good many farmers who will likely have the beet growing proposition put up to them for the first time this spring. Before signing a contract to grow ten, twenty or thirty acres, as the case may be, better talk the proposition over not only with the special agent of the company soliciting the contracts, but with some fellow who has had a turn at the business or, better, two or three of them if possible, some who have done well at it and some who have not. After canvassing the situation you will be able to decide intelligently whether it will be worth while to take hold of the business.

It will soon be time to cut the early potatoes for planting. If they are at all scabby they should be treated as follows: Put potatoes in sack (before cutting) and suspend for about two hours in a solution made by the addition of half a pint of 40 per cent formalin to fifteen gallons of water. The same solution may be used for several batches of potatoes. On removing from sack spread potatoes out to dry. They should then be cut and planted within a few hours. To get best results potatoes should not be planted this season on land which produced scabby potatoes last season. An entirely new piece of land or that which has not been in potatoes for several years is preferable.

The Plymouth Rock, perhaps the most popular breed of American fowls, if numbers are taken as a criterion, was originated by Mr. Upham of Connecticut, who crossed a white Brahmapootra cockerel on a black hen and this cross on a Dominique. The breeder's purpose was to produce an all around general purpose fowl. When this cross bred true to type Mr. Upham exhibited it under the name of Plymouth Rock, because he thought it appropriate that the first distinctly American breed should be named for the spot on which the first settlers of New England landed. In subsequent years, as a result of other crosses, the White and Buff Plymouth Rocks have been developed.

It is entirely misleading when the promoters of beet sugar factories have articles published in which the claim is made that larger crops can be grown after beets than after any other crop. While beets do not pull on the soil as do oats, timothy hay, wheat or cabbage, the fact remains that they exhaust it nevertheless and are not soil renovators in any sense as are the several members of the legume family. There is this to be said for beet growing, however, that the very thorough preparation of the soil and frequent tillage during the growing season leaves it in the best possible condition for a succeeding crop. Used in a rotation with corn, oats and clover, beet culture has much to commend it.

In way of proving that it is the way the soil is handled rather than the length of time it has been cropped that chiefly determines its fertility it may be mentioned that, while the average yield of potatoes for the United States as a whole is but about eighty or ninety bushels per acre yearly, the English peasant who makes a business of raising tubers frequently secures a yield of 800 bushels per acre, while in Belgium, where the most intensive kind of soil tillage is followed, the acre yield sometimes runs as high as 1,000 bushels. The difference between the American and the Belgian farmer seems to lie chiefly in the fact that the latter views the fertility of the soil as the principal he has invested and that it is his prime duty to keep it unimpaired through renewal of fertilizer elements, so that its productive capacity will not be lessened.

Any one living in this or any other community, who is disatisfied with conditions and is continually knocking is usually one, who has neither the ability nor the inclination to better these conditions, of which he complains. Such a one owes it, as a duty, both to himself and the community to get out, and make room for a man.

The Telephone Bill referred to in our last issue did pass the house with no less than thirteen of the objectionable clauses cut out. In its present form, it is in no way inimical to the interests of this city and contains some very good provisions. The statement that Mr. O Neil was opposed to the best interests of the city, was as unkind as it was untrue. Mr. O Neil has unselfishly devoted too much time and ability to the service of the public, for such a charge to be taken seriously by those who know him and are possessed of ordinary sense.

A number of conventions will be held in this city this summer, and there will be for various reasons, a large influx of strangers. They will judge us, not for what we might be, but for what we are.

No town, no matter how prosperous, appeals to a stranger, unless it is clean and tidy. It is therefore the manifest duty of everyone to see that his surroundings are at once made as clean and sanitary as possible. Sweeping or dumping refuse into the streets may be a convenient method of getting rid of it, but is an unlawful one, and advertises the guilty one as lacking a proper perception of the fitness of things and what is customary among those who live in well regulated communities.

Grow Rhubarb

Rhubarb or pieplant can be grown in all parts of the state. It is splendid for sauce and pies, and comes early in the season, before any other fruit. It is easy to grow, easy to gather, and easy to make into sauce or pie. Roots can be had from nursery men, and are cheap. Prepare a bed for it by plowing or spading the ground deep and fertilizing it with rotted manure. Into this set a few roots rather deep. Then keep the weeds and grass away from the plants to a distance of four feet. One planting will answer, as new stalks will come up year after year. All the attention the plant will need, will be to keep the weeds away and to add some manure occassionally, and once in three or four years divide and reset the roots, the overcrowding of which tends to diminish the size of the stalks.—N. Dak. Agr. College.

Best Varieties of Potatoes for Minnesota.

Minnesota potatoes are of two classes, table stock and seed stock. The seed stock is mostly grown in the Red River Valley. The varieties are Ohio, a pink oval potatoe, and Red Bliss Triumph (commonly called Triumph), a round red potato.

Most of the potatoes grown in other parts of the state are for table stock. The best early variety is Early Ohio. The best late commercial varieties are those of the Rural type, such as Rural New Yorker No. 2, Carman No. 3, and Sir Walter Raleigh. They are all smooth, round, white potatoes although they have many medium long potatoes among them. These varieties can be distinguished from all other commercial varieties of this state, by their characteristic purple blossoms with white pointed petals, and by the purplish color on the stems.

A good late variety to try is Carman No. 1, a white, round to medium long potato, with white flowers and no purple on the stems. Norcross is practically the same thing. These two are quite late as varieties of the Rural type, and more likely to be useful in the northern sections of the state, where a late variety is wanted.

The above late varieties are preferable to the Burbank, for which many other long late varieties are now substituted.—A. R. Kohler, Minn. University Farm.

Rolf Hammer Concert

Brage chorus has been very fortunate in securing the famous Chicago singer Rolf Hammer as soloist at the Red River Valley Scandinavian Singing association's coming saengerfest at this place June 23, 24 and 25. His touring with the Christiania students in this country a few years ago as soloist speaks perhaps more than any thing else for his ability, but for the special benefit of the scandinavian public we give here the criticism over his last concert in Scandia Hall April 1st:

–Det er altid en Fest at høre Rolf Hammer synge. Hr. Hammer er og blir en magnetisk Sanger, som kan holde sit Publikum i Aande. Han er en forstaaelsesfuld Tolker af Sjælens brogede Stemningsliv.

En af første Range Kunster paa Sangens Omraade maa være i Besiddelse af mange sjeldne Egenskaber: han maa ha en fin og lydhør Toneopfattelse, ægte musikalsk Følelse, æstetisk Sans, god Stemme ikke at glemme, og hans Textbehandling maa paa det nærmeste være uden Plet og Lyde.

Hammer besidder disse Egenskaber i høi Grad. Den største Vanskelighed for en Sanger, nota bene en virkelig Sanger, er at levere Texten klar og tydelig og endnu at tilfredsstille Fordringerne til ægte, god Sang. For at kunne eie en fuldkommen, feilfri Diktion kræves der af Sangeren baade Aandens og Tungens Kultur.

Hammers Text er distinkt og ren og kan høres klart og tydeligt i de fjerneste Kroge af Rummet.

Disposes of Business Interests.

A deal was perfected last week whereby Fred Ewald and Sig Backen become owners of the "Eagle's Nest" saloon on 3rd street, having bought the property from Emil Griebstein. The new owners took possession last Monday morning.

Mr. Griebstein has been engaged in business here for a number of years and will take a two months' trip to Oregon and Colorado by way of recreation this spring, after which he will return to this city. He is undecided as yet as to what he will engage in in the future.

Company Inspected.

A meeting was held at the high school assembly room Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing the advisability of organizing a local anti-tuberculosis assn. Mr. Christopher Easton sec'y. of the state anti-tuberculosis assns was present and gave an interesting talk on the work that is being done by the state assn. and also by the different county assn's.

A Pennington county anti-tuberculosis assn. was organized and officers elected. President, Mr. E. A. Mostue, Vice Pres O. F. Melby, Sec. and Treas. Clara Backe, membership committee: Rev. Smith, Mrs. J. M. Bishop and P. Engelstad.

Liturature and exhibits will also be distributed thruout the county and it is the intention of the association to hire a competent nurse to spend her time entirely among the sick.

Until a few years ago the bulk of the world's supply of sulphur was got from the vicinity of the Italian volcanoes, but today the greater part comes from beneath the prairies of Louisiana, and only hot water and compressed air are used in the mining process. The Italian sulphur in its natural state contains 50 per cent of impurities, but the Louisiana product tests 99 per cent. Boiling water is forced down the space between the ten and six inch pipes which extend to the bed. This turns the sulphur to a liquid, and it is then pumped up through the smaller pipes by means of compressed air and flows into vats 350 feet long, 250 feet wide and 40 feet deep. Here it cools and hardens and when desired for shipment is broken up with hand picks and shoveled into cars like coal. Some of the wells in the section mentioned produce 500 tons daily.

There is probably no product or by-product of the farm that furnishes protein in a more palatable or valuable form than skimmilk. Especially is this the case when considering rations for calves, pigs and poultry. It is because of this fact that dairying has so much to commend it as a type of farming and why hog raising dovetails in with it so nicely as a profitable side line. Under such system of management there is carried out very simply and effectively a type of conservation which means more to the permanent welfare of the country than any of the somewhat spectacular and faraway but no less worthy forms of conservation which are just now engaging public attention. Dairying means conservation of soil fertility for the simple reason that with a ton of butter worth [illegible] there is removed from the farm but 50 cents' worth of fertilizing elements, while in the case of raw products like corn, oats and wheat it runs from $12 to $16 worth.

It has been ascertained by careful scientific investigation that one out of every twenty-five typhoid fever patients continues, even after recovery, to be a typhoid carrier. This germ reproduction sometimes goes on for years, and the fact noted is doubtless responsible for many a seemingly inexplicable typhoid fever epidemic.

If plans afoot are carried out the school children of Kansas City, Mo., will assist in the planting of 100,000 catalpa trees on Arbor day, which was instituted by J. Sterling Morton, a former secretary of agriculture. This planting will have value not only because the trees need planting, but because the little people will thus have a greater interest aroused in a very practical and helpful form of conservation.

The Price-Campbell cotton picking machine, which was operated successfully on a number of southern plantations last season, is said to possess an almost human ingenuity, its steel fingers selecting the ripe from the unripe bolls and reaching beneath the branches and getting bolls that are hidden. A comparison of the hand and machine picked cotton at the mill shows that the latter contains less waste than the former, while in the field the machine picks as clean as the average negro help. In amount the new picker does the work in a day of from twenty to thirty hands.

One On The Great Northern

The following tale as related by "one of them" tells about a singular incident happening on the G. N. Monday.

"Three hoboes were on their way from Thief River Falls to St. Hilaire and were yet about half a mile from town when they met a freight. They were discussing the possibility of "nailin' it" when the coupling on the second car from the caboose broke and let the car and caboose loose from the train. The freight drew rapidly away from the caboose which was soon going at so slow a rate that the conductor and breakman came out to see what was the matter. Chagrined at being left in the lurch, they climbed up on top of the caboose and began waving their arms frantically at the receding train. They found that that did not stop it, so they went in the caboose to wait till it came back after them from Thief River Falls."

Circulated A Petition

A petition was circulated last week by the local Socialists which will be used to corroborate and strengthen a resolution that is to be introduced in congress by Victor L. Berger, the Socialist congressman, from Milwaukee, asking that the U. S. troops be removed from the Texan boarder, and not take part in the intervention in the recent trouble in Mexico.'

The petition contends that the recent mobolization of troops near the Mexican boarder was entirely uncalled for and expresses its sympathy with the insurrectos in what they term "a fight for freedom."

The petition was signed by 250 signers, and was forwarded to Congressman Berger Tuesday.

Similar petitions have been circulated by the Socialists in every city, and forwarded to Washington.

ORCHARD HEATING.

The question of heating orchards during frosty nights to prevent a destruction of the bloom has passed beyond the experimental stage, and this year every level headed orchardist who lives in a latitude that is likely to be visited by a spring frost when the trees are in bloom should make preparations at once to safeguard himself against frost damage. Where it can be procured at a price of from 4 to 6 cents per gallon crude petroleum will serve the purpose as well or better than any other material and has the advantage that, being in a covered pot, it is not rendered useless by a rain, as is quite often the case with wood or litter of several kinds. There are several good oil burners on the market, and those made without soldered joints are preferable. Experience has shown that about fifty burners should be used per acre and so set that the wind will blow the smoke and heat from them into the limbs of the trees. In a majority of cases the critical—coldest—time during a night in which frost occurs is between 3 and 6 a. m., and the burners should be held in readiness until the time mentioned. Frequently conditions prevailing in the early evening will indicate a frost later, but a change of wind may prevent it. Two or three thermometers of a good make should be stationed through the orchard so as to keep tab on the temperature. It is well to remember that both apple and peach blossoms in full bloom will stand from four to five degrees of frost without serious damage; hence if only two or three degrees of frost threaten it will not be necessary to make more than a smudge on the east side of the orchard just before sunup so as to prevent a too rapid thawing of the blossoms. Stumps, cordwood, brush and other litter have also been used with good results, fewer fires being required with materials making a larger blaze and giving more heat. In some of the orange-growing sections of California orchards of from fifty to a hundred acres have been protected by driving through them in the early morning hours low wagons bearing fires so fed as to make dense smudges. Whatever method be followed in protecting the orchard from frost, preparations for heating or smudging should be made well in advance so that one will not be taken unawares. Instances are numerous where the money spent in orchard heating has been returned manifold in the crop return of a single season.

TEACHING THE CALF TO DRINK.

It is amusing sometimes to see the somewhat lengthy dissertations on teaching the calf how to drink, as if it were a matter of considerable difficulty. There are a few simple precautions that make the matter relatively easy—at least the writer has found them so in his own experience. In the first place, the calf will learn to drink the more quickly if it hasn't acquired the habit of sucking. It is well to take the little chap away from the mammy after it has her udder cleaned out in good shape. In the case of inexperienced persons the job is aggravated by going at it wrong way to. It is well to be friendly with the hungry little bovine, and with this idea in view straddle its back, give it two fingers and when it has got a good grip on them gently lower the head into the pail, keeping the fingers far enough apart so that the milk will pull between them. Keep the little brute's nostrils above the milk line and when it is getting a good draft of milk withdraw the fingers. It will shortly want something to suck besides its tongue, and the fingers will have to be returned to the mouth, but gone at in this way it will not be long before the calf will drink in an entirely satisfactory way.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR FEEDING STEERS.

The past winter saw the first sack of cottonseed meal shipped into the section in which the writer lives. It costs laid down $34.50 per ton, which is about a dollar less than the price of linseed oil meal, and this notwithstanding the fact that the chemical analysis shows that the former feed contains nearly 10 per cent more protein than the latter. This makes a cheap and excellent source of protein, while numerous experiments which have been made show that, given in a proper ration with corn, about one to ten, feeding animals do exceptionally well on it. The feeder who is trying this cottonseed meal for the first time is also feeding with it equal parts of alfalfa, which is a prepared feed made of ground alfalfa leaves and stems and molasses. This contains a trifle less than 20 per cent of protein and costs about $5 per ton laid down. Notwithstanding the high price at which they are sold, the use of these protein concentrates makes possible a more economical ration than if corn should be used exclusively.

There is nothing in the line of things to eat that is nicer than a fine fresh egg and nothing that is worse than one that is "off color."

So far as his ever being of any use in the world, a small boy might as well tie a forty pound rock to his neck and jump into the nearest pond as to let the cigarette habit get its clutches on him.

In climates sufficiently mild for outdoor rose culture there are probably no roses that bloom more profusely and beautifully than the Killarney and Caroline Testout, and for this reason they are especially adapted for hedge and border uses.

Flower lovers who last fall took the pains to secure hyacinth, narcissus and daffodil bulbs are just now receiving a hundredfold return in the wealth of bloom and fragrance from these responsive and delicate plants. Especially are they prized because they come at a time when there is a dearth of other bloom.

The farmers of Denmark carry on not only remarkably successful cooperative dairies and creameries, but bacon factories. The output of the latter runs into millions annually and are so economically managed that the members realize 4 cents more per pound for their bacon than the hog raisers of any other country.

It will be well for those who have kept canna bulbs through the winter for the first time to inspect them and see what condition they are in. If their vitality seems to have been impaired or they seem too dry it will be a good idea to pot them at once and put them where it is light and cool, under which conditions they will sprout, but will not make much growth.

The University of Missouri has six registered Jersey cows that produced 4,314 pounds of butter in a year, or an average of 719 pounds per cow. This butter sold at an average price of 32 cents per pound, which meant a gross average return per cow for butter alone of $230. If these cows gave milk testing 6 per cent they gave 71,900 pounds of it in the same period, which was worth at 50 cents per hundredweight $359, or nearly $60 apiece.

The flesh of from 1 to 2 per cent of the hogs slaughtered in the United States is infested with a parasite known as trichina. Its presence in pork which is eaten raw or rare often causes serious illness and sometimes death. To safeguard against this danger all pork eaten should be thoroughly cooked, so that the meat is white all the way through. While thorough curing usually kills these parasites or flesh worms, such meat is not always thoroughly cured, hence should be thoroughly cooked before eating.

The dairy business of the country will be put on a much more profitable as well as a fairer basis when the price paid for cream is determined not only by butter fat content, but freedom from odors, filth, etc., which mean inevitably a poor butter quality. Just so long as a dirty patron gets so much per inch for his cream on the basis of the Babcock tests, no matter how loud and filthy it is, a distinct injustice will continue to be done the clean and careful patron, while there will continue to be lacking in the case of the filthy patron a compelling motive to be any cleaner or do any better.

The other day the writer ran across the very unusual case of an attempt to set the broken leg of a horse. The patient, a faithful old family nag, had been kicked by a livelier stable mate with the above result. Hating to kill the faithful animal, the owner called in a skilled veterinarian, who put the broken leg in a plaster cast and strapped it up in such a way that it was lifted from the floor. The last reports were that the broken bone was healing rapidly. The reason why this is not more often done is that such an animal cannot be kept quiet and its leg in a condition of relaxation for a long enough time for the bone to knit.

It would be impossible to express in terms of dollars and cents the value of the moisture which fell generally throughout the Mississippi valley and the vast region lying west about the middle of February. In some sections the welcome moisture, so essential to plant growth, fell in the shape of rain, while in the more northerly and mountain territory it came in the shape of snow. The precipitation was copious and assures a crop of wheat in a vast territory where it was feared that there could be little or nothing. In the more strict arid sections, including New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, the heavy fall of snow insures a supply of moisture necessary to furnish water for irrigation.

The fine young heifer bearing her first calf, in which the owner feels real pride, should be given a little extra attention the few weeks before as well as the few weeks after calving. One of these precautions is the feeding of such a ration as will provide her with a generous amount of protein needed in equipping her calf with a strong and healthy body. Corn fodder or ensilage with clover and alfalfa makes an excellent and well balanced ration. If the legumes are not to be had bran and oilmeal should be substituted, the last named element not being fed in excess of a pound per day. If such a ration is given and the heifer is given dry and warm sleeping quarters there will be no good reason why her offspring will not be strong and lusty.

V.—Where Is Your Talent?

Remember the case of the man who took his talent, wrapped it in a napkin and buried it?

Not only did his master punish him for his folly, but his conduct has become a byword.

The world has progressed since his time. Modern conditions have developed a kind of man who is even more useless than the one who buried his talent. HE IS THE MAN

WHO SENDS HIS MONEY OUT OF TOWN TO BUY FROM MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

The man who buried his talent at least had the talent to show for it. If we all spent our money out of town in a short time we would have nothing to show for it except BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

The man who patronizes home industries benefits the people he deals with and benefits himself. His conduct is like that of the good and faithful servant who so used the talents intrusted to him that they greatly increased. He is a good and faithful citizen who is worthy of the success he is sure to win.

The next time you see an attractive advertisement of a mail order house go to your local merchant and try to buy the article of him. IF HE HASN'T IT ASK HIM WHY. If he has it ask him why he never told you about it in your local paper.

That will be a boost for us. But we'll stand for it. And we'll boost back; remember that.

Do your share of the boosting and you'll get your share of the prosperity.

SCENERY OF RARE BEAUTY

French Tourist Becomes Enthusiastic Over Summer Season in Sweden. Trondhjem, Norway, Showing Increased Signs of Industrial Activity. Danish King and Queen Pleased With Reception at Stockholm.

SWEDEN.

An enthusiastic French tourist writes as follows regarding Sweden in one of the French tourist journals: "In the height of summer it grows lighter the farther one goes to the North. North of the Polar circle the sun does not set, but flames in the heavens for the whole of twenty-four hours of the day. In southernmost Sweden the actual night at midsummer-time does not last more than four or five hours, while in Stockholm it is only two and one-half hours. A few hours' journey to the north of the capital we find it perfectly light the whole of the twenty-four hours and the shifting colors of the sky during such a day of light are wonderful to behold. The short, sunlit summers leave their work on the vegetation, too, especially in the far north of Sweden, and it is just these clear and poetical colors, taken from nature, which have awakened abroad such a lively attention to the productions of Swedish artists. These light summer nights are of a rare beauty and never fail to arouse the astonishment and rapture of the visitor to Sweden. But Sweden has not only most characteristic scenery; the land has, too, a history without equal in the annals of most countries, and many districts and memorials of the past are of historical interest even for a stranger. We need only remind the reader of that ancient Hanseatic town, Visby, with its old city walls and magnificent ruins; of Stockholm, and of Dalecarlia, whose inhabitants have played such an important part in the history of Sweden and who still attract the greatest interest from their frank and jovial character and their retention of their old world ways; the women and children, dressed in ancient dress of the province, forming a most attractive Swedish clan."

Professor Svante Arrhenius, Sweden's foremost scientist, will arrive in this country within a few days and will give a series of lectures at the Lowell institute in Boston. From the Scandinavian department at the state university of Minnesota it is learned that Professor Arrhenius will visit the Minnesota university and give a lecture early in May. He has also accepted invitations to lecture at Augustana college, Rock Island, Ill., and at Chicago university. Professor Arrhenius won the Nobel prize in chemistry in 1903 and is considered one of the most learned scientists of the world today. He speaks English, French and German fluently.

There is an idea prevailing abroad that it is only worth while to travel in Sweden during the summer months; that is, from the middle of June to the end of August. Nothing is known of the beautiful spring time enjoyed in Sweden, which in the south of the country makes its appearance in the middle of May; and quite as little of the Swedish Indian summer (St. Bride's summer), which in favorable seasons can last until the beginning of October.

In the primary schools of the country there are 860,000 children taught by 18,500 teachers of both sexes at an annual expense of $2,500,000. At the secondary schools there are 20,000 pupils. The universities at Upsala, Lund, Stockholm and Gothenburg have a total of 3,200 undergraduates. In addition to these there are pupils at the colleges of agriculture and other institutions.

The Swedish navy has at present 800 officers and 4,000 men in the services. There are twenty-three ironclads, six armored cruisers, five gunboats, six destroyers, one submarine, one balloon vessel and forty-nine torpedo boats.

A gala performance was given in honor of the Danish king and queen at the Royal Opera House on the evening of March 5. The royal boxes were well filled. Prince Eugen occupied a seat in the parquet.

August Lingberg, the well known Stockholm actor and playwright, is contemplating a tour in the United States next year and will visit the cities where there are heavy Swedish colonies.

In Stockholm there is a telephone for every six persons, a record for all the cities of the world, while in the whole of Sweden there are 232 telephones per 10,000 inhabitants.

The mercantile marine at present includes 1,900 sailing vessels, with a total of 250,000 tons, and 1,500 steamers, with a total tonnage of 530,000.

NORWAY.

Trondhjem, while only the third largest city in Norway, having at present 45,000 inhabitants, is showing signs of becoming a large city within a few years. The building industry is picking up remarkably there lately and aside from being a great tourist center there are indications that it is going to have a very healthy industrial development in the near future. Trondhjem is a very pretty town, with wide, straight streets and open squares. Interest attaches in the first place, of course, to the great cathedral, which is now being restored and the parts of the town nearest to it. Just as Norwegians hope to be able to celebrate 1914 with a restored Haakon's hall in Akershus fortress, so do they hope that by then the whole of Trondhjem cathedral will be rebuilt in its original form, with its slender pillars and arches, in which every stone is hewn and fitted in with careful hand. The archbishop's palace is also another interesting place. The palmy days of commerce in the latter half of the Eighteenth century were also in Trondhjem the days when the Scientific society was founded and from that period dates also the famous Angell institutions. The celebration in 1914 will be a remarkable one and thousands of visitors, hundreds of whom will be from foreign lands, will on that occasion visit the famous old city.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Irgens is not a little dissatisfied with the many groundless rumors regarding Russian encroachment on Norway and expressed himself very plainly on the subject recently before the storthing when he made, in part, the following statement: "When it is continually insisted in the foreign press that Russia is threatening Northern Norway we have to protest against such groundless rumors, and I take the opportunity to do so in the storthing. When the same newspapers assert that the Norwegians are alarmed on account of this, every one in this audience knows that the story is made out of whole cloth. What is really taking place in Northern Russia at the present time is this; the government and the local authorities have commenced to take an interest in the economical development of the northern portions of the country. Improved means of communication, and aid to the business enterprises have been planned and this movement may be compared with our own efforts to improve the means of communication and encourage the economical development of Northern Norway." These statements, coming from the highest authority in the land, will put a quietus on those sensation mongers who are trying to stir up bad feeling between Norway and Russia. But in a few months another string of lies on the same subject may be found as "cablegrams" in the great dailies of the world.

The oldest person in the country at present is a fisherman named Abel Gravdahl, whose home is in Buskness, Lofoten. He recently celebrated his 115th birthday and is still enjoying good health and has a splendid appetite. He has been married three times. The last time he married he was ninety-seven years old and his bride was eighty. His last wife is now dead and the old gentleman vows that he will never get married again.

The old town of Bergen has a remarkable power of rejuvenescence. It has, moreover, always been able to admit the foreign elements that have come to its native population and to combine the two. From olden times Bergen has been the town among seven mountains, which have long been its distinctive feature; and although so much has been changed Bergen is still the same town among the same seven mountains.

About 14,000 men are at present engaged in fishing in the Sondre Vaarsild district. It is a whole army of fishermen and they are all intent on making good. Prospects for a big haul for this season is the very best. Judging from last reports "sill" fishing is excellent.

A petition signed by 770 persons has been received by the storthing requesting that body to make an appropriation in favor of the poet, Jens Tvedt.

DENMARK.

The king and queen have just returned from Stockholm, Sweden, where they were accorded a most royal reception. His majesty has expressed himself to the Copenhagen papers as being exceptionally well pleased with his visit to the Swedish capitol.

The government contemplates placing a new tax on whisky next fall. This will bring, it is stated, greater revenue than ever to the state coffers.

The difference between the exports and the imports for 1910 was smaller than ever, the exports being $129,600,000 and the imports $153,900,000.

Count Moltke, a Danish nobleman, was entertained recently in St. Paul, Minn. He is at present Danish consul in Chicago.

The recent Danish art exhibit in Berlin was a decided success and attracted thousands of visitors.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

In a party caucus noteworthy for harmony and smoothness of progress the Democratic members of the new house of representatives adopted without change the committee assignments, the economy programme and the new rules prepared for the coming session by the committees that have been working during the last month. Important changes in procedure and a general reorganization of the house will result from the action of the Democrats. The power of naming committees was definitely taken from the speaker by the rules and lodged in the house itself. Committee members are to be elected by the house, not only in the first instance, but also in the filling of vacancies. In addition a saving of $182,000 in the annual cost of running congress is promised through the cutting out of superfluous employes and inactive committees and through the abolishment of the time honored "extra month's pay." Appointive places all are put into the hands of one committee, a special body to be known as the committee on organization, and the scramble for congressional positions will center about its door.

In a talk with members of the senate foreign relations committee President Taft told of his twofold purpose in sending troops to Texas—to enforce the neutrality laws, both as to fighting on American soil and filibustering, and to be prepared to defend American lives and property. The president declared that, with the lives of Americans threatened at the very threshold of their own country, he could not sit idly by.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has designated forty-five additional postoffices as postal savings depositories, in as many states and territories, mosty at industrial centers where there are many wage earners. He believes the service is well along in the experimental stage and should be extended rapidly.

In purchasing structural steel in the future the navy department will require that affidavits be furnished by each concern of which the steel is purchased that the concern is not engaged in any attempt to restrain trade and that it has not entered into any sort of combination to monopolize trade.

Drastic action was taken by Postmaster General Hitchcock in reorganizing the railway mail service. A round dozen of changes of the most important officers in the service were made by Hitchcock as a result of long and careful investigation and thorough consideration.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Two wings of New York's statehouse at Albany, the north and the west, were severely damaged by fire, causing a property loss estimated at $5,000,000. Magnificent works of art and sculpture were destroyed and most of the priceless contents of the state library and legislative libraries were lost. The flames were brought under control after a stubborn seven-hour fight.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE BEATEN

Minnesota Senate Kills Bill by Very Close Vote.

The state senate killed the woman's suffrage measure by a vote of 30 to 32 and unless reconsideration is accomplished the "votes for women" is buried for two years to come.

The house, by a vote of 34 to 78, killed Representative Knutson's bill providing a board of conciliation and arbitration to which labor disputes must be submitted before there is any strike or lockout. Organized labor fought the bill hard and the votes for it came principally from the country districts, the farmer members saying that the general public suffered more from the big strikes than either capital or labor did and something should be done to stop them.

The house killed Representative I. C. Spooner's bill increasing the railroad gross earnings tax from 4 to 5 per cent. The vote was 26 to 58.

New Mexico has approximately 500,000 acres already under irrigation, with 3,000,000 more that can be watered artificially. When this shall have been accomplished New Mexico's place as an agricultural state will have been secured.

A fellow can have a dish of ham and eggs now and then since the egg corner collapsed without borrowing money on his life insurance policy to foot the bill. Ham and eggs used to taste pretty good, but it was so long ago the most of us will have to learn all over again.

In all too many instances a fellow's attitude on this matter of bovine tuberculosis depends upon whether it is up to him to drink the milk or eat the flesh of animals affected with the disease or whether he has some of them on his hands that he is anxious to get rid of and lose as little as possible.

Contrary to an idea that seems to have got root in the minds of some folk here and there, careful experiments with the tuberculin test prove conclusively that the application of tuberculin will not only not cause tuberculosis in a healthy animal, but has no harmful effect whatever upon an animal that is affected with tuberculosis or other disease.

The one great point in favor of corn silage is that it comes nearer than any other winter ration to duplicating the succulence of the lush grasses of May and June. It is because of this fact that stock is so fond of silage and that the feeding of it results in such a generous milk flow in the dairy cow and the rapid gain in flesh of the other farm animals to which it is fed.

If the writer ever had any doubt that birds know a good thing when they see it, it was dispelled last season when he noted the certainty with which they singled out the ripest and reddest cheeked peaches and devoured them completely, leaving nothing but the pit hanging to the limb. Other fruit in garden and on mountain slope was scarce at the time, and this doubtless accounts for the trespass of these feathered friends.

While it is a mighty fine thing for the farmer to have an automobile and all right for him to do so if he has the money in the bank with which to purchase the machine, it is a very questionable procedure for any fellow who has to increase his indebtedness to buy one. We have in mind a fellow who did just this thing, and in the end it meant that he lost the farm, as he couldn't get his money's worth out of the machine without using it, and he couldn't do this without neglecting the farm work.

One of the reasons why the dairy cows give the largest returns in milk yield in May and June is that the water they drink does not chill them to the bone. This condition can be reproduced in the winter by warming the drinking water with a tank heater by the use of cobs or other fuel instead of making the cow do the job, utilizing corn and other high priced feeds for the purpose. Every bit of heat which the cow has to furnish in the warming of ice cold water means that the energy and vitality which she can devote to milk production are reduced by just so much.

In all too many co-operative creameries the buttermaker is kept tied down too closely to scrubbing, cleaning and stoking work when this could be done just as well by much cheaper help and the buttermaker given this time to inquire more carefully into the stable and milk house conditions to be found on the farms of the several hundred patrons of the creamery. Owing to this shortsighted effort at economy there is little question that creameries of this type lose thousands of dollars annually, which they might just as well save in an improved butter quality by giving their buttermaker more help, thus enabling him to give them more of his service as a specialist.

Persons afflicted with tuberculosis would do well to keep in mind the curative power of fresh air, whether in the east, west, north or south. Many people of limited means might better stay at home, using the precautions they would take elsewhere of sleeping and living in the open air, in the meantime enjoying the comforts of home, than to go to some far away, strange place without means sufficient for real needs. Still another class might as well stay at home, those who have money, but who go and live in stuffy boarding houses in some large city, keeping late hours and disregarding the fundamental requirements of health with the expectation that climate alone will work a cure, and that without its being given a fair chance.

Arbitration is a whole lot cheaper than lawing and makes better neighbors.

The dairy barn should be kept well ventilated not only to insure the good health of the cows, but the sweetness and freedom from odor of the milk.

It is a pretty safe plan to keep an eye on a neighbor if the family dog hikes under the corncrib or back kitchen every time he puts in an appearance.

The worth of boy or girl is just as often due to the handicaps which they have to overcome as to the favorable conditions or environment under which they may be reared.

If the nesting boxes are kept supplied with clean material there will be no need of washing the eggs before putting them down to keep—in fact, they will keep much better if no water touches them.

The trouble about every first class country school teacher is that some industrious young fellow of the neighborhood is likely to learn of her ability as a homemaker as soon as the director appreciates her worth as a pedagogue.

Those who have traveled through eastern Oregon and down the Columbia river have noticed with much interest the barriers erected along the track in many places to stop the shifting sands and keep them from blocking the track. Notwithstanding this precaution not infrequently trains have to stop until the sand drifts have been removed.

There is no enterprise along agricultural lines that can be set afoot in a community that will do more to contribute to its material wealth, contentment and prosperity than dairying. Fundamentally this is because it means the establishing of a system or type of farming which means soil replenishing instead of soil robbing and impoverishing.

Sago and tapioca are two food products used extensively in American cooking. The first is prepared from the starch secured from the pith of several species of East Indian palm trees. Tapioca is made by heating in a moist state the starch made from the root of the cassava or tapioca plant, which is a native of several South American countries.

Research work which has been conducted by the biological survey in the Blue Ridge apple district in Virginia shows that some twenty-five species of native birds prey upon the codling moth, and it is estimated that they destroy from 50 to 85 per cent of the hibernating pupae. This means that birds are a more effective means of keeping this pest in check than all the rest of their natural enemies combined.

An eastern florist is said to be getting remarkable egg returns by screening off a portion of one of his greenhouses and keeping the flock of hens there within view of the growing and blossoming flowers. The secret of his success, and there would seem to be no good reason to doubt it, lies in the fact that he has in large measure reproduced for the hens springtime conditions, which are very favorable to egg production.

More often than is the case life insurance should be viewed as a systematic and regular method of saving than as mere insurance against death. There are many men who take this view and who put practically all of their surplus earnings into insurance premiums. Payments must be made at regular intervals, are anticipated and a definite plan made to meet them. In the matter of being able to afford the carrying of life insurance it is more often true than not that the fellow who says he is too poor to carry insurance is the one whose family is in need of just such protection and who would be left destitute and unprovided for in case of his death.

Failure to use the Babcock test in the determining of the butter fat product of each member of the dairy herd not only prevents an effective elimination of the loafer, but also prevents adjusting the grain ration of the individual to her actual needs—that is, to the amount of butter fat produced. A feeding rule based on this test which is followed by many dairymen is to give each cow as many pounds of grain per day as she produces in butter fat per week. For instance, a cow giving twelve pounds of butter fat per week is given twice as much grain as the cow producing but six pounds. Yet how many dairymen continue in the same old rut, giving a cow so many quarts of feed, whether she is producing much or little butter, just because she is a cow and is giving some milk!

Shippers of the country and especially growers of perishable fruits will note with interest the outcome of a case brought by Dumas, a Columbia river valley fruit grower, against the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company for loss sustained because of a failure of the transportation company to provide cars at specified intervals as per terms of a special contract. In giving its ruling on the case the court—the United States court of appeals for the Ninth district—held that such contract was not invalid as discriminatory and contrary to public policy and that the carrier's inability to furnish cars at specified times, as agreed, owing to an unusually heavy traffic at the time they were demanded, constituted no defense to an action seeking to recover damages sustained because of such failure.

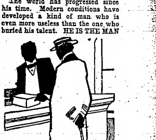
Town Booming Helps

V.—Where Is Your Talent?

Remember the case of the man who took his talent, wrapped it in a napkin and buried it?

Not only did his master punish him for his folly, but his conduct has become a byword.

The world has progressed since his time. Modern conditions have developed a kind of man who is even more useless than the one who buried his talent. HE IS THE MAN



WHO SENDS HIS MONEY OUT OF TOWN TO BUY FROM MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

The man who buried his talent at least had the talent to show for it. If we all spent our money out of town in a short time we would have nothing to show for it except BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

The man who patronizes home industries benefits the people he deals with and benefits himself. His conduct is like that of the good and faithful servant who so used the talents intrusted to him that they greatly increased. He is a good and faithful citizen who is worthy of the success he is sure to win.

The next time you see an attractive advertisement of a mail order house go to your local merchant and try to buy the article of him. IF HE HASN'T IT ASK HIM WHY. If he has it ask him why he never told you about it in your local paper.

That will be a boost for us. But we'll stand for it. And we'll boost back; remember that.

Do your share of the boosting and you'll get your share of the prosperity.

ORCHARD HEATING.

The question of heating orchards during frosty nights to prevent a destruction of the bloom has passed beyond the experimental stage, and this year every level headed orchardist who lives in a latitude that is likely to be visited by a spring frost when the trees are in bloom should make preparations at once to safeguard himself against frost damage. Where it can be procured at a price of from 4 to 6 cents per gallon crude petroleum will serve the purpose as well or better than any other material and has the advantage that, being in a covered pot, it is not rendered useless by a rain, as is quite often the case with wood or litter of several kinds. There are several good oil burners on the market, and those made without soldered joints are preferable. Experience has shown that about fifty burners should be used per acre and so set that the wind will blow the smoke and heat from them into the limbs of the trees. In a majority of cases the critical—coldest—time during a night in which frost occurs is between 3 and 6 a. m., and the burners should be held in readiness until the time mentioned. Frequently conditions prevailing in the early evening will indicate a frost later, but a change of wind may prevent it. Two or three thermometers of a good make should be stationed through the orchard so as to keep tab on the temperature. It is well to remember that both apple and peach blossoms in full bloom will stand from four to five degrees of frost without serious damage; hence if only two or three degrees of frost threaten it will not be necessary to make more than a smudge on the east side of the orchard just before sunup so as to prevent a too rapid thawing of the blossoms. Stumps, cordwood, brush and other litter have also been used with good results, fewer fires being required with materials making a larger blaze and giving more heat. In some of the orange growing sections of California orchards of from fifty to a hundred acres have been protected by driving through them in the early morning hours low wagons bearing fires so fed as to make dense smudges. Whatever method be followed in protecting the orchard from frost, preparations for heating or smudging should be made well in advance so that one will not be taken unawares. Instances are numerous where the money spent in orchard heating has been returned manifold in the crop return of a single season.

TEACHING THE CALF TO DRINK.

It is amusing sometimes to see the somewhat lengthy dissertations on teaching the calf how to drink, as if it were a matter of considerable difficulty. There are a few simple precautions that make the matter relatively easy—at least the writer has found them so in his own experience. In the first place, the calf will learn to drink the more quickly if it hasn't acquired the habit of sucking. It is well to take the little chap away from the mammy after it has her udder cleaned out in good shape. In the case of inexperienced persons the job is aggravated by going at it wrong way to. It is well to be friendly with the hungry little bovine, and with this idea in view straddle its back, give it two fingers and when it has got a good grip on them gently lower the head into the pail, keeping the fingers far enough apart so that the milk will pull between them. Keep the little brute's nostrils above the milk line and when it is getting a good draft of milk withdraw the fingers. It will shortly want something to suck besides its tongue, and the fingers will have to be returned to the mouth, but gone at in this way it will not be long before the calf will drink in an entirely satisfactory way.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR FEEDING STEERS.

The past winter saw the first sack of cottonseed meal shipped into the section in which the writer lives. It costs laid down $34.50 per ton, which is about a dollar less than the price of linseed oil meal, and this notwithstanding the fact that the chemical analysis shows that the former feed contains nearly 10 per cent more protein than the latter. This makes a cheap and excellent source of protein, while numerous experiments which have been made show that, given in a proper ration with corn, about one to ten, feeding animals do exceptionally well on it. The feeder who is trying this cottonseed meal for the first time is also feeding with it equal parts of alfalfa, which is a prepared feed made of ground alfalfa leaves and stems and molasses. This contains a trifle less than 20 per cent of protein and costs about $5 per ton laid down. Notwithstanding the high price at which they are sold, the use of these protein concentrates makes possible a more economical ration than if corn should be used exclusively.

Pigs and chickens seem to be quite subject to tubercular trouble and sheep and horses, on the contrary, remarkably immune to it.

The world's 1910 wheat crop aggregated 3,607,000,000 bushels and was harvested from 254,000,000 acres. This was an average yield of 13.2 bushels per acre.

Many an unprofitable hen might be induced to turn over a new leaf were she given a ration containing less corn and more protein and made to scratch for all the grain fed. Before putting these idlers into a potpie it might be well to give them such a test.

The only ingredients that make prepared stock foods worth a continental are bran, linseed or cottonseed meal and alfalfa meal and like foods which they contain. This being the case, it is better to buy these ingredients in their natural state and not pay two or three prices for a fancy name and a multicolored package.

It is a fact conceded by all who have ever looked into the interior of a dirty and foul smelling cream separator that while it is a labor saving device its use by any farmer or dairyman who will not take the time and pains to keep it clean should be strongly discouraged. If not kept so, it is one of the foulest things imaginable and a cause of germ laden cream and low quality butter.

In a recent institute which the writer attended the question was raised by one farmer present whether if the Babcock test and weighing of the milk yield of cows were generally introduced there would not be an overproduction of butter. There seems to be very little likelihood of it, for if the test were universally applied close to a third of all the cows in the country would be put out of commission—the star boarders that are making 130 pounds of butter or less and are kept at a loss.

Fruit growers in some sections of the west where smudging has to be resorted to as a safeguard against spring frosts have provided themselves with alarms which are operated automatically by thermometers which set them going when the mercury reaches the danger line. Any one who has hiked out in a shiver on a frosty night every half hour between 10 p. m. and 3 a. m. to consult that old thermometer would quite likely not have to be argued into getting one of these newfangled alarms. They save sleep and nerve force.

There is probably no other single feature connected with the care of the cow during and for several weeks following the time when she brings forth her calf that will do so much to keep her udder in a normal and healthy condition as to see to it that she always has a dry, well bedded place on which to lie at night or in rest times during the day. Investigation into the subject by veterinarians shows that a majority of cases of milk fever are due to carelessness on this one point, through allowing the new milk cow to lie down in cold and damp stables or outdoor places.

Western fruit growers are much interested in a recent decision of the interstate commerce commission, which is that western shippers shall receive the use of refrigerator cars whenever asked without additional cost, it being the opinion of the commissioners that the charges made by the railroads for precooling facilities were unreasonable and unjust. This will undoubtedly save western shippers of perishable fruits thousands of dollars, but just how the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe roads are going to find it remunerative to operate their huge precooling plants, costing more than half a million each, is not so apparent.

Several regular shippers of hogs to the Kansas City market have of late been following a plan that has been giving very satisfactory results. The plan referred to is simply the putting of a layer of corn on top of the bedding in the cars in which the hogs are sent to market. In loading the cars enough room is left so that the hogs can root around and get the corn. The advantages of this method of shipment have been found to be that the hogs do not bunch up and smother, are quieter and when they reach market are ready for a fill of water. Another thing worth consideration is the fact that the corn which the hogs eat en route costs 40 cents, or whatever the prevailing price may be at the point of shipment, and not $1 per bushel, the price usually charged at all central markets. This plan is easily tried, and any shipper can demonstrate its worth first hand.

Northern readers will be interested in the following recipe for making hoecakes, contributed recently to a Kansas City paper by a reader who has made many of them: Take two cupfuls of sifted cornmeal, place in a pan and make a shallow hollow in the center of the meal heap and in this place a rounding tablespoonful of lard and on this two pinches of salt. Pour a cupful of boiling water on the lard, stir quickly and dash on some cold water and stir thoroughly. The batter should be almost thin enough to run. Heat a griddle, sprinkle dry meal over it rather freely and when the meal begins to brown pour the batter out and spread to thickness of about a quarter of an inch. When the cake is browned on the lower side and cooked somewhat more than half through it should be turned and the other side browned. The hoecake should cook quickly and is best served hot with butter.

The 1,400 pound Missouri mule is becoming a popular draft animal on the thoroughfares of New York city. He is tough, eats less than a horse of the same weight and if sound will sell for $300 or better.

According to the government crop reporter, the average price of mules on Jan. 1 was $125.62, while the average horse was worth $111.67. Milk cows were worth $40.49 per head, other cattle $20.85, swine $9.35 and sheep $3.73.

It is estimated that the shippers of the country—and this includes preeminently the grain raiser, stock farmer and fruit grower—will be saved $27,000,000 yearly as a result of the recent decision of the interstate commerce commission, which is against an advance in freight rates by eastern and western railroads.

A farmer we read of the other day will probably have to have several toes amputated as a result of walking into two redhot custard pies which his wife had left on the floor in an adjoining room, whither he walked in his stocking feet. He will carry a light next time, and the wife will cool her pastry in a more secure place.

A plan for furnishing exercise for the bull followed by some dairymen is to turn two animals into a good sized paddock and let them wool each other around daily. Of course this presupposes horns are minus. The exercise which they get in this scrapping keeps them in good condition and reduces greatly the likelihood that they will go on a tear and kill somebody.

A level headed school superintendent whom we heard of the other day has decided that the girl members of his this year's graduating class may wear on the occasion of high school commencement only such dresses as they shall have made with their own hands. This is a mighty sensible idea and makes handicraft and ingenuity factors in the graduating gown rather than the length of the old gentleman's pocketbook. Then, too, it will help a number of these girls to realize that a whole lot of physical and nervous strain is involved in the making of fine duds.

In a very short time there will be thousands of dwellers in central and eastern states making home seeking tours through the west. As a safeguard in purchasing the writer would suggest that each reader of these notes who contemplates buying land in the section mentioned take plenty of time to inquire into the kind of soil found on his contemplated purchase, its depth, whether spotted or not, and also whether as a matter of fact it will produce in a satisfactory way the crops which the man selling it claims it will. If these simple precautions are heeded a lot of grief and disappointment will be saved.

As showing the important part which the gasoline tractor is playing on many a northwestern grain farm, the experience of a farmer near Beach, N. D., is interesting. He had 2,000 acres of virgin prairie to put in and for the purpose bought two twenty-two-horsepower tractors, together with the plows and other machinery necessary to put the soil in shape for a crop. These engines plowed, disked and seeded the 2,000 acres, and the land was sown to flax. In the fall the crop of 32,000 bushels was harvested, thrashed and hauled to market with these tractors and brought $48,000. The same season 1,000 acres of other land were broken, and next year 3,000 acres will be cropped.

Notwithstanding the fact that Illinois and Iowa land is supposed to be richer and more fertile than land in New York, some interesting facts have been noticed in reference to the crop production in the three states. On the basis of figures compiled in 1905 it was found that the average value of land in New York was $47.17 per acre, in Illinois $74.32 per acre and in Iowa $57.07 per acre. Notwithstanding this average valuation of land, the crop return per acre in New York for the ten years prior to 1905 was $10.42, in Illinois $10.70 and in Iowa $13.06. The average land values as well as crop returns for the past five years would doubtless show a variation from the above figures, but it is quite likely that the ratio would be about the same. There is something in the figures given worth thinking about.

It is odd how hard some folks will work their hands and feet when the moderate exercise of a little cellular tissue under their hats would save both time and energy. To illustrate by a simple case, a gardener we know, who has a gasoline pumping plant, climbs a ladder a distance of twenty-five or thirty feet to the top of his tank several times a day in order to see how much water there is in it when by placing a float in the tank, attaching thereto a cord and running it through a pulley over the edge and fastening a light weight to it on the outside he could stand on the ground and tell the exact stage of water in the tank without moving a foot. This man is not lazy, but during the spring and summer season begins work before light in the morning and keeps at it often until after dark at night. He climbs that ladder with his hands and feet simply because he fails to use his head.

F. E. Trigg

England imported 2,201,296,440 eggs in 1910, which cost $35,459,254, or an average of 19.2 cents per dozen. It would be worth knowing what these eggs cost the consumer when served on his table.

In any section of the country where land will produce two crops of clover or three or four cuttings of alfalfa one need not be afraid of paying from $100 to $200 per acre for land, as the growing of these legumes will give a generous interest return on the investment price.

Owing to facts which have recently been made very plain relative to the transmission of disease germs, the precaution urged by health authorities of having school children provided with individual drinking cups can no longer be looked upon as a fad, but is a sane and highly essential safeguard to health.

After May 1, as a result of new import regulations, a good deal of Chinese tea that has been quite uniformly green will assume a variety of colors—green, yellow and brown and intermediate shades. The uniformly green color which has characterized the cheaper grades of popular teas in the past has been due to the use by the Chinese of a harmless dye.

Recent experiments which have been made in the matter of using sows of different ages for breeding purposes show that, while a young sow, well cared for, will average seven pigs to the litter, the mature sow five or six years old will average between nine and ten to the litter. It has also been found that the offspring of mature sows weigh 12 per cent more at birth than those of young sows, grow more rapidly and are stronger.

There are a good many farmers who will likely have the beet growing proposition put up to them for the first time this spring. Before signing a contract to grow ten, twenty or thirty acres, as the case may be, better talk the proposition over not only with the special agent of the company soliciting the contracts, but with some fellow who has had a turn at the business or, better, two or three of them if possible, some who have done well at it and some who have not. After canvassing the situation you will be able to decide intelligently whether it will be worth while to take hold of the business.

It will soon be time to cut the early potatoes for planting. If they are at all scabby they should be treated as follows: Put potatoes in sack (before cutting) and suspend for about two hours in a solution made by the addition of half a pint of 40 per cent formalin to fifteen gallons of water. The same solution may be used for several batches of potatoes. On removing from sack spread potatoes out to dry. They should then be cut and planted within a few hours. To get best results potatoes should not be planted this season on land which produced scabby potatoes last season. An entirely new piece of land or that which has not been in potatoes for several years is preferable.

ALL MY PIMPLES GONE

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed By a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D. D. D. has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25-cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

Letter From Steenerson Explains Matters Relating to Opening of Red Lake Lands

If Department Circular Conflicts With Act the Latter Must Prevail

April 7, 1911.

Thief River Falls News,
Thief River Falls,
Minnesota.

Gentlemen:—

I enclose herewith a copy of a letter this day addressed to one of my constituents for your information.

Very respectfully,
H. Steenerson.

"My Dear Sir:

The Law approved February 16, 1911, says, "That hereafter all lands shall be subject to homestead entry", etc. The Department circular dated March 3d 1911, revokes a previous executive withdrawal as to settlement on the lands, on April 15th, and as to allowance of entry on May 15, 1911, and states that no rights will be gained by settling on the land prior to April 15, 1911. It seems to me that the Act constitutes a statutory revocation of the previous withdrawal, and that after the passage of the act the land was subject to homestead settlement.

There appears to be a conflict between the act and the circular, for the act plainly says that "hereafter" all the lands shall be subject to homestead entry, and "hereafter" means after February 16th, the date of the act.

If the circular conflict with the act, the latter must prevail, and it would therefore seem to be wise for intending settlers to go at once upon the land they intend to enter, make improvements, then, after filing, take an appeal from the rejection, be on the land at midnight April 14th, and continue thereon, after filing on May 15th; and where such a course is pursued it is my opinion that the law would have a better right than one who subsequently settles and files in compliance with the circular.

Of course, each settler should take his own counsel, and I may be mistaken about what the law will finally be decided to mean.

I am, as a lawyer, simply giving my opinion and it is in no way to be regarded as official.

Very Respectfully,
H. Steenerson.

Liked Our Class Play.

The Seniors in presenting their class play "Red Acre Farm" at the St. Hilaire opera house Thursday evening of last week was met with a large audience. Those who attended the play speak very highly of the production, and are high in their praises of the good work done by the players.

The class reports as having had an all around good time and financially are gainers by quite a number of dollars.

The St. Hilaire Spectator says the following in regard to the play:

"The senior class of the the Thief River Falls high school presented its play, "Red Acre Farm", at the Imperial Hall Thursday evening to a full house.

The play is a most pleasing one, being based on early New England rural life and is full of captivating scenes and climaxes. It was done full justice to by the excellent acting of the young amateurs. To Raymond Pope as manager of the affair is due great credit for the manner in which it was handled. Andy Dahl did the bad young man to perfection."

Last of the Series

Mrs. John Torrison will entertain the married ladies card club this evening. This will be the last of a series of games which have been in progress during the winter months.

It is quite a mistake to suppose that the street was designed as a place to pile ashes and other refuse. You may not mind it but the public does. Clean UP!

Locates In The City.

H. O. Kjomme, of Minneapolis, arrived in the city recently and has opened up a law office in this city. At present Mr. Kjomme will be located in the office with the Pennington County Abstract Company, 314 East Third Street, until a more central location up town can be secured. Mr. Kjomme up to his removal here had been in partnership with Anthony J. Grothe, a well known Twin City lawyer, and comes here well recommended.

He graduated from the University of Minnesota with the class of '10 and received his academic training at Luther College, Decorah, Ia.

A Good Act.

Another pleasing act at the Lyceum Theatre the last half of last week was Ford and Louise in their musical comedy act. Little Miss Louise, the youthful varitoso, is a wonder for her age and renders her violin solos with, apparently, all the technic and charm of an artist. Ford's renditions on his unique instruments puts him in a class by himself, and their program is the best that has been at the theatre for some time.

New Secretary.

Emil Pladson, who recently removed here from Iowa is the new secretary of the Northern Minnesota Land Company in the city, succeeding O. L. Erickson the former secretary.

TRAVELERS ORGANIZE

Commercial Men Organized a Ball Team Last Saturday Evening.

Will Give Swell Benefit Dance on Friday Evening, April 21st.

The Commercial travelers making this city their headquarters held a meeting last Saturday evening at the Evelyn Hotel and organized a base ball team for the coming season.

While at present the line-up has not been perfected, the team will nevertheless be composed of such all-stars as Ed Ashley, A. Anderson, Ole Neseth, Ben Durant and the like and with such material at hand the team is bound to be a fast one.

E. B. Bakke was chosen as the manager of the team, and Ed Ashley captain. While the schedule of games has not at present been prepared they will, nevertheless, have on their list teams composed of traveling men from Fargo and Crookston, and such towns.

A. Anderson, on the dance committe, announces that they will give a swell benefit dance at the Auditorium on Friday evening, April 21st, the proceeds of which will be used to buy paraphernalia for the team. The tickets are now being sold broadcast by the drummers and a very large crowd is expected. In addition to the large number who will undoubtedly be present from this city a big crowd from the outside is expected.

Farmers.

I will return the end of this week with another carload of good work horses. Be sure to come early and get your pick of the bunch.

Changes In Terms of Court.

The following changes have been made in the time for holding the general terms of district court in the 14th Judicial District, according to a recent act of the legislature:

Marshall County: Fourth Monday in May and November.

Norman County, Second Monday in May and November.

Kittson County: No change. Second Monday in June and December.

Pennington County: Fourth Monday in January and June.

Mahnomen County: Fourth Monday in October.

Polk County: No change. First Tuesday in June and December.

Red Lake County: Fourth Monday in March and Second Monday in November.

Roseau County: Third Monday in May and Fourth Monday in October.

Judge Grindeland, of Warren, will hold the terms of Court in Marshall, Kittson, Norman and Pennington counties and Judge William Watts, of Crookston, will preside at the terms held in Polk, Red Lake and Roseau counties. Judge Grindeland has formerly had Roseau county, but it is now taken by Judge Watts, on account of railroad connections, as Crookston is in direct communication with Roseau the trip can be made in one day, while from Warren it requires two days coming and going.

G. N. Up Against Damage Suit.

A story has just leaked out that a friend of Conductor Miller has filed a claim for damages and humiliation, suffered by Conductor Miller last Sunday when running the special train from Warroad to Thief River Falls, to the concert given by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. It seems that the train became uncoupled, and while making the connection again Conductor Miller stooped over thereby exerting a greater strain upon the gable end of his trousers than they could resist. The result was a rent crosswise about a foot long, and stand straight as he could, his coat tail was not long enough to cover the result of the mishap. He finally borrowed an overcoat, and was presentable the balance of the trip. The friend filed a bill of $7 for actual damages and $1,500 for damages to his feelings sustained by deep mortification at his indecorous appearance.—Crookston Times.

New Fish Laws.

The fishing season will open on May 15th this year, five days earlier than last year, on account of a change in the law, and the closing date is set at October 30th, instead of keeping on as long as the weather will permit.

Other changes in the laws are:

The weight limit on whitefish has been increased from 1½ to 2 pounds as the smallest.

It is now unlawful to take sturgeon weighing less than 15 lbs.

Pound nets may be used with three inch mesh, instead of 3½, as formerly.

The number of nets that can be alloted to one firm or one individual or firm has been reduced from 50 to 25.

Only two pond nets can be set in a string.

All the fisheries are being prepared with full crews and a busy season is anticipated.

Letter of Appreciation.

The Modern Woodmen of America:

Gentlemen:—

Permit me to thereby acknowledge receipt of check for $2,000 as payment in full for life insurance policy which my beloved husband carried in your honorable lodge. I know how feeble are words to express thanks for for the many kindnesses you have shown us in the hour of our great bereavement, and for the promptness in paying the policy after death; but I know you sympathize with us in our great loss and will accept the simple word "thanks" as a token of sincere appreciation, I wish the Modern Woodmen of America well, and wish to be

Yours very sincerely,
Louise Robbecke.

Takes Trip Out West.

Geo. Lipscomb left Tuesday for a trip to points in Montana. He went from here to Great Falls, Mont., and from there to Kalispell, his destination. Mr. Lipscomb has recently disposed of his team of horses and goes out west with a view of locking up a location, and if he is favorably impressed with conditions out there he may decide to dispose of his property in this city and move his family out there some time in the future.

LOSES ITS RATE CASE

Federal Circuit Court Wipes Out Laws Affecting Interstate Commerce.

Suit Brought by Stockholders Ends In Victory for Stockholders.

Judge Walter H. Sanborn, senior United States circuit judge, Eigth judicial district, in an opinion handed down, Saturday decided the Minnesota rate case against the members of the Minnesota state railway commission on the grounds that the necessary effect of the reductions ordered was substantially to burden and directly to regulate interstate commerce, to create unjust discriminations between localities in Minnesota and those in adjoining states in violation of the commercial clause of the constitution and to take the properties of the railroad companies without just compensation in violation of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution.

The suits were brought by stockholders of the Northern Pacific railway company, the Great Northern Railway company, the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad company against those companies, the attorney general and the members of the railway and warehouse commission of Minnesota, to enjoin the reduction of the passenger rates in Minnesota from 3 cents to 2 cents per mile, the merchandise rates 20 per cent to 25 per cent and the commodity rates 7.37 per cent.

The railroad companies had put all these reductions, except that on commodity rates, into effect and the cases were commenced and tried after the effect of these reductions had become provable.

Judge Sanborn rendered decrees which affirm the report of the master and enjoin the enforcement of the reductions after June 1, 1911.

The following is a brief resume of the judges decision:

First—That the laws of the state legislature reducing passenger rates 33 1-3 per cent and reducing commodity rates 7.37 per cent are discriminatory and in violation of the constitution of the United States.

Second—That the railroad and warehouse commission order reducing general merchandise rates within the state is discriminatory and in violation of the constitution of the United States.

Third—That a state may regulate interstate commerce in so far as it does not burden interstate commerce and no farther, thus striking a death blow at the railroad and warehouse commission.

Fourth—That the nation only through the national congress can regulate interstate commerce rates.

Fifth—All state laws that regulate rates, which laws affect or burden or regulate interstate commerce, are unconstitutional and void.

Sixth—The unavoidable effect of the sweeping laws of Minnesota reducing and regulating rates is indirectly to discriminate against interstate commerce and is in direct violation of the commerce clause of the constitution.

REHEARSAL TONIGHT

That pile of manure in the alley is valuable elsewhere, say on some ones farm. Where it is, it will breed more disease carrying flies than any other known material. Why not put it where it is valuable. Clean UP!

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

The Pennington county anti-tuberculosis society recently formed in this city is only one of a great many of these societies that are being organized all over the state for the prevention of the white plague.

It is the intention of the association to make the organization a live wire and to do everything in their power to stamp out the dreaded disease in Pennington Co. and in order to do this it needs the assistance of good citizens.

It was decided to place the membership fee at 25 cents and that the city be canvassed next week. It is hoped that all will respond when called upon, the money collected in this manner will be spent in educating those who have become afflicted with the disease in how to live so as not to transmit the disease to another.

Plan Much Ditching.

The ditching operations in Eastern Marshall county will begin soon. Maps have been printed recently showing the areas ditched last season and the work proposed to carry out this summer. The region where the ditches are projected will be the scene of the liveliest efforts to move as much dirt as possible. Several of the contractors in the eastern part of Pennington county are all ready to start the machines moving as soon as a few more tons of supplies are placed on the sites of the ditches so they will not have to cease work when once begun. Land seekers are beginning to arrive to secure quarters near the ditches, where they will be certain of heavy crops without the danger of excessive water.

There are events occuring in every community which, if reported in a local paper, would create commotion little dreamed of. What to report and what not to report often perplexes the editor. He's often unjustly accused of cowardice and favoritism, while all the time he is looking toward the good reputation of the town and vicinity where his lot is cast. The local editor, from necessity, almost constantly finds himself between two fires, and which ever way he turns he is sure to be unjustly treated. This is one of the pleasures of the newspapers business.—Bemidji Pioneer.

STATE LAW HELD INVALID

Judge Sanborn of Federal Court Rules Against Passenger, Freight and Commodity Rates.

Judge Walter H. Sanborn of St. Paul, senior United States circuit judge of the Eighth judicial district, has handed down a decision in the Minnesota rate cases, affirming the report of the master and enjoining the enforcement of the reductions of passenger, freight and commodity rates after June 1, 1911. The decision was against the members of the Minnesota state railroad commission on the ground that the necessary effect of the reductions ordered was substantially to regulate interstate commerce and to create unjust discriminations between localities in Minnesota and those in adjoining states in violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution and to take the properties of the railroad companies without just compensation. The decision, in brief, holds:

First—That the laws of the state legislature reducing passenger rates 33 1-3 per cent and reducing commodity rates 7.37 per cent are discriminatory and in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

Second—That the railroad and warehouse commission's order reducing general merchandise rates within the state is discriminatory and in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

Power of the Commission.

Third—That a state may regulate intrastate commerce insofar as it does not burden interstate commerce and no farther, thus striking a death blow at the railroad and warehouse commission.

Fourth—That the nation only, through the national congress, can regulate interstate commerce rates.

Fifth—All state laws regulating rates, which affect or burden or regulate interstate commerce, are unconstitutional and void.

Sixth—The unavoidable effect of the sweeping laws of Minnesota reducing and regulating rates is to directly discriminate against interstate commerce and is in direct violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution.

Judge C. E. Otis, who acted as master in chancery and heard the mass of testimony in the rate cases and whose decision the opinion of Judge Sanborn upholds, is deeply gratified over the finding of the court.

"The decision speaks for itself," he said, "and I am glad that I have been completely vindicated in the matter."

E. S. Durment and E. T. Young, attorneys for the state, will appeal the case to the United States supreme court.

BANDIT FIRES ON BRAKEMAN

Unsuccessful Attempt to Hold Up Train Near St. Paul.

Unsuccessful in an attempt to wreck the Northwestern limited train near Hazel Park, a St. Paul suburb, a highwayman fired upon Oscar Funne, brakeman, who had gone back to protect the rear, and escaped without showing himself. The train, carrying 300 people, was stopped by Engineer James E. Clune within a few feet of a pile of lumber and ties which blocked the track at the curve.

The attempted holdup occurred about fifteen minutes after the train left the St. Paul Union depot for Chicago in a deep cut half a mile east of Hazel park.

SHOOTS GIRL AND HIMSELF

Crazed Minneapolis Street Car Conductor Commits Double Crime.

Crazed by the belief that the woman he loved did not care enough for him Arthur Wold, forty years old, street car conductor, for two years separated from his wife, shot and killed Minnie Wagner, twenty-two years old, of St. Cloud, at the home of her brother-in-law, C. A. London, at Minneapolis, and then killed himself. London entered the room in time to see Miss Wagner fall and to see Wold turn the weapon upon himself.

Several letters of Wold's and a confession, found in his trunk, tell the story of his infatuation and his doubts

LOSS OF $100,000 RESULTS

Fire in the Hamm Brewing Plant at St. Paul.

Starting with an explosion which tore a stairway from its fastenings and hurled it toward the roof, fire broke out in the bottling department of the Hamm Brewing company at St. Paul and, eating its way through the entire building, caused a loss estimated by William Hamm, president of the company, at $1[illegible]

Firemen battled for four hours with the flames, which broke out continually in new places, and succeeded in mastering the situation only after the building had been completely flooded.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Memorial services for the late Justice Jaggard in the supreme court chambers at the capitol last week were largely attended by members of the bar from all over the state, as well as by members of the senate, which body had adjourned because of the exercises. Memorials were delivered by a number of the lawyers of the state.

The state of Minnesota has more than $23,000,000 at interest in this and other states which brings an income of $900,000 a year. It was $883,681 last year, according to figures prepared by Walter J. Smith, state treasurer. This is larger than in the investment of any state but Texas.

Eighty new cases brought by the United States government to annul deeds given by Indians to lands on the White Earth reservation were filed in the federal court in Fergus Falls, making a total of 625 cases that have thus far been filed.

A woman detective is to be added to the Minneapolis police force as a result of the grand jury calling Mayor Haynes. Her principal duty will be to look after young girls, but she also will be used in shoplifting cases.

At the instance of Representative Steenerson the secretary of the navy has directed the shipment to Crookston of two cannon and several shells for exhibition on the campus of the agricultural school in that city.

Representative Davis has received petitions from farmers in Sibley and Nicollet counties protesting against the ratification of the Canadian trade agreement and has presented them to the house of representatives.

Representative Steenerson of Minnesota is a candidate for appointment to the house committee on agriculture and the indications are that he will be recommended for the assignment by Minority Leader Mann.

It will require an entire special train to carry Minnesota's commercial and business men who will go as delegates to the Northwestern Development league meeting, to be held at Helena, Mont., May 4 and 5.

Owing to the extremely low stage of water in the Mississippi river the opening of the sawmill season at Minneapolis will be delayed at least until May 1. A year ago the mills were turning out lumber April 15.

Representative Steenerson has introduced bills providing appropriations of $100,000 and $75,000 respectively for the erection of public buildings at Bemidji, Detroit and Thief River Falls.

The largest and most successful meeting of the Northern Minnesota Educational association met last week at St. Cloud with 600 school teachers and school officials in attendance.

The National Educational association, the largest and most representative organization in the United States, will be invited to hold the 1912 convention in St. Paul.

Rev. W. L. Tenney, D. D., pastor of the Lowry Hill Presbyterian church of Minneapolis, has resigned to accept the chair of history in Carleton College at Northfield.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Adam Wood, aged fifty-eight years, is dead at Monticello from pneumonia. He served three terms in the legislature, 1903, 1905, 1907, and one term as assistant sergeant at arms. The funeral was conducted by the Monticello Masonic lodge. He reached Wright county in 1856, where he has been prominent in Republican politics. A widow and one son survive him.

At the age of eighty, William H. Hummel, one of the founders of New Ulm, Civil war veteran and one of the most prominent residents in that section of the Minnesota German settlement, is dead at Portland, Ore.

Dr. H. E. Cassel of Litchfield is dead at Luther hospital, St. Paul. While performing an operation three weeks ago he accidentally pricked one of his fingers. Blood poisoning developed, causing his death.

Captain Michael J. O'Connor, prominent in St. Paul G. A. R. circles and formerly city clerk of St. Paul, is dead. Captain O'Connor was seventy-eight years old, having been born in London in 1833.

Rabbi Jacob Helperin, aged sixty-seven, the first Jewish rabbi in Duluth, is dead. He was a resident of that city for twenty-six years.

Fred E. Horey, is dead at St. Paul. Mr. Horey was one of the oldest and best known railroad conductors in the Northwest.

N. P. Emil Carlson, mayor of Deerwood and a prominent merchant of that place, is dead.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

John Olaf Nelson met almost instant death at Minneapolis when he was struck by a switch engine while on his way home from an insurance office where he went to settle the insurance on his home, which was damaged by fire several weeks ago. Nelson was the father of twelve children and lived with his wife and eleven of them in the home damaged by fire.

Mrs. Ella Sheldon was burned to death at Minneapolis while starting a fire with kerosene oil.

WELL KNOWN EDUCATOR DEAD

Dean W. S. Pattee of the University of Minnesota Passes Away.

W. S. Pattee, dean of the University of Minnesota law college, is dead at Minneapolis. He had been ill at intervals for more than a year, the last severe illness lasting about two weeks. The attending physicians announced kidney trouble as the cause of death.

Dean Pattee had been connected with the university since 1888 and was one of the men instrumental in the growth of the institution.

W. S. Pattee was born in Jackson, Me., Sept. 19, 1846, and graduated from Bowdoin college in 1871 with a degree of A. B., taking his master degree in 1874. He was admitted to the bar in 1878. He came to Minnesota and took up his residence at Northfield.

Dean Pattee was a member of the Minnesota legislature in 1884-5. In 1888 Mr. Pattee was named dean of the college of law at the state university.

SLAPS AT THE LARGER CITIES

Bill Restricting Representation Passes Minnesota Senate.

The state senate has passed the Duxbury-Haycraft-Moonan-Weis bill in which it is proposed to submit a constitutional amendment to the people providing for a limited representation in the legislature. The vote was 36 to 24.

The bill was amended so that the maximum number of senators from any one county shall be six instead of four, as planned by the authors. Debate lasted more than two hours.

A proposed amendment to reduce taxation where representation is less in proportion than in other counties lost by a vote of 14 to 11.

The maximum number of senators provided in the bill is sixty-three.

PROBERS REPORT TO LEGISLATURE

Management of Red Wing Reform School Condemned.

Condemning the present management of the school and, finding that the corporal punishment administered was "wholly unjustifiable and can only result in brutalizing not only the boys but the inflictors of the punishment," all but one member of the joint legislative committee appointed to investigate the state training school for boys at Red Wing signed a report recommending the removal of Superintendent Whittier, Assistant Superintendent Dorn and Family Managers Stoppleman and Metzold.

Senator Rockne of Goodhue county—the county in which the school is located—refused to concur with the majority and will submit a minority report. The findings of the committee cover five pages of typewritten matter. In brief they are:

Findings of Committee.

That in many instances inmates of the Red Wing training school have been "cruelly and excessively punished."

That little judgment was used in the occasion and severity of the punishments.

That Superintendent Whittier "procured and caused the use of" a spanking machine.

That his subordinates often whipped boys without his order, and without making report to him of the punishment.

The committee recommends:

That Superintendent Whittier and three of his subordinates be removed.

That the board of control fix a limit to corporal punishment at the school, or abolish it altogether.

That boys more than sixteen years old be exempted from whippings.

That a gymnasium be provided for the school.

Dr. Stone Introduces Resolution in Minnesota House.

Charging that the brewers, railroads, street railways, steel trust and medical trust contributed money to the campaign committee of which E. E. Smith was chairman, "for the purpose of electing as many members as possible of this house favorable to said special interests," Dr. W. T. Stone introduced into the house of representatives the resolution he had promised.

In his resolution Dr. Stone gives the names of the twelve men and four committees that "control legislation in the house." Dr. Stone asks that a committee of seven be appointed to investigate the charges he has made. He desires that the speaker name three of the committee, that he be permitted to name three and that the six so chosen shall select the seventh member.

Woman Perishes in Fire.

A fatal accident occurred on the farm that C. J. Riley, a newcomer from Iowa, purchased recently just west of Amboy. Mrs. Riley went down into the basement and it is supposed that she lighted a match and that gas leaking from a lighting plant exploded. Her clothing, as well as the house, was set on fire and before the family could come to her assistance she had been burned to death.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

A worldwide coffee trust is to receive the attention of the United States congress, as well as the department of justice. It is charged that the coffee trust is primarily the Brazilian government, but the department of justice will have the opportunity to apply the anti-trust law to the Americans who are affiliated with the trust. The names of multimillionaires long powerful in the coffee trade are being given attention. Investigation has developed some remarkable facts about the immense increase in coffee prices by the combination.

The "commodities clause" of the Hepburn rate law, interpreted two years ago by the supreme court of the United States into what was commonly supposed to be in impotent group of words, was given new life by that same tribunal in a second interpretation. So effective was the reconsideration of the subject that government officials predict that the evils sought to be corrected by the legislation will now be remedied and railroad business henceforth divorced from the coal business.

Representative David J. Foster, ranking minority member of the house committee on foreign affairs, predicted at the White House that arbitration treaties would be negotiated among four of the great powers of the world, the United States to take a leading part in framing the negotiations. Mr. Foster named the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan as the four powers that would enter into such agreements.

FOREIGN NEWS.

What he declared to be his ultimatum on the question of peace was delivered by Francisco I. Madero, the Mexican insurrecto leader. While still insisting President Diaz retire and the country be given a new election Senor Madero said he was willing to resign as "provisional president" and, if necessary, would allow a provisional president to be selected from Diaz' cabinet.

The Mexican revolutionists are determined not to make peace unless President Diaz steps down, and the envoys from the government are just as stubbornly determined to keep him in power, although they are willing to make concessions otherwise. All peace negotiations have come to an end.

Mexico has prepared for a vigorous prosecution of the campaign against the rebels. The chamber of deputies, acting upon the initiative of Minister of Finance Limantour, voted $4,000,000 gold for the "pacification of the country."

Turkish government troops, after stubborn fighting, have defeated the Arab rebels in the vicinity of Sagaa, in Yemen, killing more than 100. The rebel forts have been destroyed.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

In just 5 hours and 10 minutes the 1,720 cabin and steerage passengers on the stranded North German Lloyd liner Prinzess Irene were transferred to the deck of her sister ship, the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm, and were safely on their way to New York. The feat is unparalleled in the history of marine disasters and will, perhaps, remain so for years to come.

Ratifications of the American-Japanese commercial treaty were exchanged at Tokio, following a luncheon given at the palace by Emperor Mutsuhito in honor of American Ambassador O'Brien. Premier Katsura and Foreign Minister Komura were at the luncheon, preceding which the emperor received Mr. O'Brien in private audience.

WHAT CURES ECZEMA?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch.

Because—It cleanses, soothes and heals the skin.

Because—It enables Nature to repair the ravages of the disease.

Because—The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most serious cases show that D. D. D. is today recognized as the absolutely reliable Eczema cure.

Drop into our store today, just to talk over your case with us.

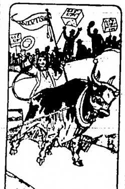
A Fable For Critics

Once there was an Ox. He was a fine, hefty Ox. He could pull a big load. He never balked, but always liked to go straight ahead.

But the Ox had enemies.

There was the Flea and his whole big Family. "We don't care whether this Ox travels or not," said the Flea and his Folks. "All we want is some of his blood." Whereupon the Fleas eternally pestered the Ox and gave him That Tired Feeling.

Then there was the Tom Cat and his brothers—the Doubting Thomases. "We don't know whether this Ox is going the right way or not," said the Thomases. "Anyhow, we'll scratch his back for him." Whereupon the Felines jumped on the back of the Ox and scratched him for fair, which made the Ox exceedingly sorrowful.



Then there was the Fisto Pup and his Fellow Fistes—a whole litter of Fistes. "We don't care how slow the Ox goes," said the Fistes; "the slower the merrier for us. All we want is to lag behind him and bite his Tail." Whereupon the Fistes snapped continually at the Tail of the Ox, which gave the Ox a mighty mournfulness.

Finally the Ox, pestered constantly with the Fleas and the Felines and the Fistes, got to looking sickly. He stopped and lay down on his job, and there was no more going forward for him.

KEY TO THE SITUATION: The town is the Ox. The Fleas and the Felines and the Fistes are those citizens who criticise every progressive movement and do everything they can in their petty ways to make the Ox quit pulling in the right direction.

MORAL: Give the Ox a chance to pull. Everybody holler, "Git up!"

SUICIDE SHOOTS HIS WIFE

Duluth Man, Before Fatal Wound, Turns Revolver Upon Spouse.

Nick Boudreau is dead at Duluth by his own hand, and his wife, whom he shot before turning the gun on himself, is at St. Luke's hospital, perhaps fatally wounded. The Boudreaus have three small children.

Mrs. Boudreau is shot in the neck. The couple separated several months ago and since then he has been away and the woman has supported the family by common work. Boudreau went to the house after the wife and children had retired and fired three shots at his wife.

Boudreau shot himself in the temple. He died soon after he was taken to the hospital.

ARMED DEPUTIES GUARD MURDERER

Sheriff Fears Attempt at Lynching Will Be Made.

Threats have been freely made to lynch Martin O'Malley, in jail at Le Sueur Center under sentence of death for killing two stepchildren. Patrick Keogh, sheriff of Le Sueur county, has armed guards posted about the jail with a supply of guns and ammunition on hand sufficient to withstand a siege. He talked to the governor for some time over the telephone. The convicted murderer, O'Malley, is kept in solitary confinement, handcuffed, and has to be put to sleep with drugs. He has also refused to eat for days at a time and in the opinion of the sheriff is crazy.

The sheriff stated that the wave of feeling against O'Malley is widespread throughout all of the county in which the crime was committed and that open threats have been made upon the streets of Le Sueur Center. He said also that any ablebodied man with a sledge could break through the prison wall in ten minutes. The town is apparently quiet, but the O'Malley case, it is said, is the chief topic of conversation upon the streets and in the lounging places. He said also that the governor had promised him protection from the militia if needed.

REAPPORTIONMENT UP AGAIN

Question Occupies Attention of Senate for Brief Period.

The ghost of reapportionment appeared in the senate, lingered for a while—just long enough to see its doom forthcoming—then it flitted away to oblivion.

Clinton Robinson's joint resolution ratifying the action of congress in adopting an amendment to the federal Constitution authorizing a tax on incomes passed the house and was sent to the senate. There was no debate. The vote was 96 to 0.

Ceded Indian Lands in Minnesota to Be Opened.

Ceded Chippewa Indian lands to the extent of 43,000 acres, lying in Red Lake, Marshall, Polk and Pennington counties in this state, will be opened for settlement April 15, and for entry May 15.

The price fixed to settlers is $4 an acre, of which one-fifth must be paid down, while the balance must be paid in five equal annual payments.

PEOPLE TO ELECT SPEAKER

Novel Bill Introduced in the State Legislature.

With the written consent of the governor a bill was introduced in the state legislature providing for submission of a constitutional amendment whereby the speaker of the house in the Minnesota legislature shall be elected at large by popular vote, and not chosen by the body over which he will preside.

Vincent Succeeds Northrop.

Dr. George E. Vincent, recently chosen president of the University of Minnesota to succeed Dr. Cyrus Northrop, has assumed his duties. He was loudly cheered by the students on his first appearance as head of the institution.

There is probably no product or by-product of the farm that furnishes protein in a more palatable or valuable form than skimmilk. Especially is this the case when considering rations for calves, pigs and poultry. It is because of this fact that dairying has so much to commend it as a type of farming and why hog raising dovetails in with it so nicely as a profitable side line. Under such system of management there is carried out very simply and effectively a type of conservation which means more to the permanent welfare of the country than any of the somewhat spectacular and faraway but no less worthy forms of conservation which are just now engaging public attention. Dairying means conservation of soil fertility for the simple reason that with a ton of butter worth $[illegible] there is removed from the farm but 50 cents' worth of fertilizing elements, while in the case of raw products like corn, oats and wheat it runs from $12 to $16 worth.

UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS

Minnesota Can Secure Next National Corn Show.

Minnesota will secure the national corn show of 1912, providing the state legislature appropriates enough money to erect the $300,000 agricultural building at the state fair grounds. The guaranty of $50,000, it was announced, has already been cared for by the Twin Cities. C. H. Stevenson, manager of the exposition, and general secretary of the Corn association, told the committee that the show is already to come to the Twin Cities if a suitable building is erected to house it. Plans for the proposed agricultural building were shown at the luncheon and met with Mr. Stevenson's approval.

SAID CHARGES ARE FILED

Dismissal of Minnesota Adjutant General Asked.

A letter containing charges of procrastination and inefficiency, it is reliably reported, against Adjutant General Fred B. Wood has been received by Governor Eberhart from E. M. Van Duzee, Jr., former captain and adjutant of the Third Minnesota infantry. Neither the governor's office nor Mr. Van Duzee, however, would give out the contents of the communication. It was learned from a reliable source, however, that the letter asks the dismissal of General Wood, asserting that several officers have resigned owing to dissatisfaction with the administration of militia affairs.

Wet and Dry Forces Running Close in Minnesota.

Returns from 192 towns in the state which voted on the "license or no license" issue show the "no license" forces are still in the lead with 100 towns and villages voting wet and ninety-two voting "dry."

The dry forces held their own over the state, however, according to men who were in charge of the dry campaign. Notable gains were made by the temperance forces in Otter Tail county, while Osakis, dry for two years, voted to license saloons.

RICE GROWING.

Northern readers of these notes will be interested in how rice is raised in the southern states. A loam soil with a good mixture of clay is considered best suited to this cereal, while the other conditions which make good rice land are possibility of irrigation, complete drainage and a solidity at harvest time to permit the operation of heavy machinery. Rice land is prepared for the seed as in the case of other cereals, and the best results are had with the drill, from one and a half to two bushels of seed being used per acre. When the rice plants are five or six inches high the field is flooded with water to a depth of from one to six inches. The water is kept on the field until the rice gets in the dough, which is from ten to twenty days before it is ripe. The field is then drained by open ditches and allowed to dry, after which the rice is cut, shocked and thrashed, as in the case of wheat or oats. In the last named step the speed of the cylinders is reduced to prevent cracking or breaking the grain. The rice is known as "paddy" as it comes from the machine and is then taken to the mill, where it is hulled and polished.

Fourteen Fires in Twelve Hours.

Called out by fourteen fires and three false alarms from all parts of the city between 1:22 a. m. and 1:05 p. m. the St. Paul fire department one day recently put in the busiest twelve hours in the history of the department. Despite the fact that the wind reached the proportions of a gale at times and was never less than thirty miles an hour the total loss on all of the fires will not exceed $10,000.

Hiccoughs Prove Fatal.

Hiccoughing continuously for ten days, with only momentary intervals of rest, William Currie of Minneapolis, eighty-six years of age, a well known Mill City real estate dealer, died from sheer exhaustion. In point of duration the attack of hiccoughs is considered remarkable by physicians who have investigated the case.

Successfully Passes Crisis.

Former Mayor Robert A. Smith of St. Paul has passed the crisis of the attack of pneumonia from which he is suffering and has an even chance for recovery. This is the opinion of Dr. A. M. Eastman, attending physician.

Until a few years ago the bulk of the world's supply of sulphur was got from the vicinity of the Italian volcanoes, but today the greater part comes from beneath the prairies of Louisiana, and only hot water and compressed air are used in the mining process. The Italian sulphur in its natural state contains 50 per cent of impurities, but the Louisiana product tests 99 per cent. Boiling water is forced down the space between the ten and six inch pipes which extend to the bed. This turns the sulphur to a liquid, and it is then pumped up through the smaller pipes by means of compressed air and flows into vats [illegible] feet long, [illegible] feet wide and 40 feet deep. Here it cools and hardens and when desired for shipment is broken up with hand picks and shoveled into cars like coal. Some of the wells in the section mentioned produce 500 tons daily.

Congressman Steenerson has introduced a bill favoring the purchase of a site for a public building in this city. Thank you Mr. Steenerson for another reminder of our growing importance, as the leading city of Northwestern Minnesota.

This paper freely admits, that this city owes much to the Soo Railway, which has been an important factor in its upbuilding. The large number of its employees here are a very superior class of men, and are among our best citizens. It also believes that the road owes something to itself and the public, and that the depot accomodation is not what the business, given the road, or the comfort of the traveling public deserves. It is known locally that a much larger volume of passenger business would go over the Wheat Line, if the local depot offered those conveniences that modern travel demands, at points, where the public finds it necessary to await the arrival and departure of trains.

A great deal of farm land is changing hands, and the best feature of it, is the large amount that is being bought by farmers, who have been here for years; men who a short time ago would have sold their holdings, are now increasing them, and it is certain that a period of great prosperity and development is coming. The farmer who diversifies, and this district permits that kind of farming, is working on a certainty. He cannot lose.

Farm Statistics

The new federal farm statistics for Minnesota gives the information that land values have risen 76 per cent in 10 years.

The number of land owners has decreased 4 per cent and renters of farm lands has increased 42 per cent. In Iowa these tendencies are more marked and in the eastern states these tendencies are more pronounced.

If this evolution is not restrained the result will be that in 50 years from now all the farms in Minnesota will be farmed by renters.

Notice.

On account of the increase of business, I have now moved my Book Bindery from my home to Room No. 1, over First National Bank, where it will be easier for patrons to find me. It is a pleasure to state that I find Thief River Falls an excellent location for this work. I wish to extend my hearty thanks to those whom I have already had the opportunity to do work for, and invite the remaining public to call and see.

L. O. Lasseson,
The Book Binder.

Notice

All outstanding school orders against District 85, Beltrami Co., will be paid upon presentation at the First National Bank of Thief River Falls. Interest to stop 10 days from date of this notice.

Easter services will be held in the Swedish Augustana Church at 10:30 a. m., instead of at 11 o'clock as heretofore. Sunday school at 2:30 P. M.

You are cordially invited to attend the Special Services in the evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The choir will render a Cantata; several solos will be sung by local talent, and a sermon will be delivered by Mr. S. Sorenson, a theological student who is attending our Theological Seminary at St. Paul. He is the man who carried off first honors in an inter-state oratorical contest a year ago. Come and hear him. Don't miss this opportunity. Admission free.

Adolph B. Rosaland,
Pastor.

M. E. Church

Easter will be observed in the M. E. Church on Sunday next. Appropriate sermons will be preached by the pastor, special music will be rendered by the choir, and collections will be taken for the benevolent enterprises of the church. If you wish an enjoyable and profitable Easter service, don't fail to attend.

On Monday next at 8 p. m. the District Conference of the M. E. church will convene in this city and will continue a series of meetings until Wednesday, April 19th. Many able speakers will be in attendance from the cities and towns embraced in the district and preparations have been made for an inspiring series of meetings. The public is cordially invited to attend.

NORWAY.

Trondhjem, while only the third largest city in Norway, having at present 45,000 inhabitants, is showing signs of becoming a large city within a few years. The building industry is picking up remarkably there lately and aside from being a great tourist center there are indications that it is going to have a very healthy industrial development in the near future. Trondhjem is a very pretty town, with wide, straight streets and open squares. Interest attaches in the first place, of course, to the great cathedral, which is now being restored and the parts of the town nearest to it. Just as Norwegians hope to be able to celebrate 1914 with a restored Haakon's hall in Akershus fortress, so do they hope that by then the whole of Trondhjem cathedral will be rebuilt in its original form, with its slender pillars and arches, in which every stone is hewn and fitted in with careful hand. The archbishop's palace is also another interesting place. The palmy days of commerce in the latter half of the Eighteenth century were also in Trondhjem the days when the Scientific society was founded and from that period dates also the famous Angell institutions. The celebration in 1914 will be a remarkable one and thousands of visitors, hundreds of whom will be from foreign lands, will on that occasion visit the famous old city.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Irgens is not a little dissatisfied with the many groundless rumors regarding Russian encroachment on Norway and expressed himself very plainly on the subject recently before the storthing when he made, in part, the following statement: "When it is continually insisted in the foreign press that Russia is threatening Northern Norway we have to protest against such groundless rumors, and I take the opportunity to do so in the storthing. When the same newspapers assert that the Norwegians are alarmed on account of this, every one in this audience knows that the story is made out of whole cloth. What is really taking place in Northern Russia at the present time is this; the government and the local authorities have commenced to take an interest in the economical development of the northern portions of the country. Improved means of communication, and aid to the business enterprises have been planned and this movement may be compared with our own efforts to improve the means of communication and encourage the economical development of Northern Norway." These statements, coming from the highest authority in the land, will put a quietus on those sensation mongers who are trying to stir up bad feeling between Norway and Russia. But in a few months another string of lies on the same subject may be found as "cablegrams" in the great dailies of the world.

The oldest person in the country at present is a fisherman named Abel Gravdahl, whose home is in Buskness, Lofoten. He recently celebrated his 115th birthday and is still enjoying good health and has a splendid appetite. He has been married three times. The last time he married he was ninety-seven years old and his bride was eighty. His last wife is now dead and the old gentleman vows that he will never get married again.

The old town of Bergen has a remarkable power of rejuvenescence. It has, moreover, always been able to admit the foreign elements that have come to its native population and to combine the two. From olden times Bergen has been the town among seven mountains, which have long been its distinctive feature; and although so much has been changed Bergen is still the same town among the same seven mountains.

About 14,000 men are at present engaged in fishing in the Sondre Vaarsild district. It is a whole army of fishermen and they are all intent on making good. Prospects for a big haul for this season is the very best. Judging from last reports "sill" fishing is excellent.

A petition signed by 770 persons has been received by the storthing requesting that body to make an appropriation in favor of the poet, Jens Tvedt.

DENMARK.

The king and queen have just returned from Stockholm, Sweden where they were accorded a most royal reception. His majesty has expressed himself to the Copenhagen papers as being exceptionally well pleased with his visit to the Swedish capitol.

The government contemplates placing a new tax on whisky next fall. This will bring, it is stated, greater revenue than ever to the state coffers.

The difference between the exports and the imports for 1910 was smaller than ever, the exports being $129,600,000 and the imports $153,900,000.

Count Moltke, a Danish nobleman, was entertained recently in St. Paul, Minn. He is at present Danish consul in Chicago.

The recent Danish art exhibit in Berlin was a decided success and attracted thousands of visitors.

MARION S. NORELIUS.

A comparison of wages paid in various trades and occupations with the salary of the average preacher shows that the preacher receives about half as much as the average skilled laborer.

Arbitration is a whole lot cheaper than lawing and makes better neighbors.

The dairy barn should be kept well ventilated not only to insure the good health of the cows, but the sweetness and freedom from odor of the milk.

It is a pretty safe plan to keep an eye on a neighbor if the family dog hikes under the corncrib or back kitchen every time he puts in an appearance.

The worth of boy or girl is just as often due to the handicaps which they have to overcome as to the favorable conditions or environment under which they may be reared.

If the nesting boxes are kept supplied with clean material there will be no need of washing the eggs before putting them down to keep—in fact, they will keep much better if no water touches them.

The trouble about every first class country school teacher is that some industrious young fellow of the neighborhood is likely to learn of her ability as a homemaker as soon as the director appreciates her worth as a pedagogue.

Those who have traveled through eastern Oregon and down the Columbia river have noticed with much interest the barriers erected along the track in many places to stop the shifting sands and keep them from blocking the track. Notwithstanding this precaution not infrequently trains have to stop until the sand drifts have been removed.

There is no enterprise along agricultural lines that can be set afoot in a community that will do more to contribute to its material wealth, contentment and prosperity than dairying. Fundamentally this is because it means the establishing of a system or type of farming which means soil replenishing instead of soil robbing and impoverishing.

Sago and tapioca are two food products used extensively in American cooking. The first is prepared from the starch secured from the pith of several species of East Indian palm trees. Tapioca is made by heating in a moist state the starch made from the root of the cassava or tapioca plant, which is a native of several South American countries.

Research work which has been conducted by the biological survey in the Blue Ridge apple district in Virginia shows that some twenty-five species of native birds prey upon the codling moth, and it is estimated that they destroy from 50 to 85 per cent of the hibernating pupae. This means that birds are a more effective means of keeping this pest in check than all the rest of their natural enemies combined.

An eastern florist is said to be getting remarkable egg returns by screening off a portion of one of his greenhouses and keeping the flock of hens there within view of the growing and blossoming flowers. The secret of his success, and there would seem to be no good reason to doubt it, lies in the fact that he has in large measure reproduced for the hens springtime conditions, which are very favorable to egg production.

More often than is the case life insurance should be viewed as a systematic and regular method of saving than as mere insurance against death. There are many men who take this view and who put practically all of their surplus earnings into insurance premiums. Payments must be made at regular intervals, are anticipated and a definite plan made to meet them. In the matter of being able to afford the carrying of life insurance it is more often true than not that the fellow who says he is too poor to carry insurance is the one whose family is in need of just such protection and who would be left destitute and unprovided for in case of his death.

Failure to use the Babcock test in the determining of the butter fat product of each member of the dairy herd not only prevents an effective elimination of the loafer, but also prevents adjusting the grain ration of the individual to her actual needs—that is, to the amount of butter fat produced. A feeding rule based on this test which is followed by many dairymen is to give each cow as many pounds of grain per day as she produces in butter fat per week. For instance, a cow giving twelve pounds of butter fat per week is given twice as much grain as the cow producing but six pounds. Yet how many dairymen continue in the same old rut, giving a cow so many quarts of feed, whether she is producing much or little butter, just because she is a cow and is giving some milk!

Shippers of the country and especially growers of perishable fruits will note with interest the outcome of a case brought by Dumas, a Columbia river valley fruit grower, against the Oregon Railroad and Navigation company for loss sustained because of a failure of the transportation company to provide cars at specified intervals as per terms of a special contract. In giving its ruling on the case the court—the United States court of appeals for the Ninth district—held that such contract was not invalid as discriminatory and contrary to public policy and that the carrier's inability to furnish cars at specified times, as agreed, owing to an unusually heavy traffic at the time they were demanded, constituted no defense to an action seeking to recover damages sustained because of such failure.

In Colorado, of mining fame, agriculture today outstrips the mines.

Many daughters—of capable mothers is this especially true—do not accept household responsibilities because they are neither expected nor allowed to do so.

In latitudes where the cotton plant is not killed by annual freezing it attains an age of several years. It bears freely, sometimes two crops in the long tropical season.

Dry farming has its place doubtless, but the hope of many sections of the west lies in irrigation. By it alone can a number of the states attain greatness agriculturally.

In the majority of cases it is the early hatched pullets—March or early April—that make the best winter layers. They begin laying in October and November and get the habit before the cold weather sets in.

The 1910 imports of silk into the United States totaled 25,000,000 pounds and were valued at $70,000,000. It is estimated that from this amount of silk the mills of the country will turn out products valued at $150,000,000.

Whole hearted appreciation of the service which those about us render, whether in business life or the home circle, doesn't cost a red cent, yet meets a longing which every one has and which money alone cannot satisfy.

If your liver is out of whack, instead of paying a fancy price for some booze stimulant and regulator try a sprig of green parsley now and then and tone your system up still further with a daily draft of clean, fresh buttermilk.

The Roosevelt dam on the Salt river, Arizona, to be dedicated by Mr. Roosevelt next March, is a mass of masonry 240 feet high, built at a cost of $6,000,000, which will retain the waters of a lake covering 17,000 acres. This water will be used to irrigate 200,000 acres, with an additional 40,000 acres to be supplied by pumping.

With hog prices at the present level and likely to continue the same or better for some time to come, it is a mighty shortsighted policy for the man who is in the pig raising business seriously not to provide his brood sows with proper shelter, which will keep them dry and comfortable. Tens of thousands of farmers are able to raise but three pigs per sow when they might raise six if they would provide the sows with proper shelter.

It is well to keep market facilities in mind in buying land in a new locality. We learned of an instance not long ago in which the purchaser failed to do this. The land bought was recommended by the agents as especially adapted to fruit raising when the tract being sold was all of eighty miles from a railroad. It makes one smile to think what apples, pears or peaches would look like after they had been "packed" over that distance. The pulp might be good for marmalade, but little else.

This winter season is just the time to let mother take that much thought of and long delayed visit to the "home folks." It will do her more good than may be imagined to get out of the old ruts and will prove the needed tonic, while the responsibility of the household is the very thing needful to develop the latent ability of Mary, who has no opportunity to show what she can do so long as mother is at home and "knows how to do it so much better," and mother's absence will show plainly to father and the boys what her presence means to them.

There are sections in northern Wisconsin where cut-over pine lands can be had at as low as $5 per acre, and for those who are looking for a home on the land they ought to be worth looking into. The soil is for the most part sandy, and while small grains do not thrive crops of early corn, potatoes, clover and fruits do well. The country is one in which dairying could be carried on with advantage and profit. Usually the land in question can be got for $1 per acre down, the balance in five years. The railroad lands in the same locality usually sell for $5.50 per acre and may be got on easy terms.

In view of the fact that it is an enterprise undertaken by a single state the New York barge canal bids fair to be one of the big transportation enterprises of the present generation. When completed the canal will have a length of 442 miles and will extend from the Hudson river at a point 125 miles from the sea to Tonawanda, near Buffalo, on Lake Erie, where the last stretch of the canal will have an elevation of 565 feet. The masonry structures will require 4,250,000 cubic yards of concrete and 113,000,000 cubic yards of earth and silt, while 11,000,000 cubic yards of rock will have to be moved before the canal is completed.

Many of the abandoned farms of New England are being bought up by Slavic immigrants, in some cases whole communities being settled by these people. While the native New Englander is inclined to be prejudiced against his foreign born neighbors, he cannot deny that they make honest, thrifty citizens. The Slavic farmer usually has a large family, and each member has his or her work to do. Even the mother brings her baby into the field. With so many hands working and no help to hire economic independence is assured. Another generation will see these people thoroughly Americanized and valuable citizens.

"The FREE" the Now Famous Sewing Machine

SOLD AS LOW AS $1 A WEEK

A Newly Invented Sewing Machine Is Now On Sale

30 DAYS TRIAL

The Inventor Mr. Free, Doesn't Want The Low Price Told

Many people have wondered why we have used such enthusiastic language in endorsing that new and "different" sewing machine, The FREE.

Simply because we feel enthusiastic to our finger tips about "The FREE".

Why, we are so convinced about the absolute superiority of "The FREE" over any machine we have ever seen or heard about that we don't even dare tell you the price. It is too low. We and Mr. Free both realize that if you were told the price without seeing the machine you would not be able to appreciate the fact that The FREE is the only perfect 20th Century Sewing Machine.

Instead of advertising the price we prefer to make it easy for you to own a "FREE" by offering it at your own terms as low as $1 a week; and above all we would like to have "The FREE" a 30 day trial in your own home. Try this machine—test it—sew with it on all kinds of material—if you then are not entirely satisfied—if you are not convinced that it is the best machine you have ever sewed on—the most improved—the most up-to-date—if the low price does not convince you that this is the biggest bargain you have ever bought, return the machine to us and we will refund your deposit so that the trial will not cost you one cent.

We know that a trial is the best way to sell The FREE because we are sure—that no woman will be willing to get along without the 8 sets of Ball Bearings, the "Rotoscillo" Movement, the French Leg Design, the Shuttle Ejector, the Rotary Spool Pin, Automatic Locking Drawers, Automatic Tension Release, Automatic Thread Controller and Improved Head Latch after enjoying them for 30 days on "The FREE".

See The FREE tomorrow and let us send it right out to your home. Come tomorrow.

The surest as well as simplest way of preserving eggs—and April is the best month in which to do it—is to make a solution by adding one part of water glass (obtainable at any drug store) to about fifteen parts of boiled water. Only fresh and clean eggs should be used, and they should be placed carefully in an earthenware jar previously scalded and the water glass solution poured over them to a sufficient depth to cover. Eggs put up in this way will keep from eight months to a year. If used for boiling later a pin hole should be made in one end of the eggs so used, as the solution makes them air tight, and the pin puncture will keep the eggs from breaking open on boiling.

A rather striking illustration of the effectiveness of the Babcock test as a means of determining the butter fat returns of cows in a dairy herd was related to the writer the other day by the owner of a large herd of pure bred Holstein cows. It was shortly after the introduction of the sulphuric acid test as a means of ascertaining the amount of butter fat in milk. In his dairy barn were two fine looking cows which stood side by side. At the time of the test one was giving thirty-five pounds of milk per day and the other twenty-five pounds, and the rations fed were based on this showing. On applying the Babcock test it was found that the milk of the cow giving the larger amount tested 1.9 per cent of butter fat, while that of the one yielding the smaller amount tested 6 per cent. This meant that the latter cow was giving two and one-fifth times as much butter fat as the former and should have been fed that much more feed instead of less, as had been the case. The reader will likely say that this is an extreme case. It is, but it simply emphasizes the need of applying the test to a herd of cows and weeding out the worthless loafers from those that are really a source of revenue.

Professor Mittag-Leffler of Stockholm Celebrates His Sixty-fifth Birthday. Norwegian Jurist Urges International Defense Alliance With Sweden High Danish Officials Under Investigation.

SWEDEN.

Professor Mittag-Leffler of the Stockholm high school celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday a few days ago. Professor Mittag-Leffler was born in Stockholm and was appointed professor of mathematics at the Stockholm high school in 1881. He is a member of the Swedish Academy of Sciences and an honorary doctor of the universities of Bologne and Oxford. Professor Leffler is regarded as one of the world's leading mathematicians and is the author of and editor of the international scientific journal known as the "Acta Mathematica."

While on his way out to Katrineholm Count Clarence von Rosen had a serious accident with his automobile. When the chauffeur attempted to pass a truck wagon the machine commenced to skid and landed the count and his chaffeur in a ditch. Count Rosen received some small scratches and a great shaking up. When he was about to re-enter the machine the benzine exploded and soon the automobile was a mass of flames and was totally destroyed.

Anders Zorn, the renowned portrait painter, who has gained international fame as an artist, has spent the past few weeks in Berlin, but departed a few days ago for New York, accompanied by the American ambassador to Germany, David J. Hill. During his stay in Berlin, Zorn has been busy painting a number of prominent men in the financial world, receiving a sum of 20,000 marks each for his efforts. Zorn is one of the highest paid artists in the world.

A seamstress named Lily Felin committed suicide March 16 by throwing herself from a third-story window to the street below, striking the stone pavement and causing almost instantaneous death. She is said to have nurtured an ambition to become a great singer and not making any headway in this respect the poor girl became so despondent that she ended her life.

Justice Ibsen, in a recent article in the Aftenposten (Christiania), hold forth the importance of establishing an international defense treaty between Sweden and Norway. He refers to the so called "Integritets-traktat" as absolutely a failure and that the Karlstad treaty is meaningless and of no value to either country. Intelligensen (Christiania), in an editorial, takes issue with Ibsen and says that such a treaty would be of no avail, but the Gothenburg Sjofartstidning (Gothenburg, Sweden,) regards Ibsen's suggestion as very timely and worthy of serious consideration. The Tiden Tegn protests openly against such a move and declares Ibsen's suggestions for an international defense treaty as of no value whatsoever. The general supposition is, however, that in the event of any trouble with Russia the two countries would stand united and that a treaty for this purpose would really not be of any particular use.

Consul Arvid Jakobsen of Quebec is at present paying a visit to his native city, Christiania, and has been interviewed by the daily papers of that city relative to the causes and conditions of Norwegian emigration to Canada. He has but little encouragement to offer the members of the Anti-Emigration society and on the other hand is bold to suggest that no one who is not capable of supporting a family should be allowed to emigrate to Canada. It is therefore not only emigrants that he wants, but he wants the very best class of Norwegians to come to the new world. There is little comfort in his suggestions for those who are working hard to induce people to remain in the homeland.

A find of great archeological value has been made at Flagstad, in Vaug, near Hancver. While an excavation was being made for a new building the bones of a horse were scattered in all directions by a dynamite blast, and deeper down appeared the skeleton of a man and remains of weapons and clothing. The place where the objects were found is close to the old highway, and the find is supposed to date from the Viking age.

DENMARK.

Just as in various states of America a great deal of investigation is going on in Denmark in regard to public officials. Just now all Copenhagen is agog over the so called "ordensvidleri" swindles in the awarding of high orders, such as that of the Dannebrog, etc. It appears that during C. J. Christensen's ministry several persons offered and paid large sums of money for securing the honor and that they were aided in this respect by high officials. During the time that Mr. Christensen was premier it seems that a great deal of swindling was going on in this regard, several persons practically buying the great cross of Dannebrog, the rightful possession of which, for some meritorious service to the country, is regarded as a great and significant honor in Denmark. The great cross of Dannebrog is only awarded to prominent men and therefore the scandals that have been aroused in connection with it are of some significance. During the time that the now notorious Alberti was premier the swindles in these orders are reported to have been at their height. Among those who secured the honor in this illegal manner was a prominent manufacturer in Aalborg, whose name is Langer. He is reported to have paid 30,000 crowns for a so called "justice title," also another manufacturer, whose name is Holmblad, and a wealthy shipper, whose name is Johnson. Each of these gentlemen paid 11,000 crowns each for the "honor." Rasmus Nielsen was also another merchant who had declared his willingness to pay several thousand crowns if he could secure the honor. Anders Jensen, proprietor of the Dagmar hotel in Copenhagen is also reported to have paid 10,000 crowns for the privilege of being "knighted." The matter will come up before the folketing in the near future and the department of finance has already been conducting a rigid investigation.

The famous Norwegian Alpine climber, M. Rubenson, has, according to a recent dispatch from Copenhagen, departed for Calcutta with the object of reaching the summit of Mount Kanchanjanga, 28,156 feet high, the extreme eastern horn of the Nepal Himalayas and the second highest mountain in the world. He is accompanied by his wife and an expedition of twenty men. Before M. Rubenson started King Haakon presented him with a Norwegian flag, which is to be placed at the highest point reached by the expedition.

The cabinet crisis in Iceland has been solved, at least for the present. Justitiarius Kristian Johnsson has been appointed Iceland's premier and expressed his willingness to accept the position. In the selection of tile strength, firmness and tenacity are very desirable. Possessing these, they will stand the racket when put in the ground.

It is worth remembering that two or three transplantings will tend to greatly increase the stalkiness and root systems of the stuff raised in the box in the sunny window or taken from the hot-bed. This holds both of vegetables and flowers.

When a white man commits a capital offense he is hanged or electrocuted, but if a member of the Papago Indian tribe, whose headquarters are near Mesa, Ariz., does the same, his wrist is fastened to the tail of a wild broncho and he is dragged to death.

Not only is it true in shop and factory, but also on the farm, that the employee who receives promotion and an advance in wages is not the one who watches the clock and who does as little as a pretty dull conscience will allow, but who rather does a little more than he is being paid for.

Neither the good Lord nor members of the family have much patience with the man or woman who is courteous and polite when out in public, but when at home removes the mask and works off a lot of cussedness and ill nature on the members of the family. Chaps or women of this kind may observe outward forms of piety and say long prayers at the kirk, but their petitions are pretty shoddy articles, which never rise above their heads.

With every recurring spring there is brought home the need of the enactment of laws in all the states which will put a stop to the spring shooting of wild fowl. Not only are the birds in poor flesh from their scant fare and long sustained migratory flights, but very often they are paired for the season. They have usually run the gantlet of a good deal of gunning in their southern haunts, and humanity would suggest that they be allowed to make their way north in the spring unmolested.

Lettuce is at its best when the plants form a head, as does cabbage, and to do this they must have room. The most satisfactory way to get a fine bed is to scatter a few of the seeds of a good variety broadcast, then when the little plants have put out their second or third leaf transplant them with a little earth attached to the roots in a bed, setting them about eight inches apart each way. The job is best done during a spell of wet weather, though it can be done in the evening and the newly set plants given a good watering. Lettuce is a succulent plant and requires abundant moisture during the growing period.

Arsenate of lead is preferable to paris green as an insecticide because it is more finely divided, stays in solution longer without settling and sticks to the foliage more tenaciously during a wet spell. Besides this, it does not burn the foliage, as is sometimes the case with paris green. It may be used alone in water or in connection with the lime-sulphur or bordeaux mixture. It should be applied within an interval of ten days after the petals fall, before the calyx cups close, and thereafter at intervals, which depend upon the time at which the eggs of subsequent broods of the codling moth are laid. The arsenate should be used at the rate of from two to two and a half pounds to fifty gallons of water.

There is many an old and neglected orchard which could be made a source of profit if proper measures were taken to make it so. The chances are if it has been allowed to grow at will that it is too high, with the result that spraying and harvesting operations are expensive. The first step in the process of rejuvenation should be severe pruning, and the job should be done as soon as possible. Such trees should be cut back to a height of twenty feet. They will look done for when the pruning work is completed, but will throw out numerous new shoots, from which the new top can be made. A year from now these should be thinned out some and cut back if the year's growth has been too great. Of course judgment should be used in doing the work, the aim being to produce a satisfactory and shapely head. All wounds larger than an inch in diameter should be covered with grafting wax or painted with thick white lead. It need not be said that if such an orchard is affected with San Jose scale it should be sprayed with the lime-sulphur solution, and if with apple scab or other fungous disease with a diluted self boiled lime-sulphur solution or with the bordeaux mixture. If an orchard is not worth this much care in way of pruning and spraying it is better rooted out entirely.

The chain letter business is one that ought to be discouraged by all sensible people, and it matters not whether it is a prayer chain, postage stamp chain or what not. The proper destination for all of these epistles is the wastebasket or fire, and the sooner they are put there the more quickly will the nuisance end.

Some tests with fertilizers which have been made by the Ohio experiment station show that the addition of forty pounds of acid phosphate to a ton of barnyard manure nearly doubles its value as a crop producer. This fact should be kept in mind by all owners of farms whereon too small an amount of homemade fertilizer is produced.

Readers of these notes who get three square meals daily with a bite between if they want it will have a better idea of what the famine is in portions of northern China when they know that the best fare of these starving people is cakes made of leaves and stems mixed with millet chaff. This has been supplemented by the bark from most of the trees.

A Great Battle Painter

How He Got His Start

By GERALD L. PERKINS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The battle of Gravelotte had been fought; a smoke mist still hung over the field, though in the gathering darkness it was gradually becoming imperceptible. A man carrying a portfolio and paraphernalia necessary to sketching left the field and, making his way to a hut on a hill overlooking the scene of the engagement that had occurred that day between the French and the Prussians, entered the hut and asked if he might have some supper.

"Certainly, monsieur," said a woman who was there, "but we can give you very little. The soldiers of both armies have taken all we have except a few bits that we hid in the cellar. Come, Fanchette, bestir yourself and set the table!"

The table was set and the supper put upon it. The stranger sat down, and Fanchette poured into his glass some of the cheap wine of the country. She was between seventeen and eighteen years old, a simple French maid who had no secrets from any one in the world.

"You wear a sad look, Fanchette," said the stranger. "Is it from seeing the slaughter today?"

"No, monsieur. I did not look that way."

"Well, then, tell me what troubles you."

"It is this, monsieur. Antoine Brisson went out among the fighting and received a wound. He is lying now in the next room."

"He is your brother?"

"No, monsieur."

"Well, then, he is your lover?"

To this the only reply was eyes cast upon the floor.

"What was he doing out there—fighting?"

"No, monsieur; he has not yet become a conscript. He will not be the age for a month."

"Well, then, what business had he on a battlefield?"

"Sketching!"

"Sketching? That's what I was doing there. When I have finished my supper I will go in and see him."

The stranger chatted on with the girl and easily gleaned from her that she and Antoine could not marry because she had no dot. After having supped and smoked a pipe the artist went into the room where Antoine was lying. The boy had received a flesh wound, but not of sufficient importance to endanger his life.

"So you were making sketches of the fight?" said the artist. "That is my business. I have been drawing for one of the Paris illustrated papers. Let me see what you have done."

Fanchette took an improvised portfolio that she had made for her lover of two pieces of pasteboard laced together with a string and brought it to the artist. There were blood stains on it, but he did not mind that. He had seen plenty of blood that day. He opened the portfolio, took out what there was in it—five or six sketches—and began to look them over.

"Where did you learn to sketch?" he asked the boy.

"I have never learned, monsieur," he replied.

"Never studied in an art school; never had any instruction?"

"No, monsieur."

The artist went on looking at the sketches one after the other and when he had seen them all looked at them again. Then he turned his eyes to the boy on the bed.

"Do you know, my boy, that my paper sent me here to make sketches of this battle? I have graduated at the art school with honors, and yet you who have never taken a lesson have done what I cannot do."

"What do you mean, monsieur?" asked the boy, his eyes opening very wide, while Fanchette was all attention.

"You are a born battle painter. You have put into these crude sketches an action that I have not been able to put in mine. And you have known what scenes to select. Your soldiers move; they fight; they are impelled by the demon of war; they die—really die, while mine—well, mine beside yours are like toy soldiers."

"Oh, monsieur," exclaimed Fanchette, clasping her hands, "how good you are to say that!"

"Good to say that! I'm not talking to please you. I'm telling you the truth. And, to prove what I say, if Antoine when he has recovered will come to Paris I am sure I can interest art lovers in him who will see that he receives instruction."

"Oh, monsieur," replied Fanchette, "how can he do that? He has no money. He would have to walk to Paris."

"Not at all. I will take these sketches with me. They will be used in one of the illustrated papers and will be well paid for. The money received for them I will send to Antoine."

The same night, having hired a conveyance, the artist set out posthaste for Paris. Antoine's sketches were produced and created a sensation. The money paid for them was sent him. He went to Paris, where, owing to the interest created by his pictures he was taken up and educated by the paper that published them.

All this occurred forty years ago, and the great battle painter has flourished and passed away. His widow loves to tell how he got his start.

ORCHARD HEATING.

The question of heating orchards during frosty nights to prevent a destruction of the bloom has passed beyond the experimental stage, and this year every level headed orchardist who lives in a latitude that is likely to be visited by a spring frost when the trees are in bloom should make preparations at once to safeguard himself against frost damage. Where it can be procured at a price of from 4 to 6 cents per gallon crude petroleum will serve the purpose as well or better than any other material and has the advantage that, being in a covered pot, it is not rendered useless by a rain, as is quite often the case with wood or litter of several kinds. There are several good oil burners on the market, and those made without soldered joints are preferable. Experience has shown that about fifty burners should be used per acre and so set that the wind will blow the smoke and heat from them into the limbs of the trees. In a majority of cases the critical—coldest—time during a night in which frost occurs is between 3 and 6 a. m., and the burners should be held in readiness until the time mentioned. Frequently conditions prevailing in the early evening will indicate a frost later, but a change of wind may prevent it. Two or three thermometers of a good make should be stationed through the orchard so as to keep tab on the temperature. It is well to remember that both apple and peach blossoms in full bloom will stand from four to five degrees of frost without serious damage; hence if only two or three degrees of frost threaten it will not be necessary to make more than a smudge on the east side of the orchard just before sunup so as to prevent a too rapid thawing of the blossoms. Stumps, cordwood, brush and other litter have also been used with good results, fewer fires being required with materials making a larger blaze and giving more heat. In some of the orange growing sections of California orchards of from fifty to a hundred acres have been protected by driving through them in the early morning hours low wagons bearing fires so fed as to make dense smudges. Whatever method be followed in protecting the orchard from frost, preparations for heating or smudging should be made well in advance so that one will not be taken unawares. Instances are numerous where the money spent in orchard heating has been returned manifold in the crop return of a single season.

TEACHING THE CALF TO DRINK.

It is amusing sometimes to see the somewhat lengthy dissertations on teaching the calf how to drink, as if it were a matter of considerable difficulty. There are a few simple precautions that make the matter relatively easy—at least the writer has found them so in his own experience. In the first place, the calf will learn to drink the more quickly if it hasn't acquired the habit of sucking. It is well to take the little chap away from the mammy after it has her udder cleaned out in good shape. In the case of inexperienced persons the job is aggravated by going at it wrong way to. It is well to be friendly with the hungry little bovine, and with this idea in view straddle its back, give it two fingers and when it has got a good grip on them gently lower the head into the pail, keeping the fingers far enough apart so that the milk will pull between them. Keep the little brute's nostrils above the milk line and when it is getting a good draft of milk withdraw the fingers. It will shortly want something to suck besides its tongue, and the fingers will have to be returned to the mouth, but gone at in this way it will not be long before the calf will drink in an entirely satisfactory way.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR FEEDING STEERS.

The past winter saw the first sack of cottonseed meal shipped into the section in which the writer lives. It costs laid down $34.50 per ton, which is about a dollar less than the price of linseed oil meal, and this notwithstanding the fact that the chemical analysis shows that the former feed contains nearly 10 per cent more protein than the latter. This makes a cheap and excellent source of protein, while numerous experiments which have been made show that, given in a proper ration with corn, about one to ten, feeding animals do exceptionally well on it. The feeder who is trying this cotton seed meal for the first time is also feeding with it equal parts of alfalfa, which is a prepared feed made of ground alfalfa leaves and stems and molasses. This contains a trifle less than 20 per cent of protein and costs about $5 per ton laid down. Notwithstanding the high price at which they are sold, this use of these protein concentrates makes possible a more economical ration than if corn should be used exclusively.

In all too many instances a fellow's attitude on this matter of bovine tuberculosis depends upon whether it is up to him to drink the milk or eat the flesh of animals affected with the disease or whether he has some of them on his hands that he is anxious to get rid of and lose as little as possible.

Contrary to an idea that seems to have got root in the minds of some folk here and there, careful experiments with the tuberculin test prove conclusively that the application of tuberculin will not only not cause tuberculosis in a healthy animal, but has no harmful effect whatever upon an animal that is affected with tuberculosis or other disease.

The one great point in favor of corn silage is that it comes nearer than any other winter ration to duplicating the succulence of the lush grasses of May and June. It is because of this fact that stock is so fond of silage and that the feeding of it results in such a generous milk flow in the dairy cow and the rapid gain in flesh of the other farm animals to which it is fed.

If the writer ever had any doubt that birds know a good thing when they see it, it was dispelled last season when he noted the certainty with which they singled out the ripest and reddest checked peaches and devoured them completely, leaving nothing but the pit hanging to the limb. Other fruit in garden and on mountain slope was scarce at the time, and this doubtless accounts for the trespass of these feathered friends.

While it is a mighty fine thing for the farmer to have an automobile and all right for him to do so if he has the money in the bank with which to purchase the machine, it is a very questionable procedure for any fellow who has to increase his indebtedness to buy one. We have in mind a fellow who did just this thing, and in the end it meant that he lost the farm, as he couldn't get his money's worth out of the machine without using it, and he couldn't do this without neglecting the farm work.

One of the reasons why the dairy cows give the largest returns in milk yield in May and June is that the water they drink does not chill them to the bone. This condition can be reproduced in the winter by warming the drinking water with a tank heater by the use of cobs or other fuel instead of making the cow do the job, utilizing corn and other high priced feeds for the purpose. Every bit of heat which the cow has to furnish in the warming of ice cold water means that the energy and vitality which she can devote to milk production are reduced by just so much.

In all too many co-operative creameries the buttermaker is kept tied down too closely to scrubbing, cleaning and stoking work when this could be done just as well by much cheaper help and the buttermaker given this time to inquire more carefully into the stable and milk house conditions to be found on the farms of the several hundred patrons of the creamery. Owing to this shortsighted effort at economy there is little question that creameries of this type lose thousands of dollars annually, which they might just as well save in an improved butter quality by giving their buttermaker more help, thus enabling him to give them more of his service as a specialist.

Persons afflicted with tuberculosis would do well to keep in mind the curative power of fresh air, whether in the east, west, north or south. Many people of limited means might better stay at home, using the precautions they would take elsewhere of sleeping and living in the open air, in the meantime enjoying the comforts of home than to go to some far away, strange place without means sufficient for real needs. Still another class might as well stay at home, those who have money, but who go and live in stuffy boarding houses in some large city keeping late hours and disregarding the fundamental requirements of health with the expectation that climate alone will work a cure, and that without its being given a fair show.

VOL. XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 20, 19 NUMBER 17

PARTIALLY DESTROYED

Building Occupied by Engen & Sons Confectionery Visited By Fire.

Fire Discovered About Twelve O'-Clock Friday Night.

The fire department was called out about 12 o'clock last Friday night to extinguish a fire in the Grundy building on 3rd street that is occupied by Engen & Sons confectionery store.

The fire which it is thought had originated from an over-heated stove in the back room had gained considerable headway when it was discovered and had it not been for the heroic work of the fire department on their arrival the entire building would have been destroyed and the buildings adjoining endangered.

The stock of confections, cigars, etc., was almost totally destroyed by fire and water, but is covered by insurance. The interior of the building was pretty well demolished but will be repaired immediately.

Dredges Now In Operation.

The first actual work on Judicial ditch No. 11, in this vicinity was performed Tuesday when the big walking dredge which was built here last winter, began to dig the ditch on the section line just east of this place, which is about seven miles in length. The floating dredge which is located on the main ditch about 8 miles west of this place has been in operation for nearly a week. The other floating dredge which is located about 8 miles east of this place is expected to commence work in a few days. With three dredges in operation so early in the season it will no doubt make a great change in this country by the time it freezes up this fall. Landseekers have come and gone saying it would be years before this country would be drained, but it is a settled fact now that they were mistaken and the pioneer homesteaders who have stayed by their claims through the hardships are the ones who will reap the first benefit of this great drainage system.

It won't be long until the railroad companies find out what a vast, rich country we have here, then, they will only be too glad to extend their roads in here.--Watch the progress of eastern Marshall and northwestern Beltrami counties.--Grygla Eagle.

Bridge Ready for Travel.

The work of repairing the bridge accross the Thief river about one mile north of "Squaw Point" is now completed and the bridge has been thrown open for traffic again. With these repairs and improvements the bridge is in a very good condition and will stand the strain of heavy travel for some time to come.

Larson Goes to Crookston.

N. N. Larson, who has been buttermaker at the St. Hilaire creamery for some time, has gone to Crookston where he has taken up his work with the Bridgeman-Russell Co.

Horse Stealing Case All Wrong.

Reports from East Grand Forks are to the effect that an alleged horse stealing which created quite a stir among the authorities turned out to be only a case of mistaken identity and all things were righted without legal action. A well known farmer drove to the city Saturday with a new horse which he had purchased that day. Late at night he identified his horse at the livery barn and drove home. Later John Powers came for his equine and found it missing. The police were at once notified and all surrounding cities notified of the stealing. A man driving into Red Lake Falls leading a horse behind his rig was arrested but released when he had proved that he had not been near that city.

It was Wednesday morning before this farmer drove into the city and noticed his mistake, being approached by the authorities as soon as the horse was recognized. After a long story he was hurried to the Smith & Sinclair livery barn, claimed his own horse, paid all telephone calls to the sheriff and then ordered the "treats" for the crowd.

Returns To Minneapolis.

Walter Reynolds, a once well-to-do coal dealer in Minneapolis who thru an accident some time ago became blind was in the city last week, accompanied by his wife, enroute to Minneapolis from Middle River.

Mr. Reynolds thru his accident lost every opportunity of self support and with the aid of his wife decided to settle on a farm.

He leased a farm near Middle River for three years from a party in the Twin Cities and moved his household goods and farm implements to Middle River some time ago. On his arrival he found the land mostly covered with poplar trees and the house not fit for habitation.

He was down to Minneapolis last week to endeavor to get redress from the misrepresentatives of his landlord but his mission was of no avail. He is leaving the farm upon advice of his attorney, in whose hands the matter now is, and may decide to again locate in Minneapolis.

May Go Thru to Ambrose, N. D.

According to reports a change may be wrought in the schedule of passenger trains on the Soo's Wheatline within a short time. The passenger trains on this line are at present only running as far as Kenmare, N. D., and the plan on foot is to have these trains run thru to Ambrose, N. D., a distance of about 70 miles from Kenmare. The facilities for the passenger traffic on this strip of road at present, it is claimed, is insufficient to meet the demands and the most satisfactory manner in which to remedy this is to run the Wheatline trains over that line.

With this change the trains will leave this city considerably earlier than at present, possibly about 6 o'clock a. m., and will get to its destination between ten and eleven o'clock at night.

BALL TEAM ORGANIZED

Association Perfected at a Meeting Held Last Monday Evening.

First Game of Season Will Be Played With Travelers Sunday.

Anyone entertaining the idea that the baseball worm will be allowed to lay dormant this summer, as far as this city is concerned, will have another guess coming to their credit. Friends of the national game who are not desirous to see this sport fall into oblivion have taken hold of the matter and prophesy that the team to represent the city this year will be as good as any that has ever graced the local diamond. Enough good material is at hand right in this city with which to make up a crack team.

At a meeting held Monday night at the Flynn barber shop officers were elected and committees appointed to represent the team. The line-up has been partially drawn up, but will not be fully decided upon until after the first try-out of the season. The association is particularly desirous to have everyone who has played ball before to confer with anyone representing the team and be present at the practice. The team this year will be made up entirely of home players and with the material at hand promises to be as fast as any that has represented the team in former years.

The following are the officers elected and the committee appointed:

Chas. Peterson, Manager.
Alfred Warner, Secretary.
Fred Niclai, Treasurer.
Board of Directors--Fred Niclai, O. Torrison, Chas. Peterson.

O. Torrison and George Curran were appointed a committee to secure the paraphernalia, etc.

Soliciting Committee--Geo. Curran, Joe Flynn, O. Torrison, Chas. Peterson, Fred Niclai.

The next meeting of the association will be held on May 1st.

The initial game of the season will be played between the locals and the Commercial Travelers at the fair grounds next Sunday afternoon and promises to be a fast game. Everyone should turn out and boost for their respective teams.

With the additional railroad facilities this year it is safe to prophesy that our team will be able to secure enough games to keep it on the jump.

Stop The Killing Of Birds.

The vicious and wanton killing of birds has got to stop according to Game warden Munch. Mayors and heads of police departments, teachers and parents are to be asked to co-operate in the endeavor to impress upon children, young men and boys that the useless slaughter of birds must stop or there will be trouble.

The St. Paul Humane society gives the following reasons why birds should not be killed.

Because our laws forbid it.

Because they trust us, and cheer our lives by their beauty and their songs.

Because we have it on the best authority that they destroy each year in one state only, more than 2,000,000 of noxious worms and insects.

"Drummers' Dance To-morrow Night.

To-morrow night at the Auditorium will occur the dance given by the Commercial Travelers in this city. The traveling men have used every effort to make this event a "swell" social affair and expect to entertain a small multitude of people. Close to 125 tickets have been sold so far, which includes quite a number from neighboring towns, but this number will be greatly increased before the event takes place.

Mail Clerks Appeal.

Washington, April 17.--Railway mail clerks of the northwest are appealing to their representatives in congress for influence in behalf of the clerks who were recently reduced in position for promoting an affiliation of their secret organization with the American Federation of Labor.

Representatives Stevens, Miller, Anderson and Hanna have received telegrams since Saturday night asking them to urge the reinstatement of the men. The telegrams refer more particularly to the cases of C. C. Vandyke and C. S. Duff. Representative Nye said today that he received no request of this nature.

Representative Anderson, who, so far as known, is the only member who has yet conferred with the department upon the matter of the transfer of clerks, was given no satisfaction by the department officials. "The department has apparently determined its policy, and is not disposed to reconsider its action," said Mr. Anderson today.

State Land Sale.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson will place on the market more than 200,000 acres of state school land beginning May 8. There will be fifteen sales with offgrings of lots from 5,000 to 50,000 acres. The sales are listed as follows:

May 8, International Falls, Koochiching county, 5,000 acres; May 10, Bemidji, Beltrami county, 8,500 acres; May 12, Walker, Cass county, 30,000 acres; May 16, Carlton, Carlton county, 10,000 acres May 17, Duluth, St. Louis county, 20,000 acres; May 19, Aitkin, Aitkin county, 30,000 acres; May 22, Roseau, Roseau county, 50,000 acres; May 24, Hallock, Kittson county, 25-000; May 25, Warren, Marshall county, 35,000 acres; May 26, Crookston, Polk county, 8,000 acres; May 27, Moorhead, Clay county, 5,000 acres; June 1, Detroit Becker county, 16,000 acres; June 2, Wadena, Wadena county, 10,000 acres; June, 3, Long Prairie, Todd county, 6,000 acres.

Dies in City Bastile.

A man by the name of Thomas Dooney died in the city jail at Red Lake Falls last week. Little or nothing is known of the man's history or where he hailed from, except that, apparently, he was a vagrant and when taken into custody was a physical wreck.

Papers in his possession indicate that in 1902 he was engaged in market gardening in Crookston. In 1904 he filed on a claim in the town of Goodridge this county, and on this he had made four payments but had not lived on the place for two years.

German Lutheran Church

F. J. Seltz, Pastor.

Services next Sunday morning at 10:30, Sunday school at 9:30.

There will also be special services together with the celebration of Holy Communion next Wednesday evening beginning at 7.30. The service will be conducted by visiting pastors, who will be in Thief River attending the conference of the Red River Valley district of the German Lutheran church.

The Ladies Aid Society of the German Lutheran church meets with Mrs. G.W. Booren next Wednesday afternoon April 26th. You are invited.

Marshall County Farmer Passes Away

A. J. Nestvold, of the town of Adgar, Marshall county, died last Saturday from heart disease.

The deceased is 59 years of age and leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss.

The funeral was held last Monday the services being conducted by Rev. Larson of this city.

Huntington Passes Over Road.

General Passenger Agent Huntington of the Soo Line was in the city last week and went over the Wheatline Thursday in his special car as far as Kenmare, N. D.

M. E. DIST. MEETING,

Held in the M. [illegible] of This Week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

About Thirty Delegates Were Present --More Were Expected.

The Fergus Falls district conference of the Methodist Episcopal church was in session Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

About thirty-delegates were present at this meeting, but many more were expected who failed to arrive.

Rev. A. H. McKee, district superintendant presided and the address of welcome was delivered by J. H. Hay of Thief River Falls and the response made by Rev. C. H. Flesher of Bemidji. The conference sermon was preached by Rev. R. G. Greene, Akeley, and was replete with good thought and inspiring to those who were privileged to hear him. The program covers three days and two evenings, in which all the visiting clergymen will take some active part.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society had charge of the Tuesday evening meeting and Miss Martha Nicholson of China delivered an address.

This conference has 3,852 members, and 261 probationers. It has seventy-one Sunday schools with 875 teachers and officers and 6,396 scholars. In this district are sixty-two churches worth $184,000 and thirty-nine parsonages worth $44,650. The churches paid for improvements and indebtedness during the last year $24,000.

Warren to Have Civic League.

An organization to be known as The Civic League of Warren war perfected last week by a number of our citizens, by the election of the following officers: O. A. Abrahamson, president; J. W. Thomas, vice-president. H. L. Wood, secretary and treasurer. The first public meeting of the association will be held at the opera house tonight, and everybody is invited to attend. The object of the League's existance is to aid in the moral and material betterment of the community and to render the civil authorities all possible assistance in their efforts to inforce the laws of the state. Organizations of this character exist in many cities and have accomplished an immense amount of good in exposing public wrongs and abuses and in helping to correct them and to punish law breakers.--Warren Register.

Malt Bill Passed.

Senator Hanson's malt bill has been signed by Governor Eberhart and is now a law, altho it will not go into effect until July 1, next. The new law prohibits the sale of malt, intoxicating or non-intoxicating, in any place other than a licensed saloon, except that it may be sold by drug stores for medical purposes only. Brewers and saloon men declare the new bill is satisfactory to the liquor dealers as they believe it will increase the sale of beer.

Health Officers Notice.

Clean up! Clean up!

Notice is hereby given that all garbage and manure piles, [and other nuisances must be removed by May 15, 1911.

Special pains will be taken this spring to have the streets and alleys of the city in as good condition as possible, on account of the large number of stranger expected.

Signed,
Henry Grundy, H. O.

Robertson's Bazaar.

Levi O. Robertson is having the building next door north of Brown's confectionery store painted and remodeled this week preparatory to opening up his bazaar some time next week. This store will be known as Robertson's Bazaar.

Back From Canada.

We seldom pick up an exchange but that we find chronicled the return of a former Minnesota resident from Canada, where they had been lured by [illegible] or the [illegible] circulars and pamphlets [illegible] the untold wealth that is offered [illegible] but leaves the fertile fields of Minnesota for the vaster and greater fields of fertility in the Canadian country.

The following [illegible] by one who has returned from Western Canada [illegible] and who will make his home here ought to do a warning to those who are contemplating making the change:

He says that the times are hard out there and not anything like what it is pictured to prospective settlers. They are still having full winter and all the snow is still on the ground. The summers are short and frosts come at any time and he could not see how it was possible to make a success out of farming out there. He says people are flocking in continually and settling up the numerous little towns and surrounding territory but that the backward stream to Uncle Sam's land is steadily increasing and there are many more who would go if they could and that the only thing that is keeping the country up is the fact that the greater number of those who come in have money to invest and they remain hopeful until their roll is gone. Then is the time they discover that the devil is worse than the deep sea and if they can they get out.

Eclipse of Sun.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun April 28, visible as a partial eclipse throughout the greater part of the United States and down to Panama, over the Middle Pacific ocean and Eastern Australia. The path of totality lies wholly in the ocean passing over some groups of islands. This city will be close to the northern limit of visibility of the partial eclipse and a little entering of the dark moon on the southern limit of the sun may be detected about three-quarters of an hour before sunset.

The Distance Tariff Bill Defeated.

With but little debate and while deserted by all friends but its author, the distance tariff bill was put to death by the railroad committee in the senate Monday.

Only one vote was cast in its favor, that of Senator Cashman. All others agreed that its enactment at present would annihilate the great rate cases decided by Judge Sanborn before they could be appealed to the supreme court of the United States.

Fire Hall Nearly Completed

The work of erecting the fire hall at the foot of Atlantic avenue, adjoining the pumping station is progressing rapidly and it is expected the building will be ready for occupancy in about a week or ten days. The dimensions of the building are 18X40 feet and is one story high.

Commissioners' Meeting Saturday.

The county commissioners will hold a meeting next Saturday afternoon and will open the sealed bids for the remodeling of the court house.

Notice.

On account of the increase of business, I have now moved my Book-Bindery from my home to Room No. 1, over First National Bank, where it will be easier for patrons to find me. It is a pleasure to state that I find Thief River Falls an excellent location for this work. I wish to extend my hearty thanks to those whom I have already had the opportunity to do work for, and invite the remaining public to call and see

MAIL CLERKS UP IN ARMS

Resent Dismissal of Leaders in Newly Formed Brotherhood.

Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock struck again at the newly organized Brotherhood of Railway Mail Clerks by discharging Clyde L. Duff of St. Paul for alleged "pernicious activity in endeavoring to foment discontent on the part of fellow employes in the railway mail service."

Duff's resignation is requested at once and he is ordered to report for duty as soon as possible as a postoffice clerk at Minneapolis. Friday Mr. Hitchcock dismissed Carl C. Van Dyke, another St. Paul mail clerk, on similar grounds and appointed him a clerk in the St. Paul postoffice. Duff's transfer carries with it a reduction of $200 a year in salary. Neither Van Dyke nor Duff has decided whether they will take the positions offered.

As a result of the two dismissals, which are viewed as a renewal of the department's attack on the individual clerks, the railway mail men of the Tenth division are up in arms.

SCORE OF FIREMEN HURT

Only Two Sustain Injuries of Serious Nature.

Twenty-two firemen went down with the roof of the Greve block at St. Paul and Assistant Chief Miles McNally and Pipeman Nicholas Remakel were badly hurt. Remakel was taken to St. Joseph's hospital and Chief McNally to his home. Five or six of the others were badly cut and bruised, but none, it is believed, outside of the two mentioned, was seriously hurt.

The men were working on the roof under the false front of the building, when, almost without a moment's warning, the front fell over on the men, carrying them, with the roof, to the floor below.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Agua Prieta has surrendered to the Mexican insurrectos after one of the most spectacular battles of the Mexican insurrection. There are many dead and wounded, including one American dead, E. W. Crow, who was struck by a stray bullet in Douglas. Others in Douglas were wounded. This is the first time during the insurrection that any person has been killed on the American side as the result of the border fighting.

The "champagne riots" continue in sections of France. Wine cellars are being destroyed and the disorder is spreading in spite of the presence of troops called out to preserve order. The trouble began on the receipt of news from Paris that the senate had passed a resolution in favor of the suppression of all territorial delimitations of the area in which wine can legally be designated as champagne.

Forty or more insurgents were killed and more than 100 were wounded in a battle fought between Sauz and Santa Clara canyon, about fifty miles north of Chihuahua, Mex., according to federal couriers. The couriers brought orders to have hospital cots ready for the federal wounded. The federals report five killed, but later developments may change the figures.

Two hundred men, women and children were burned to death at Bombay, British India, in a conflagration which destroyed a thatched structure in which they had gathered for a festival. Five hundred persons were in the building when the fire broke out. There was only one exit and an indescribable panic ensued.

The $50,000,000 loan to China by a group of American and European financiers, negotiations for which have been going on for some time, has been signed at Peking. The loan of $50,000,000 will be used in furnishing currency reforms and other interests of the Chinese empire.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

PASSES THE LOWER HOUSE

One Branch of the Legislature Favors the Adoption of a Distance Tariff Bill.

The distance tariff bill, a duplicate of the Cashman bill, passed the lower house of the legislature by a vote of 62 to 56 and the bill was again put up to the senate. H. H. Dunn, who had championed it on the floor of the house, moved for a reconsideration and a roll call was demanded. The vote was 27 yeas and 70 nays, so the house is through with the measure unless the senate should amend it and pass it.

The senate bill appropriating $100,000 for experimental and demonstation farms at Duluth and Waseca passed the house by a vote of 75 to 39.

By a vote of 34 to 23 the senate applied what Senators Clague and J. D. Sullivan described as "a coat of whitewash" to F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the state training school for boys at Red Wing, and struck from the majority report of the investigating committee the recommendation that he, his assistant superintendent, Mr. Dorr, and Family Managers Stopplemann and Metzold, be dismissed from service. It was the same action as was taken by the house.

Killed by Senate Committee.

With little debate and deserted by all friends but its author, the distance tariff bill was put to death by the railroad committee in the senate. Only one vote was cast in its favor—that of Senator Cashman. All others agreed that its enactment at present would annihilate the great rate cases decided by Judge Sanborn before they could be appealed to the supreme court of the United States.

Senator Moonan was chosen to draft the report on the bill recommending it for indefinite postponement. It was the wish of the committee that the merits of the measure be not touched upon and that the report should be based solely upon the fact that the state's attorneys in the rate cases and Attorney General Simpson had held its enactment would jeopardize the standing of the pending suits.

NEWSPAPER MEN GIVEN PAY

State Settles Bills for Publishing of Constitutional Amendments.

Members of the state auditor's staff have been working overtime getting out some of the checks for the newspapers of the state for payment of the publication of the constitutional amendments last fall. The governor signed the three bills granting the pay and several newspaper publishers from out of the city were on hand to get their money.

Statewide primaries may become the general practice in Minnesota, as the house passed the senate bill by a vote of 92 to 17. This was not done, however, until the measure had been amended by providing for a state convention after the primaries to draft a platform and name the state central committee. Thus amended the bill will go back to the senate.

EXTRA SESSION UNLIKELY

Reapportionment in Minnesota Dead for Two Years.

The Hanson reapportionment bill was unceremoniously killed by the state senate so quickly that it was all over before some of those present knew what happened.

It is generally understood that Governor Eberhart will not call an extra session to take up reapportionment. The governor has made no definite statement, however. In reply to a direct question he said:

"I am satisfied no reapportionment bill will be passed by this senate. If it continues to appear that the passage of such a bill now is futile it would be a waste of the public funds to call an extra session."

GOES BACK TO THE SENATE

Minnesota House Amends and Passes Recall Bill.

The recall bill is again up in the senate. It was passed by the house by a vote of 104 to 14, but it was amended so that it will be necessary for the senate to repass it.

That the Crane distance tariff bill, a duplicate of the Cashman measure, passed by the house, will be reported to the senate for indefinite postponement by the committee on railroads, became evident at a meeting of the committee.

Boy Kills His Sister.

Stella Kabet, aged twenty, daughter of John Kabet, residing near Ivanhoe, died as the result of a gunshot wound inflicted upon her accidentally by a younger brother who in walking away from the Kabet home swung the gun across his shoulder and in so doing caused the weapon to be discharged. The entire charge entered the girl's back.

ST. PAUL ENTERTAINS COLONEL ROOSEVELT

Former President Discourses on Live Issues of the Day.

St. Paul was host for several hours to the country's first private citizen—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. He arrived on time and he left on time. He was welcomed cordially by thousands upon thousands of people, lined up along all the streets that he traversed in the course of his journey, first from the Union station to the St. Paul hotel, where he was tendered a reception and given a dinner, and from there to the state capitol, where he spoke for nearly an hour to the members of the legislature of Minnesota and their guests.

He was given the president's salute of twenty-one guns upon his arrival on a Northern Pacific train. He was escorted to the Saint Paul by Governor Eberhart, committees of distinguished citizens of the state and by companies of the national guard in heavy marching equipment.

The popular election of United States senators, the initiative and referendum, the recall, the primary, the workmen's compensation act and the state control of water powers—all measures then pending before the Minnesota legislature—were given the strong approval of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in his address to the members of the legislature and their friends in the house chamber.

STATE WINS TRESPASS CASE

Federal Supreme Court Refuses to Pass on Litigation.

For want of jurisdiction the federal supreme court dismissed the appeals of the Rat Portage Lumber company and the Le Sueur Lumber company in their litigation with the state of Minnesota.

The decision leaves in force the judgment of the supreme court of Minnesota, which gives the state damages for trespass by the lumber companies on the state school lands.

WISH FOR DEATH GRATIFIED

St. Paul Man Contracts Pneumonia in Plunge From Bridge.

Charles W. Johnson of St. Paul, forty years old, the street car motorman who jumped from the Robert street bridge several days ago, is dead at the city hospital.

Pneumonia was the direct cause of death, Johnson having apparently escaped any serious injury in the 100-foot plunge from the bridge into the river, whence he was rescued by boatmen.

Man Killed by Joy Riders.

Esaias Hagman was instantly killed by an automobile within a block of his home at Minneapolis. The machine did not stop and shortly after the accident Policeman C. Anderson arrested two men in an automobile, which was covered with mud, and gave every appearance of having been used in a joy ride.

Aged Man Killed by Auto.

While learning to drive her automobile Miss Gertrude Schurmeier of St. Paul, daughter of the late Gustav T. Schurmeier, ran her machine into Frank Shimon, an old employe of the street paving department, and killed him instantly. He was sixty-eight years old. No arrest was made.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Leo Smith, thirty-five years old, was drowned in the Mississippi at Dresbach, a few miles below Winona. While fishing with a companion he attempted to row across a dam. The craft became grounded and in attempting to liberate it the small boat filled with water and capsized.

A homesteader named Jacob Sanderland fell in with two "big mitt" men at Duluth and advanced one of them $100 on a check against the "Bank of Laughter," calling for [illegible] minutes of laughter for a small sum, an advertising method of a Twin City theater.

It is a shame the way women have been obliged to use sewing machines that cause aching backs, tired limbs, annoyances with broken threads, broken needles, uneven stitches, ugly dust, etc., etc.

It is because we know that in The FREE all of these faults have been overcome, that we offer this marvelous machine at our customers' own terms, even as low as $1.00, and at a price so low that we do not dare to tell you what it is in this advertisement, because then you would not be able to appreciate what a perfect machine it really is. And it is for the same reason that we want you to take The FREE on

30 Days Trial In your Home

We believe that The FREE Sewing Machine with its score of thoroughly up-to-date improvements will revolutionize the sewing machine business just as soon as the women of this country can find out first hand just how light running, how fast sewing, how beautiful, how perfect stitching "The FREE" is. That's why we want you to test for 30 days, sew on it for 30 days. Try this machine—test it—sew with it on all kinds of material—if you then are not entirely satisfied—if you are not convinced that it is the best machine you have ever sewed on—the most improved, the most up-to-date—if the low price does not convince you that this is the biggest bargain you have ever bought, return the machine to us and we will refund your deposit so that the trial will not cost you one cent.

You may have been getting along up to the present time with a machine that hasn't been improved upon for 30 years. SETTING AN ORCHARD.

Doubtless quite a number of our readers will be setting an orchard for the first time this spring, and a few suggestions may be helpful. With a view to saving ground the novice often makes the mistake of setting the trees too close together. We have known of cases where they were set twice as thick in the row as intended ultimately, but the trouble with this is that a fellow seldom has the courage to cut out every other tree after it has grown several years and begun to bear. It is better to put the trees the right distance apart at first, putting the ground between to some annual crop, which can be cultivated. Twenty feet apart is about right for peaches, twenty-five for pears and from twenty-eight to forty for apples, depending upon the variety. For family use a selection of varieties, a couple of trees each, may be made so as to give fruit through as long a period as possible. For commercial purposes it is well to set but one or two standard varieties if the acreage is limited and not more than two or three if it is considerable. The trees should be a year old, with well developed fibrous roots, which should be pruned back carefully to a length of about eight or nine inches. The writer has found the easiest way to plant to first set three rows of sight stakes across the field, one at each edge and one through the middle, putting them tree distance apart, next setting similar rows across the field at right angles to these. With this preparation one can sight both ways for position in any part of the field and set a stake accurately without aid of string or measuring rod. With this method one should have the setting board—four feet long, five inches wide, peg notches an inch square cut in the center of each and a notch cut in from one side so as to give a space about an inch square at the exact center of the board. After setting the stake where the tree is to be slip on the board so stake is at center, set stakes in end notches, remove tree stake and board, dig hole, slip tree in, replace setting board and hold tree in place in middle notch while filling in the earth. The trees should be set five or six inches deeper than they stood in the nursery. Within a few days after the trees are set they should be pruned back to a uniform height, from eighteen to thirty inches, depending upon whether one wishes a low or high headed tree. However, the low headed, open topped tree is favored by the majority of the best orchardists.

TRANSPLANTING SHADE TREES.

There are a few points to remember in the transplanting of shade trees that may be helpful to the readers of these notes if they have never had any experience along this line. In the first place, one will get a tree much sooner if he takes a sapling three inches in diameter at the ground than he will with smaller trees but a couple of years from the seed. After the selection of trees has been made the earth should be removed from the roots within a radius of two feet of the trunk and the lateral roots cut at this point. The tree may then be bent over and the downward growing roots cut so that they will be at least eighteen inches long. The roots should be kept shaded from the sun to prevent drying out while being carried to the place of planting. It is well to prune any torn or broken roots so as to give a clean healing surface. In setting the tree the hole should be dug so as to give plenty of room and the tree set a bit lower than it was in its native haunt. Before the removal from the wood lot where it grew the branches should be cut back so that they will be no longer than the roots. If the season should be very dry the trees should be watered. Trees like the elm should be set not closer than thirty-five feet, and if one is looking a long time ahead forty or fifty feet is none too great a distance. With the hard maple, ash, hackberry, birch, thirty feet is about right. A plan followed by many is to set trees at one-half the desired distance and a few years later thin out. The chief defect with this plan is, however, that the thinning out process is likely to be postponed too long, resulting in a deforming of the trees that remain.

A REAL TIME SAVER.

Before the spring work on the farm begins in earnest it would be an excellent idea for the man of the house to make for his wife a fireless cooker. It will not only be a great saver of fuel, but will save energy and strength for the wife, especially when the heat of summer comes, by eliminating hours over a hot range, which to many women is one of the hardest and most exhausting features of their work. With the hay box, dinner can be started over the morning fire, put into the cooker and left there without further attention until time to serve the meal, when it can be taken up and enjoyed by the housekeeper without being herself half cooked and too tired to eat. The cooker has still another point in its favor, which alone ought to commend it. It is the fact that in cooking none of the flavor of the meat or vegetable can escape, as in ordinary boiling on the top of a stove; hence the dishes so cooked are especially savory. Oatmeal can be started the evening before and after a night in the cooker is hard to beat for breakfast. While the ordinary homemade cooker can be used only for things which are to be boiled or stewed, by the introduction of soapstones browning can be accomplished.

T. C. Trigg

There is probably no phase of neighborly relation in which the Golden Rule finds nicer exemplification than in keeping one's flock of hens shut up when the neighbors have their flower and vegetable gardens nicely spaded, raked and planted.

It is said on good authority that under the system of taxation which prevails in Mexico the peasant—in reality an agricultural slave—pays a larger amount to support the government than does one favored and wealthy family which owns 10,000,000 acres. Little wonder that there is unrest across the border.

The tiller of the soil who understands the chemistry of a spring snow which comes after a part or all of the early seeding is done always welcomes it, for he knows that in addition to the moisture which it contains and its mellowing effect upon the surface soil it deposits a considerable amount of nitrogen, which it absorbs in passing through the air.

Under a recent order from the general land office at Washington 21,830 acres of land surrounding the Wichita national forest in Oklahoma are to be restored to homestead entry and will be subject to entry after May 16 and until June 15. This will be under the usual conditions, which require the payment of $1.25 per acre at the time final proof is made.

A desperate effort has been made by paint and varnish makers to prevent the passage of laws in some of the states which compel the printing on every can of paint or varnish the formula according to which each is put up. One of the arguments which they are offering is that paints and varnishes do not affect the health, hence there is no need of giving the formula. True, this adulteration does not hit a fellow's digestive apparatus, but it surely does his pocketbook, for probably there is more adulteration of paints than of any other product of common use. If the paints are made of good pigments and pure linseed oil there is really no reason why the facts should not be stated on the outside of the package.

Probably no experiment station in the country has done more along the line of poultry investigations than that of Maine. For those of our readers who are interested in poultry raising we give below the receipt used by this station for making lice powder and making a spray for use in the henhouse. To make the powder mix three parts of gasoline with one part crude carbolic acid (or cresol) and add while stirring enough plaster of paris to give, when thoroughly mixed, a dry, pinkish brown powder. As a rule it will take four quarts of the plaster to one of liquid. This should be worked into the feathers, especially around the vent on the lower side of the body and under the wings. A second treatment should be given in four or five days and a third after about the same interval if the birds are badly infested. The wash or spray is made by mixing just before using three parts of kerosene with one part of crude full strength carbolic acid, and this should be applied with a hand spray pump or brush to the interior of the house.

There recently appeared in the daily newspapers of the central states a statement credited to a state dairy inspector to the effect that there was no danger in the use of milk from a tuberculous cow unless the lesions of the disease were actually present in her udder. If milk could be drawn from the udder of a cow under absolutely sanitary conditions—that is, so that no germs could be introduced from the outside—the above statement might be true, but the fact is very little milk is so secured. On the other hand, it has been found that the manure of a cow will contain the germs of tuberculosis long before her milk will, and if particles of the excreta get into the milk, as is true in a majority of cases, without doubt such milk is likely to contain germs of tuberculosis and therefore is unfit for food. Contrasted with the loose and well nigh criminally careless view as expressed above is the opinion of one of the animal husbandry experts of the department of agriculture at Washington—namely, that from the moment a cow has tuberculosis in any part of her body she is a source of danger and is likely to impart the germs to other animals or to human beings.

It is a good time just now for the residents in rural communities, including the teacher and pupils, to begin to make plans for the improvement and beautifying of the schoolhouse and grounds. If the farm homes of certain neighborhoods offer nothing more attractive to the boys and girls proportionately than does the school property, it is small wonder that before they are out of their teens they want to go to town or city where things are more bright and attractive. Among the things which may be done in improving the condition of things referred to in the country school may be mentioned the setting out of a few native trees, such as the elm and hard maple, while the cottonwood and box elder are a good deal better than nothing and may be planted in sections where the rainfall is limited. Two or three beds of flowers should be arranged, and they will be a queer lot of kids if they cannot be interested in the matter of caring for them. Perhaps some carpenter work is needed on house, woodshed or outhouses, while paint will do still more to brighten things up. On the inside of the school building things may be brightened by a few pictures, copies of the best being obtainable at very low prices.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Cut off from escape by flames which barred the exit from the house three little children, Gladys Roth, three years old; Andrew Roth, Jr., two years old, and Evelyn Roth, one year old, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the cottage of Andrew Roth at Minneapolis. Mrs. Roth, the twenty-three-year-old mother of the babies, is in the city hospital in a serious condition as the result of an heroic attempt to rescue the children from the flames.

Three young women missing, four persons severely burned and about a dozen girls more or less seriously burned, represent the known casualties attending an explosion and fire which destroyed McCrory's Five and Ten-Cent store at Connelsville, Pa., with a property loss of about $75,000.

Seventeen men were drowned in a wreck of three barges of the Reading railroad off Provincetown, Mass., according to officers of the three life-saving crews that made a frantic effort to reach them. They declare there were seven men on one barge and five on each of the other two.

A Connecticut gardener, a Mr. Shamel, who is of an experimental turn of mind, has hit upon the plan of applying steam to the soil in his tobacco seeds beds. He has found that keeping the beds up to at least 185 degrees F. for an hour very effectually kills the root rot to which the plants are subject and all other forms of fungous life and all weed seeds which the soil may contain. The steam is applied to the soil by being forced into a rectangular pan of the width of the bed and of a convenient length, which is inverted over the portion of the bed to be steamed. The tobacco seed is sown immediately after the treatment, the soil being in the finest possible condition. Plants started in this sterilized soil have proved to be remarkably strong and thrifty. The plan is recommended not only for tobacco seed beds, but those in which any other kind of plants are raised.

Every indication up to the time of writing this paragraph, March 15, seems to point to an unusually dry season ahead. Last summer, fall and winter constituted a period of unusual shortage of rainfall for all the central and eastern states, the present condition of drought being the more serious because of the unusual dryness of soil for several feet beneath the surface. The snow and rain fall of a year ago, most of which found its way into the soil, was sufficient to insure the maturing of good crops, but there is no such reservoir of moisture to draw on in the coming months, and unless the clouds yield refreshing moisture a most serious condition confronts both farmer and gardener. There is one way in which the results of such possible condition or drought may be reduced—namely, by such thorough preparation of the soil that the least possible moisture which it contains will be lost. This means that the farmer in the usually humid sections will have to adopt "dry farming" tactics. These include a pulverizing and mellowing of the seed bed by repeated disking and harrowing and later the cultivation of all tilled crops. Many followed these methods last season and greatly increased their crop yields. A much larger number will have to adopt them in the coming months if they are to have any return from their land—this, of course, on the assumption that the present dry weather continues. If the land was plowed last fall it will be the easier to conserve its moisture, but if it was not the need of its preparation for the new crop and careful tillage is all the greater.

When the strangers who are expected to visit our city next summer in attendance at the various conventions to be held here, we hope to be able to show them a clean, well kept city and we will tell them of the fine new "Soo Depot" we expect to have in the near future as well as a new up-to-date hotel. That may help.

After an investigation extending over two months during which time more than 1,000 pages of testimony was taken, George Ralph, state engineer has been vindicated. Chairman Cleon T. Knapp of Chisholm presented a majority report yesterday in which the state engineer is exonerated for the most of the charge of incompetency and malfeasance of office. Donald Robertson of Argyle objected to the majority report.

While San Jose scale is more frequently observed on the limbs and trunks of trees which it infests, it often appears on mature fruit. In the case of apples like the yellow Newtown its presence is indicated by small deep red spots slightly raised in the center where the scale is established and shading to a thinner color in much the same way as would a boil or sore on one's hand. Often these scale spots may not appear at the time the fruit is packed, but develop by the time it reaches its destination or is taken from storage.

Import statistics gathered by the department of commerce and labor show that of the coffee imported into the United States in the year ended July, 1910, 97.2 per cent came from South and Central America and Mexico. Of the small remainder, 0.1 of 1 per cent came from Aden and was sold as Mocha, and 1.3 was Java coffee and came from the East Indies. It is interesting to note that, while the import price of all the coffee shipped in from American countries averaged but a small fraction over 8 cents per pound, it cost the consumer from 20 to 35 cents per pound.

While the raising of horses is attended with greater risk than the raising of cattle or sheep, the fact remains that when properly conducted the horse business is one of the most profitable lines of animal husbandry. With prices continuing at present levels one can count on from 10 to 12 cents per pound at from two to three years old, depending upon individuality and type. In this connection it is well worth remembering that it costs no more to raise a fine, well bred animal than it does a scrub, while the returns may be from one and a half to two times as large, and the satisfaction to be had is many times as great.

That bountiful crop production is very closely associated with what we understand as "good times" and prosperity may be realized in the case of the two leading products of the country—corn and cotton. The value of the first in round numbers for 1910 was $1,500,000,000, which is said to be sufficient to pay the interest bearing debt of the United States and exceed by a considerable value all the gold and silver dug out of the earth in the year 1900. The value of the cotton crop for the year just past is placed at $900,000,000, which would be enough to just about wipe out the national debt. When these and numerous other crops aggregating values correspondingly large are produced from the soil of the United States annually it is realized the more readily why our country is one of the wealthiest and most prosperous in all the earth.

AMERICAN FENCE

Made of Hard, Stiff Wire, of Honest Quality

Good Fences are a farm investment that bring the most returns for the least money

ARE you losing money? If you had a hole in your pocket, out of which you were losing hard-earned dollars, would you sew it up? The time has arrived when a fence around the farm is as much a necessity as a cultivator.

If you are feeding 60c or 70c corn to hogs in a dry lot, allowing good, green feed to go to waste on other portions of your farm, you have a hole in your pocket, out of which you are losing good, hard-earned dollars. Sew it up.

Look up an American Fence dealer and let him show you how a few dollars invested in fence will yield a big big rate of interest on feed saved.

American Fence is made of hard, stiff steel. It is made of a quality of wire drawn expressly for woven-wire-fence purposes. Galvanized by latest improved process—the best that the skill and experience of years has taught. Built on the elastic, hinged-joint (patented) principle, which effectually protects the stay or upright wires from breaking under hard usage.

The real test of a fence is the service you get out of it. Test, judge and compare American Fence under any and all conditions, and you will find that the steel, the structure and the galvanizing are equal in durability, strength and efficiency to the hardest usage.

That prepotency is quite as largely an individual matter as of breeding, family and pedigree is nicely shown in some observations which Professor Eckles has made at the Missouri Agricultural college. He found that one of five Jersey bulls in the college herd raised the average annual production of his daughters above their mothers 2,545 pounds of milk and 110 pounds of butter fat, while the daughters of another bull averaged only five pounds more than their mothers. The results in these two instances are striking, and the more so because the bull which made the above exceptional showing was sired by the second, whose daughters showed so little improvement over their dams.

A bright young farmer whom the writer ran across a few days ago wished to get a start in the pure bred horse business. It happened to be Percherons, but might have been any other desirable breed suited to a given purpose. He attended a sale of blooded horses at some distance from his home and picked up one of the brood mares offered. The mare is in foal and this means that in the spring he will have two blooded horses instead of one, and if the youngster is a filly it will mean two producers, while if the foal is of the male persuasion and possesses individuality and merit the animal will probably be worth even more. This method of getting a start is an excellent one not only in the case of horses, but also for cattle, sheep and hogs.

THE SCOLD'S BRIDLE.

Brutal Punishment to Which Women Were Once Subjected.

The brank, or scold's bridle, or gossip's bridle, was neither more nor less than a muzzle. It was in general use in Great Britain from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century, and in Scotland as well women were muzzled for certain offenses, some at least of them more imaginary than real. The instrument of torture, even a dog's leather muzzle, is uncomfortable. How much more the scold's muzzle! It consisted, according to a high authority, Mr. W. Jewitt, of a kind of crown or framework of iron, which was locked upon the head, and it was armed in front with a gag, a plate or a sharp cutting knife or point, which was placed in the poor woman's mouth so as to prevent her moving her tongue, or it was so placed that if she did move it or attempt to speak it was cut in a most frightful manner. With this cage upon her head and with the gag firmly pressed and locked against her tongue the miserable creature, whose sole offending perhaps was that she raised her voice in defense of her social rights against a brutal and besotted husband or had spoken honest truth of some one high in office in her town, was paraded through the streets, led by a chain by the hand of a bellman, the beadle or the constable or chained to the pillory, the whipping post or market cross, to be subjected to every conceivable insult and degradation, without even the power left her of asking for mercy or of promising amendment for the future, and when the punishment was over she was turned out from the town hall or the place where the brutal punishment had been inflicted, maimed, disfigured, bleeding, faint and degraded, to be the subject of comment and jeering among her neighbors.—London Family Herald.

It is as often true of farm animals as of human beings that where there is lack in the matter of shelter there is also carelessness in respect to the bill of fare.

If the hens are not where they have access to it or its equivalent, throw them a bunch of that fragrant alfalfa or clover hay and see how greedily they will go after it.

For the dairyman a pretty good New Year's resolution is the determination to weed out all cows that do not pay for their keep and to pull no teats whose yield of milk does not make the operation a paying one.

Quite naturally conditions which have to do with the comfort of the poultry or farm animals directly affect their health and because of this their ability to produce eggs, milk or meat. In spite of the direct connection in cause and effect, the importance of proper conditions are too often overlooked or ignored.

A rather striking illustration of the effectiveness of the Babcock test as a means of determining the butter fat returns of cows in a dairy herd was related to the writer the other day by the owner of a large herd of pure bred Holstein cows. It was shortly after the introduction of the sulphuric acid test as a means of ascertaining the amount of butter fat in milk. In his dairy barn were two fine looking cows which stood side by side. At the time of the test one was giving thirty-five pounds of milk per day and the other twenty-five pounds, and the rations fed were based on this showing. On applying the Babcock test it was found that the milk of the cow giving the larger amount tested 1.9 per cent of butter fat, while that of the one yielding the smaller amount tested 6 per cent. This meant that the latter cow was giving two and one-fifth times as much butter fat as the former and should have been fed that much more feed instead of less, as had been the case. The reader will likely say that this is an extreme case. It is, but it simply emphasizes the need of applying the test to a herd of cows and weeding out the worthless loafers from those that are really a source of revenue.

There is no ration for furnishing protein for growing pigs which is better than skimmilk, and the farmer who is long headed will see to it that there is as much of it as possible produced on the place.

A dairyman may make a margin of profit on his cows if he does not take a good general farm or dairy paper, but his chances for doing so are much improved if he has at hand in such a publication the best and latest information on the subject.

A chemist of the University of Minnesota has discovered a germicide to which he has given the name benetol. The new chemical is nonpoisonous to animals and human beings, yet is said to be five times as powerful a germ destroyer as carbolic acid.

A few drops of lemon juice in the water in which rice is boiled will help to keep the kernels whole. Plenty of water is another requisite.

The season is at hand when the neighbors' hens constitute a perplexing problem with the one who takes pride in a well kept flower or vegetable garden.

A few days ago a shipload of dressed sheep were sold on the San Francisco market in prime condition. They were brought under refrigeration from Australia, a distance of 7,000 miles, and paid a duty of 5 cents a pound.

While fish make their homes in water they must have oxygen, which is always found in fresh water. It is a lack of this element that causes the death of fish in many a shallow pond and lake during the winter season when the water freezes to a considerable depth and prevents its purification by contact with the air.

The Eagle dam, located 100 miles north of El Paso, on the Rio Grande, the building of which has already been started, will create, it is claimed, the largest storage reservoir in the world. The dam is to be 265 feet high and 1,400 feet long on top. It will flood an area of 48,000 acres to an average depth of sixty-two feet and will furnish water for the irrigation of 180,000 acres of land.

An exchange says "Do you know what we think is the best story in the Bible? It may surprise you, but 'tis that one about Noah and the flood. We say this even in the face of educated folks who turn up their noses and declare the flood story is a fake. You remember Noah had to work a long time on the ark. It was uphill business, too, at best, to go on sweating and toiling day after day under the hot sun, out there on dry land, while the hammer and anvil club sat around spitting tobacco juice on his boards, whittling up his soft pine with old jack-knives and telling him what a fool he was to expect a big rain in a country that was too dry to grow alfalfa. But he kept at it; finally the flood came and every mother's son of the croakers was drowned. This is the only instance we know of either in sacred or profane history where the knocker got exactly what was coming to him."

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE
Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

The more frequently the hog raiser can bring his shotes to seven months of age and have them weigh 300 pounds apiece the larger per cent of gain he will make on his investment, as in a majority of cases quick gains are economical gains. The above result can be obtained from a clover, alfalfa or rape pasture, skimmilk or buttermilk during the interval and corn and oil meal at the rate of 9 to 1 as a finishing ration.

If the Danish dairyman can make money in dairying on $700 and $800 land and the farmer on the Jersey and Guernsey islands can make a good living and something besides on land worth from $1,000 to $1,200 per acre and buy high priced imported feeds to boot, it looks as if the farmers of the United States on lands worth from $80 to $150 per acre and capable of producing all of the raw stuff needed in the turning out of finished dairy products had about the surest and easiest snap that could be imagined.

A friend who had a fine cutting of alfalfa caught with a heavy rain a couple of years ago hit upon the plan of stowing the crop away in his silo green and wet. Later he filled the silo up with corn. Late the following winter when he got down to the alfalfa ensilage he found it in perfect condition, and the dairy cows were crazy about it and ate it up clean as a whistle. This would seem to show that the silo might be used to advantage as a haymow for clover and alfalfa in sections where the rainfall prevents the proper curing of the grasses.

It is an interesting fact that while the average wheat yield of the state of Kansas was but thirteen and one half bushels per acre for 1910 it was nearly twice this amount on all the land farmed under the direction of the experiment station at Fort Hays, in the western part of the state, where scientific principles were carried out in the plowing and preparation of the soil. Yet, notwithstanding this showing, you now and then run across a fellow in the thirteen bushel per acre class who has little but derision for the "lead pencil" farmers of the state agricultural colleges.

President Taft has lately signed a proclamation which will throw open to homestead entry more than half a million acres in the Ozark forest reserve, in Arkansas, south of the White river, in the Leatherwood mountains. While much of the tract is rough and covered with timber, there are limited areas that would be ideal for the growing of corn and other crops if cleared, while much larger areas would be suited to fruit raising. The climate is such that stock can range the year through, while the water supply is abundant and pure and the country a healthful one in which to live. Further information relative to the tract can be got by writing the land office, Washington.

The problem of keeping the young folks on the farm, as well as the good wife from sinking into an untimely, yet restful, grave, will be solved when the head of the house puts by the notion that he has got to annex the adjoining eighties and instead devotes some of the hard earned money, in the accumulation of which both wife and children have had a hand, to remodeling the house, improving the grounds and installing some of the improvements and conveniences that lighten labor, make life tolerable and enjoyable and in a measure worth the living. When the boys and girls hike from the farm as soon as they are well out of kilts there's usually a reason for it.

The 1,400 pound Missouri mule is becoming a popular draft animal on the thoroughfares of New York city. He is tough, eats less than a horse of the same weight and if sound will sell for $300 or better.

According to the government crop reporter, the average price of mules on Jan. 1 was $125.02, while the average horse was worth $111.07. Milk cows were worth $40.49 per head, other cattle $20.85, swine $9.35 and sheep $3.73.

It is estimated that the shippers of the country—and this includes preeminently the grain raiser, stock farmer and fruit grower—will be saved $27,000,000 yearly as a result of the recent decision of the interstate commerce commission, which is against an advance in freight rates by eastern and western railroads.

A farmer we read of the other day will probably have to have several toes amputated as a result of walking into two redhot custard pies which his wife had left on the floor in an adjoining room, whither he walked in his stocking feet. He will carry a light next time, and the wife will cool her pastry in a more secure place.

A plan for furnishing exercise for the bull followed by some dairymen is to turn two animals into a good sized paddock and let them wool each other around daily. Of course this presupposes horns are minus. The exercise which they get in this scrapping keeps them in good condition and reduces greatly the likelihood that they will go on a tear and kill somebody.

A level headed school superintendent whom we heard of the other day has decided that the girl members of his this year's graduating class may wear on the occasion of high school commencement only such dresses as they shall have made with their own hands. This is a mighty sensible idea and makes handicraft and ingenuity factors in the graduating gown rather than the length of the old gentleman's pocketbook. Then, too, it will help a number of these girls to realize that a whole lot of physical and nervous strain is involved in the making of fine duds.

In a very short time there will be thousands of dwellers in central and eastern states making home seeking tours through the west. As a safeguard in purchasing the writer would suggest that each reader of these notes who contemplates buying land in the section mentioned take plenty of time to inquire into the kind of soil found on his contemplated purchase, its depth, whether spotted or not, and also whether as a matter of fact it will produce in a satisfactory way the crops which the man selling it claims it will. If these simple precautions are heeded a lot of grief and disappointment will be saved.

As showing the important part which the gasoline tractor is playing on many a northwestern grain farm, the experience of a farmer near Beach, N. D., is interesting. He had 2,000 acres of virgin prairie to put in and for the purpose bought two twenty-two-horsepower tractors, together with the plows and other machinery necessary to put the soil in shape for a crop. These engines plowed, disked and seeded the 2,000 acres, and the land was sown to flax. In the fall the crop of 32,000 bushels was harvested, thrashed and hauled to market with these tractors and brought $48,000. The same season 1,000 acres of other land were broken, and next year 3,000 acres will be cropped.

Do You Want to Make The Women Happy?

Shopping by Mail is vastly unsatisfactory to the Female.

There isn't a woman in Christendom—or in Islam—who doesn't prefer ten times over the trip through a store to the trip to the postoffice.

Why, Lord bless their hearts, the ladies love to shop! It's just as unsatisfying and artificial to shop by mail as to make love by mail—and that's the limit.

But, while the women love to walk through aisles of bargains, they love also to read about the bargains. When a newspaper comes to the house, which page does the woman peruse first? The page with the biggest shopping ads. Sure thing! Won't fail one time in ten. Test it and see.

In communities where the merchants don't advertise big enough to tempt the women, what happens? The Mail Order Catalogue comes along, full of attractive ads., with prices put down in black and white. The women read the catalogue; they are tempted by the bargains offered; they send their money by mail.

Thus they miss nine-tenths of the glory and joy of shopping. But what else can the poor ladies do?

Now, Mr. Merchant of Our Town, be good to the ladies. Give them some interesting reading matter. Print some of your bargains in your home paper. Put the prices there in black and white.

Isn't it really a pity to deprive the ladies of one of their supreme delights—shopping, seeing things, inspecting before taking?

BE GOOD TO THE LADIES AND YOU'LL BE PROSPEROUS.

Fifty cents invested in a pair of rubbers may save $5 in doctor bills, with plenty of misery thrown in.

There is no better material of which to build hen or hog house than the clay hollow block. Its use means that the structure will be both dry and warm.

President Taft is to be commended for refusing to pardon W. N. Jones, a rich business man of Portland, Ore., who was recently sentenced to serve four months in prison and pay a fine of $12,000 for the part he had in land frauds in the northwest.

A tablespoonful of spirits of camphor stirred in a gallon of water makes a very good solution with which to spray plants that are afflicted with the green lice. This spray fixes the lice and does not harm the foliage plants to which it is applied.

While other members of the animal kingdom may fail to multiply as nature intended, it is pretty safe to assume that the old frosted eared brindle tabby cat will some warm morning soon lead her bevy of kittens from some well protected and secluded spot. This kitten crop is one that is not reduced by frost, blight or drought.

Kansas legislators are to be commended for a piece of legislation lately passed, at once sensible and merciful, which makes it possible to use the idle convicts in the state penitentiaries in the building of a highway from Leavenworth to Kansas City, Kan. The taxpayers will get a return from the labor of the convicts, and the latter will be the better for the physical exercise and fresh air which they will get.

In contrast to the idea—all too prevalent—that one cannot make money raising stock on less than from 100 to 200 acres may be cited the experience of a Pennsylvania dominie who kept thirty head of stock on fifteen acres, growing all the roughage for them on this area, and who by prudent management was able to pay off a mortgage of $7,200 on the place in the course of seven years. To add to his troubles, the farm was badly run down at the time he bought it. While the account does not state, it is fair to assume that at least half of the stock kept consisted of dairy cows, by the keeping of which the building up of the fertility of the soil was an easy matter.

In all the territory where soft coal is relied upon chiefly as fuel for the kitchen stove it is the very bane of cleanly housewives, smearing their floors, soiling the wall paper, dirtying dishes and blackening wearing apparel. The chief fault with this kind of fuel is that under the conditions which usually prevail a complete combustion of the coal is not secured—that is, the smoke and soot are not consumed, but clog and retard the stove, the pipes and flues. While the trouble cannot be entirely done away, it can be materially improved by replenishing the stove more frequently and breaking the coal up into finer pieces. If at hand it will be found a great help to use either cobs or wood with the soft coal. In some localities it is possible to get coke from which the oils and soot producing elements have been largely removed. This makes a very hot fire and will have to be watched closely and renewed quite frequently.

It is only recently that the full value of rape as a pasture for growing pigs has come to be fully realized, and this only by the most progressive hog raisers. One acre of a good stand of rape will furnish pasture for from fifteen to twenty-five hogs, depending upon its rankness and thriftiness. The plant prefers a moist, cool soil, full of humus, and should be sown in the spring as soon as the danger of frost is over. If broadcasted, from six to eight pounds of seed should be used per acre. If drilled, as is sometimes done, in rows from twenty to thirty inches apart, from three to five pounds will answer. Excellent results are also secured by sowing about five pounds of seed on a part of the land to be devoted to oats and clover, the latter seed being put in after the rape. In this case the rape will germinate and grow slowly until the oats are cut, after which it will grow more rapidly, or the oats, clover and rape patch may be used as a pasture as soon as it gets six or seven inches high, no attempt being made to harvest the grain. Such pasture gives an excellent variety and together with corn and oil meal and such milk or buttermilk as is available makes possible very economical pork production. Rape is sometimes sown with satisfactory results as late as June 15, but it will not do well if the weather is dry during the weeks following.

THE BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

While the lime-sulphur mixture is being used by many orchardists as a substitute for the bordeaux in the fighting of fungous diseases, the former is still the standby of the majority. For the benefit of those who have not used it we give the following brief directions for making: Dissolve five pounds of copper sulphate (blue vitriol) in a tobacco pail nearly full of water the evening before the solution is to be made. Next slake five pounds of fresh stone lime, using care to pour on sufficient water and to keep it stirred to prevent burning. This slaking of the lime may also be done the day before one intends to use the solution. When ready to mix dilute the bluestone solution to twenty-five gallons in a fifty gallon vinegar barrel; also dilute the lime as far as practicable in the receptacle in which it was slaked and pour slowly into the larger barrel containing the bluestone, stirring the while. If all of the lime is taken up by the first water applied, all right; if not, add more and stir thoroughly so all of the lime will be dissolved. Pour this into the big barrel and add enough more water to make fifty gallons. This gives what is called the 5-5-50 solution. Before using the mixture should be tested to see if there is an excess of lime by adding a few drops of prussiate of potash solution (a deadly poison) to a small quantity of the solution. If a chocolate colored precipitate is made it means the solution is acid and more lime should be added. A considerable excess of lime does no harm, and it is well to be on the safe side. The directions above given are for the preparation of a limited quantity of the solution for use in a hand spraying outfit, with a tank containing twenty to thirty gallons.

If a power outfit, with 150 or 200 gallon tank is used, a stock solution of the bluestone should be kept, made by suspending in a small tank or barrel containing two or three pails of water more bluestone crystals than will dissolve. This gives what is called a saturated solution, one gallon of which contains about three pounds of bluestone; hence to make fifty gallons of the mixture take one and two-third gallons of the bluestone solution and for 100 gallons of mixture three and one-third gallons, and so on. Likewise in the case of the lime a larger quantity will need to be slaked and may be kept covered with water between spraying intervals. In making up the larger quantities of the spray mixture the same rule should be followed in testing with the prussiate of potash to insure an excess of lime. In putting into the spray tank, whether large or small, the solution should be strained through a brass strainer or a couple of thicknesses of gunny sacking. The most effective spraying with the bordeaux is given just after the blossom stems separate, but before the individual buds open up. In treatments after this one commercial arsenate of lead may be added to the bordeaux solution at the rate of about two and a half pounds to fifty gallons of the solution. The spray will be most effective if applied with the heaviest pressure possible, while throughout the operation the solution should be kept thoroughly stirred in order to insure a uniform strength. In orchards which have never been sprayed the bordeaux should be applied three or four times at intervals of about three weeks.

TWO DAIRY HERDS.

In a cow census taken a short time ago in Tompkins county, N. Y., 103 dairy herds were tested with a view to ascertaining the performance of each cow from the standpoint of milk and butter fat production. The herds tested were average herds, and the findings probably apply to dairy herds in any other section of the country. The most profitable herd in the lot comprised nine mixed cows, which during the year produced an average of 6,817 pounds of milk, which sold for $92.02, while calves and other receipts came to $9.50. The feed for the year per cow cost $46.30, leaving a net profit of $55.22 per cow. The poorest herd in the lot comprised seven head of grade Durhams and grade Jerseys, which produced the paltry amount of 1,621 pounds of milk per annum. This brought $17.58, while the $4.28 from calves and other sources brought the total revenue up to $21.86. The bill of fare for these cows cost $44.30, making a net loss per cow of $22.44 for the year. The other 101 herds ranged between these two extremes—good, bad and indifferent. The demonstration proves quite conclusively that, while the man and the care have a great deal to do with gross and net returns in the dairy business, after all success or failure depends chiefly upon the cow—the milk making machine. In the two instances cited it is interesting to note that the cows which scored a net loss of $22.44 per head consumed a ration which cost but $1.91 per head less than those which returned a net profit of $55.22, yet gave less than one-fourth as much milk per head. Quite likely the fellow who owned this bunch of bovines was not particularly enthusiastic over the situation, and the care he gave the animals may not have been the best. But he fed them well, whatever else may be said. The census as taken shows plainly the urgency of keeping tab on the individuals in the dairy herd, both as regards milk yield and quality, for only in this way can a fellow tell with any accuracy whether he is operating a winning or losing business.

OPPOSITION TO EXPOSITION

General Exporters' Union of Sweden Protests Against Malmo Affair in 1914—Norwegian Woman Member of Storthing Acquits Herself Splendidly—Famous Lecturer on Eastern Countries Visits Copenhagen.

SWEDEN.

The General Exporters' union of Sweden argues strongly against the proposed Baltic exposition at Malmo, in 1914. And if such an exposition is bound to come anyway, the union says some safeguard ought to be provided against permitting foreign exhibitors with their greater resources, from eclipsing the Swedish exhibitors. The chambers of commerce of several large cities have also expressed themselves to the effect that it would not pay to have such an exposition. This is an unexpected setback to the promoters of the exposition, who figured on a magnificent show.

On Jan. 1 Lindberg has promised to be back at the Dramatic theater, with which institution he has a yearly contract.

Queen Victoria is now at Capri, Italy, and will remain there for a couple of months at least. She resides at a villa in the little village of Caprile, which is located on a high white rock, which projects out in the ocean. The villa is extremely simple. Nominally it belongs to Dr. Axel Munthe, who erected it in 1882.

NORWAY.

Says Albert Ashley, a well known Christiania correspondent: For the past fortnight Norway has had a woman member of parliament, Miss Anna Rogstad. She has acquitted herself splendidly and without doubt her entry into the legislative chamber marks an immense stride in the woman's movement all over the world. Her selection came about in an interesting way. In Norway at all elections a deputy is named for every member, to take his place in the event of prolonged absence or death. At the last election General Braths was returned for the Third division of Christiania, with Miss Rogstad, a teacher in one of the national schools, as his deputy. Now, the general has been on a holiday, so Miss Rogstad has been able to undertake her responsibilities as a legislator—the first woman member of parliament in the history of the Norwegian storthing. Her reception has been most cordial and her attitude on reforms has strengthened the position of women materially in Norway. Another leader of the Norwegian women, Miss Gina Krog, who is well known in America, stood for a Christiania division as first candidate in 1909 and though defeated she made such headway that hopes are high among the women for her return next time. Only two women stood as first candidates, both Socialists, and they were defeated. Most of the women voters were on the side of the Moderate party and by no means always supported the women candidates who were in the thick of the fighting. On that account many critics contend that women actually set the clock back instead of helping legislation forward, directly they came into the political arena. Miss Krog—who edits a suffrage paper—and her associates, however, declare the reaction is temporary and will pass at the next contest. Woman's rights have clearly been gaining in Scandinavia ever since 1901, when the municipal suffrage was given to Norwegian women, on a property qualification. Then, as women became more active in local affairs, the basis was widened to general municipal suffrage for women, last year. Today there are many women members of public bodies in Norway, the progress being greater in the towns than the country. In 1907 the parliamentary suffrage was adopted on the old municipal property qualification. Since then a parliamentary committee has reported in favor of universal female suffrage by a small majority, but the downfall of the Left party at the last election has set the equalization of the sexes back for the present.

Herbert Peirce, United States minister to Norway, has a dog which suddenly acquired international fame. He is a bulldog of the most aggressive type, and he must be muzzled whenever he appears on the street. The other day he tore his muzzle and went for the nearest dog in sight. The victim happened to belong to Brynjulf Wangen, a lawyer, who joined the fight in behalf of his dog. The bulldog refused to let go of his hold, and Mr. Wangen tried to give him the finishing blow. Finally the bulldog realized the seriousness of the situation, dropped the lawyer's dog and ran to Mr. Peirce, half dead. Mr. Peirce was shocked at the sight, and announced through the newspapers that he would pay a handsome reward to any one that would furnish the name of the party that had abused his pet dog. The lawyer rung up the minister and told him the whole story, and now Mr. Peirce expects the Norwegian authorities to enable him to get even with the lawyer.

Says a Christiania correspondent: The aim of the language reform movement is to replace the Norwegian-Danish book language by a consolidation of the main dialects used by the common people. In other words, "pure" Norwegian means the tongue used every day by the peasantry of the country. It has been customary to look upon the dialects as something inferior to the finished and polished Norwegian-Danish. It was reserved for Rev. Alfred Erikson, D. D., member of the storthing, to turn the whole theory upside down by demonstrating that it is the real aristocracy of Norway that is talking the language reform movement. How does he prove his point? The "aristocracy," the "best" people of Norway, are really the farmers. They are the backbone of the nation, and they want to push their language, "Maalet," to the front. Being literally correct, this argument is a powerful blow to the anti-Maal party.

An interesting and important memorial service was held recently in Christiania in honor of Missionary Skrefsrud, one of the founders of the Santal mission in India, who died on the foreign field last December. Provost Gustaf Jensen gave an instructive address.

DENMARK.

Professor Alois Musil, the famous lecturer in Semitic languages at the University of Vienna, is on a visit in Copenhagen. Professor Musil has for sixteen years lived among the Bedouins practically as a native, and he is considered one of the greatest authorities upon the Arabian question. His views upon the situation and the revolt in Yemen are, therefore, interesting. He lectured to a large audience at the university the other evening and said among other things: "If you ask me how much the Bedouin cares for a Turkish M. P., my answer must be that a good camel is considered of more value. The desert governs the Bedouin—not the Turkish M. P.'s or Turkish officials. Therefore, the campaign in the desert will be the ruin of the Turk. This is sure to come true in Yemen, in spite of the fact that the Turkish government has 40,000 men there. How many of these troops can be trusted? They desert the army by the score and return to their tribes."

The lack of proper respect for their parents and the disobedience of American children in general, says Count Carl Moltke, Danish minister to the United States, who visited St. Paul while on his way from the Pacific coast to Washington, D. C., is the first thing noticed by a foreigner visiting these shores. The count illustrated his words by several anecdotes dating from his childhood and compared the children of thirty years ago with those of today. He told, among others, a story, in which a father was asked by his child if he liked the breast of a chicken, whereupon the father answered: "I don't know how it tastes. When I was a child my parents ate it. Since I am father, my children eat it."

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state has received from the federal land office patent to more than 60,000 acres of swamp land. When this land is sold the proceeds will be divided between the school fund and the general revenue fund. There are 13,937 acres in the White Earth reservation, the first patent to the state from this reservation. The remaining tracts are in the Cass Lake land district. This land is received as the result of the long standing negotiations with the land department concerning the transfer of swamp land from the Indian reservations to the state.

The telephone has begun to replace the telegraph for train dispatching on the Duluth and Iron Range railroad. A circuit is now being installed between Two Harbors and Ely, with a branch from Allen Junction to Virginia and Eveleth. The new dispatching system will cover 123 miles and there will be fifteen way stations. The dispatcher will be located at Two Harbors.

The first iron ore from the Cuyuna range will be shipped about May 1. The work of loading cars is now in progress at the Kennedy mine, but the terminal tracks to the Soo line's new ore docks at Duluth, which will handle the Cuyuna range ore, will not be completed until about the last of April. Minnesota will have three shipping iron ranges this season.

With fifty descendants gathered about the board, George Tullock of Minneapolis celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday, it taking eleven cakes to carry the eighty-eight candles. Three of his six children were present, the youngest, Mrs. W. B. McCullough of Minneapolis, being a grandmother.

Miss Constance Day, daughter of Frank A. Day, and Everett Tawney, son of James A. Tawney, are to be married during the coming summer. The parents of the young people are old political opponents, but personal friends, and the acquaintance of the young people has lasted for several years.

The interstate commerce commission, or at least two or three of its members, may meet in Duluth in June or July. Representative Miller has invited the commission to hold a session in Duluth. The number of rate cases arising at Duluth and Superior are pending before the commission.

The Indians of the Fond du Lac reservation have petitioned the department to have W. H. Parr, an inspector of logs, removed. He is paid $150 monthly out of the Indian fund and the Indians think it is too much.

The Minneapolis, St. Paul, Rochester and Dubuque Electric Railway company, or "Dan Patch" line, will build thirty-two miles of road from Northfield to Owatonna and have it ready for operation by Sept. 1.

The national corn show, which was planned for the new agricultural building at the state fair, will be held in the Minneapolis armory. This was decided at a meeting of Twin City men last week.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Captain Thomas McMillan, the first commandant of the Minnesota Soldiers' Home, is dead at Minneapolis. He had been suffering many years from trouble contracted while in the army, and his death was due to a complication of these troubles. He was sheriff of Redwood county for five years and about 1884 he moved to a farm near Canby, in Yellow Medicine county. He was elected as a member of the Minnesota legislature in 1885 from the Seventeenth district, composed of Lincoln, Lyon and Yellow Medicine counties.

Charles Alf Williams, aged fifty-one years, assistant managing editor of the Seattle Times, is dead as the result of injuries received in the Minneapolis Tribune fire on Nov. 30, 1889, when eight persons were killed and the lives of forty more were saved by the heroism of Williams, then managing editor of the Tribune.

Arthur J. Russell, a territorial pioneer, who was born sixty-six years ago in Pennsylvania and at the age of eleven came West with his parents to Fillmore county, where he lived on a farm near Spring Valley, is dead at Minneapolis, his home for the past twenty years.

Peter J. Sjoblom, editor of the Minneapolis Telegram when he was taken ill a year and a half ago with pneumonia, which developed into tuberculosis, is dead. He was one of the pioneers of Minnesota.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Twenty lives may have been lost when the little steamer Iroquois, plying between Sidney, Vancouver island, and the islands of the gulf of Georgia, capsized soon after leaving Sidney. The purser, who had a record of fares collected, is among the dead. Four passengers and seven members of the crew were saved and four members of the crew and probably sixteen passengers were drowned.

Three are dead in St. Louis and property valued at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 was destroyed by the most destructive storm that has visited St. Louis since the memorable tornado of May, 1896. At Valles Mines, Mo., the tornado killed four persons and seriously injured a score more. At Cadet, Mo., two women were killed and fifteen persons injured.

Three children cremated and the mother and a baby so severely burned they are not likely to recover is the terrible story of a fire which destroyed the home of Oran Brooks, a homesteader thirty-five miles east of Coutts, Alberta, on the United States boundary line.

Six workmen were killed, one fatally injured and twelve others seriously hurt at the Midvale steel works at Wayne Junction, Pa., where a huge container filled with molten steel gave way, the fiery fluid pouring or splashing over more than a score of the employes.

Tornadoes which swept parts of Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas are known to have killed twenty-five persons, injured more than 100, made more than 100 homeless and to have done thousands of dollars' worth of damage to property.

At the national corn show held the latter part of January at Columbus O., the first prize of $1,000 for the best ten ears of corn exhibited was awarded to Roy Clore, a lad nineteen years old, of Franklin, Ind. It will be remembered that his father, L. B. Clore won the championship prize in 1907 and 1908 and was barred from competing, but it is a fair assumption that the boy had some of the old gentleman's seed corn as well as the benefit of his many years of experience.

In serving as a judge of an exhibit of grains at a farmers' institute a short time since the writer weighed a sample of Swedish select oats that tested forty-two pounds to the bushel and two other samples of white oats that weighed forty pounds to the bushel each. Several samples of wheat examined showed a like plumpness and soundness of berry, which furnished proof that the heat moisture conditions for the maturing of the grain were as nearly ideal as could be.

In the mining of gold and silver at Leadville, Colo., for years past little attention has been paid to the thousands of tons of oxides or other metals which have been cast aside as worthless. Lately, however, it has been found that this waste contains a very large per cent of zinc oxide of a very high grade, while there are literally millions of tons of it untouched in the neighborhood. It is estimated that this newly realized source of wealth will bring to Leadville more revenue than was ever received for all her silver and gold.

While the chances are that if the seed corn is found spoiled before planting time the damage has already been done, it is just as well to postpone the careful and systematic testing of the seed until some three or four weeks, when the likelihood of subsequent deterioration will be reduced to a minimum.

Cornstalks left to bleach and whiten in the field have a fodder value of from 50 cents to $1 per acre. Put into the silo at the proper time they are worth $14. It is because of the somewhat tardy recognition of this fact that so many farmers put in silos last season and that a good many more will install them the coming year.

Any reader of these notes who may be planning to raise celery on a more extensive scale than needed for family use should have for ready reference a bulletin issued not long since by the agricultural department at Washington under the caption "Farmers' Bulletin No. 133 on Celery Growing." The subject is handled in a direct and practical way, and the most successful methods at present in use by market gardeners are explained in detail.

A friend has a flock of forty fine, thrifty looking hens that are laying about two eggs a day when they ought to be producing two dozen. While we have not inquired into the cause, we rather think the trouble is in the feed and because of a lack of exercise. If instead of the largely corn diet tankage and bran or skimmilk were substituted and the small grain fed was scattered in straw so that the hens would have to dig it out it is a fair guess that there would be a whole lot more doing in the egg line.

Cotton, flax and wheat are soil robbers. On this account a rotation of the crops with some legume is necessary to a maintenance of soil fertility. As a result of the adoption of such a system of rotation many an exhausted cotton plantation in Dixieland that was producing a scant one-third of a bale per acre is now yielding a bale and a half. There has been not only this gain, but the growing of other crops and the raising of more live stock have made the section in which the rotation is practiced more independent and self sustaining.

GOOD SEED.

As the springtime with its sowing and planting is again with us it is well, as in the years gone, to take stock of the kind of small grain and corn which is to be used in the production of the new crop. If one does not have plenty of well filled, small grain seed of his own raising it can be got at a reasonable price from neighbor or seedsman. Care should be taken that such seed is well cleaned and free from noxious weed seeds. The extra quality which a few cents a bushel will secure is more than made up in the better stand and more vigorous growth which will be obtained. The earth bed in which this seed is put should not be given scrub preparation, but should be made fine and mellow and the seed drilled in to an even depth. In the case of the seed corn a careful individual ear test should be made. A farmer of good sense and eyesight who has had experience in the matter can without doubt tell whether a given kernel of corn will germinate in a majority of cases by cutting through the chit, or germ, with a jackknife; but, since the kernels on one side of an ear may be good and on the other bad, the testing box method is a good deal safer. There are a number of inexpensive ready made testers on the market which are very conveniently equipped, but a homemade tester consisting of a shallow box about 2 by 3 feet and four or five inches deep and three pieces of muslin exceeding the dimensions of the box by about eight inches will answer the purpose nicely. About three inches of sawdust or earth should be put in the box, leveled off and firmed down. Over this should be spread one of the pieces of muslin, previously marked off in two and a half inch squares and numbered consecutively, beginning at one corner. The edges of this should be tacked to the inside of the box so as to keep it in place. Six kernels of corn—three from each side—from ear No. 1 should then be placed in square No. 1; the same number from ear No. 2 in square No. 2, and so on until six kernels each have been taken from as many ears as there are squares on the cloth. When this has been completed the second cloth should then be placed over the one bearing the seed and on this the third, the edges of which should extend well over the sides of the box. On this should be carefully spread about two inches more of sawdust or earth.

The testing box should be kept in a room having a temperature of from 65 to 75 degrees, and if the filler was not moist when put in the box it should be watered. Seven or eight days will tell the story, when the good kernels will show vigorous sprouts. The upper cloth, bearing the earth or sawdust, should be carefully removed so as not to disturb the second cloth covering the seed. This should then be removed. By comparing the ears with the corresponding kernels on the key numbered squares the worth of a given ear for seed will be determined. Any ears the kernels from which do not show five strong germinations out of six should be discarded entirely, while those showing one bad kernel out of six should be kept by themselves and not used at all unless there is a decided shortage of seed. Seed showing weak germination is worthless, and ears from which it is taken should not be used. The test may be repeated as many times as may be necessary, when all the approved ears should be put by themselves, shelled and the kernels sorted as to size and shape so as to give a uniform drop with the planter. Notwithstanding the fact that the past season seemed to be one especially favorable for the maturing of seed corn, complaints are coming from many quarters that the seed is very uneven in germinating quality; hence it would seem wise to use the testing box and take no chances.

KIDS AND PIE.

The utter lack of care or knowledge displayed by some mothers in the feeding of their infant children is little short of amazing. We came across a case the other day of a mother who was in the habit of taking her baby of two years to call at a home in which there were several children, whose delight it was to literally stuff the poor little baby with pie—"she liked it so." The mother calmly witnessed the performance, offering no objection and evidently seeing no connection between the sallow complexion and general puny appearance of her baby and the things it was allowed to eat. A child's taste is not a sure guide, especially when care in its formation has not been exercised. If never allowed to have things which it should not eat the child will not form a taste for them. And this is the easiest and safest method to follow.

Pigs and chickens seem to be quite subject to tuberculous trouble, sheep and horses on the contrary, remarkably immune to it.

The world's 1910 wheat crop aggregated 3,567,000,000 bushels and was harvested from 270,000,000 acres. This was an average yield of 13.2 bushels per acre.

Many an unprofitable hen might be induced to turn over a new leaf were she given a ration containing less corn and more protein and made to scratch for all the grain fed. Before putting these idlers into a potpie it might be well to give them such a test.

The only ingredients that make prepared stock foods worth a continental are bran, linseed or cottonseed meal and alfalfa meal and like foods which they contain. This being the case it is better to buy these ingredients in their natural state and not pay two or three prices for a fancy name and a multicolored package.

It is a fact conceded by all who have ever looked into the interior of a dirty and foul smelling cream separator that while it is a labor saving device its use by any farmer or dairyman who will not take the time and pains to keep it clean should be strongly discouraged. If not kept so, it is one of the foulest things imaginable and a cause of germ laden cream and low quality butter.

In a recent institute which the writer attended the question was raised by one farmer present whether if the Babcock test and weighing of the milk yield of cows were generally introduced there would not be an overproduction of butter. There seems to be very little likelihood of it, for if the test were universally applied close to a third of all the cows in the country would be put out of commission—the star boarders that are making 130 pounds of butter or less and are kept at a loss.

Fruit growers in some sections of the west where smudging has to be resorted to as a safeguard against spring frosts have provided themselves with alarms which are operated automatically by thermometers which set them going when the mercury reaches the danger line. Any one who has hiked out in a shiver on a frosty night every half hour between 10 p. m. and 3 a. m. to consult that old thermometer would quite likely not have to be argued into getting one of these newfangled alarms. They save sleep and nerve force.

There is probably no other single feature connected with the care of the cow during and for several weeks following the time when she brings forth her calf that will do so much to keep her udder in a normal and healthy condition as to see to it that she always has a dry, well bedded place on which to lie at night or in rest times during the day. Investigation into the subject by veterinarians shows that a majority of cases of milk fever are due to carelessness on this one point, through allowing the new milk cow to lie down in cold and damp stables or outdoor places.

Western fruit growers are much interested in a recent decision of the interstate commerce commission, which is that western shippers shall receive the use of refrigerator cars whenever asked without additional cost, it being the opinion of the commissioners that the charges made by the railroads for precooling facilities were unreasonable and unjust. This will undoubtedly save western shippers of perishable fruits thousands of dollars, but just how the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe roads are going to find it remunerative to operate their huge precooling plants, costing more than half a million each, is not so apparent.

Several regular shippers of hogs to the Kansas City market have of late been following a plan that has been giving very satisfactory results. The plan referred to is simply the putting of a layer of corn on top of the bedding in the cars in which the hogs are sent to market. In loading the cars enough room is left so that the hogs can root around and get the corn. The advantages of this method of shipment have been found to be that the hogs do not bunch up and smother, are quieter and when they reach market are ready for a fill of water. Another thing worth consideration is the fact that the corn which the hogs eat en route costs 40 cents, or whatever the prevailing price may be at the point of shipment, and not $1 per bushel, the price usually charged at all central markets. This plan is easily tried, and any shipper can demonstrate its worth first hand.

Northern readers will be interested in the following recipe for making hoecakes, contributed recently to a Kansas City paper by a reader who has made many of them: Take two cupfuls of sifted cornmeal, place in a pan and make a shallow hollow in the center of the meal heap and in this place a rounding tablespoonful of lard and on this two pinches of salt. Pour a cupful of boiling water on the lard, stir quickly and dash on some cold water and stir thoroughly. The batter should be almost thin enough to run. Heat a griddle, sprinkle dry meal over it rather freely and when the meal begins to brown pour the batter out and spread to thickness of about a quarter of an inch. When the cake is browned on the lower side and cooked somewhat more than half through it should be turned and the other side browned. The hoecake should cook quickly and is best served hot with butter.

Families that had the foresight last summer and fall to provide supplies of canned fruit, sweet corn, kraut and the like have been getting more than face value out of them during the past few weeks. They have furnished a variety to the ration that has not only been appetizing, but very wholesome.

The best sweetener of sour or acid soils is lime in some form, preferably finely ground raw stone. This can be got at about $1 per ton at shipping point and should be ordered in carlots by several farmers in the same locality who are in need of it. Secured in this way, transportation charges can be reduced a half or more.

Where one is located in the vicinity of a good horse market and his tastes incline in that direction there is good money to be made by purchasing raw, thin and unbroken horses, fattening them, breaking them and finishing them for market. And it is often surprising what a few months of this kind will do for a decidedly unpromising piece of horseflesh.

The other day at Fort Worth, Tex., the market was topped by a car of hogs which were fattened largely on rice, and the fact was one that roused much interest on the part of both hog raisers and buyers. In the rice country along the coast cracked rice and what is known as rice polish, a by-product of rice milling, have long been a drug on the market, and, while their food value as a hog ration has not been completely demonstrated, it has been proved that when fed in connection with corn they make an economical fattening ration.

In spite of the efforts of the agricultural department at Washington to arouse interest among farmers in the production and use of denatured alcohol, practically nothing has been attained along the line desired. Dr Wiley, who has charge of the denatured alcohol experimental work, says that a still costing $2,500 would convert into alcohol the products of a territory six miles square and that the cost of production per gallon would be much cheaper in a plant of this size than in one considerably smaller. In Germany and France the smaller individual stills have been in profitable use for the past 250 years.

The other day in passing through eastern Washington the writer noticed what seemed to be a sort of dust storm on the landscape at some distance, the cause of the disturbance not being in evidence. As the train advanced and a view was had from a different angle a "dry" farmer, harrowing with a six horse outfit, proved to be the kicker up of the big cloud of dust. To the farmer used to pastures and roadsides clad in blue grass and tilled soil held firmly down by surface moisture the dry farming condition referred to would be strange and distasteful perhaps, but to offset the drawbacks of dust and summer drought are ideal ripening and harvesting conditions—no hail, no smut, no rust, no floods.

Both Teams Hit Quite Frequently and the Result Was a 17 to 7 Score.

Altho not the fastest contest ever witnessed on the local diamond the ball game between the commercial travelers and the city team last Sunday afternoon was all, and more, that was expected of it to be, being as it was, the first game, or more correctly, the tryout of the season.

Both teams played good ball for the practice they have had this season but the locals had a shade the better part of the contest by their science and quickness, but what the travelers sacrificed by losing the game they made up by appearances.

While the rod was not spared and the pitched balls hit quite frequently the game was a very interesting one from start to finish. Prospects were bright for a close contest up to the third inning, when four scores were made by the locals.

Johnstone made the first score for the locals in the second and also started the rally in the third, being quickly followed by Erickson, Hess and Christianson.

Ole Neseth has the distinction of making the break in starting the ball a-rollin' for the traveling men, when he scored one in the fourth inning, and created his reputation as the live-wire on bases for his team by making the rounds twice. Not to be outdone, Johnstone also made a score to even things up in the same inning.

The fifth was an uneventful inning as no scores were made for either side, but the sixth saw three more scores added to the list for the locals when Johnstone again started an affray of his own and was followed by Rice and Holt. In the seventh Johnstone, as usual, was the first man to cross home plate for the locals and was followed by C. Johnson, Holt, Cooke and Christianson. The score at the close of this inning stood 14 to 1 in favor of the city team.

In the eighth the travelers started a rally and things commenced to look bad for the locals. Six scores were made in this inning, by Nason, Shepard, Anderson, Neseth, Ashley and Gustafson for the travelers.

In the last half of the eight the locals again captured four more scores and these were brought in by Christianson, Johnstone, Rice and Hanson, making the final score 17 to 7.

Quite a number of players were put in the field by Manager Peterson of the city team and tried out during the course of the game, and as a whole the work done proved quite satisfactory. The prospects are very bright that with the material available the local team ought to be a good one this year.

Social News.

A number of the friends of Mrs. Charles C. Jackson gathered at her home last Saturday and spent the afternoon very pleasantly. The affair was in the nature of a farewell party, as Mrs. Jackson expects soon to join her husband in Oregon where they will make their future home. Before leaving the guests presented Mrs. Jackson with a set of silver teaspoons as a token of their esteem.

A New Wrinkle in Gardening.

The farm editor of a certain paper has discovered that by planting onions and potatoes in the same field in alternate rows, a big crop can be raised in spite of a drought, because the onions, being too strong, bring tears to the eyes of the potatoes in such volumes that the roots of the vines are always kept moist.

Would Want Daylight Train.

The following article is taken from the Karlstad Advocate, of last week: We are not inclined to kick at all but we think that a little gentle tap in regard to the train service on the Soo Line between Thief River Falls and Emerson would be very much in place. The Soo is giving us first class service what there is of it but there is not enough of it and there is no question but what we are entitled to more service than we are getting now in the way of passenger and mail. The towns only get their mail once a day and any urgent message that demands an immediate reply would either have to be telegraphed or telephoned at a great deal of extra expense, and three-fourths of the local travelling has to be done by livery at ten times the expense by people up and down the line as they cannot afford to spend the time necessary to go to the neighboring town six, twelve or twenty miles away by train and spend a couple of days for ten minutes of business. If somebody in Karlstad, Bronson, Lancaster or any other town on the line sends a letter to a neighboring town he cannot expect a letter before on the third day in any case, and if the mail bag is carried by as it sometimes happens it will take the better part of a week. On the G. N. Crookston-Emerson line the towns get their mail four times a day.

A person has to get up three o'clock in the morning to go north and going south you leave late in the evening and arrive at your destination at midnight or later, you have to stay all the next day and then get up at two the following morning to get back, thus spending two practically sleepless nights and one day on the trip that should take only a few hours. The freight doesn't carry passengers going north and cannot be depended on coming back as it comes all times of the day. Only Tuesday morning this week going south it met the flyer here at 3:55. Travelingmen have to spend twice as much time making the towns on this line as they do on any other road. What we along this line need and ought to have and are entitled to is a daylight passenger train the same as the G. N. has on its Winnepeg line. There is no reason why we should not have such a train as the amount of business done here is fully up to the line west of us and much more can be done with more train service, besides this is a new country and steadily growing in importance. Are we only entitled to mail once a day? Are we compelled to get up in the middle of the night to go by train to to the next town and another to come back? We think the Soo means to treat us square and will upon being acquainted with the facts give us a local train. Let us then try jointly to make them acquainted with our needs.

Had a Potato Contest.

The Lyceum Theatre management have the right idea of creating interest among its patrons. At the last Saturday afternoon matinee for children the management held a potato contest and prizes were awarded for the largest potato. Some 131 potatoes were brought in of the largest sizes and the best varieties available and some very fine specimens were among the number.

The largest of these were brought in by Emma Hulda and weighed two pounds, the next largest weighed 1½ pounds and the owner was Gladys Nelson. Joe Sillman captured the third prize. The management, thru their generosity turned the amount of potatoes received over to the city poor.

Warning To Automobile Owners.

Chief of Police Lang wishes to announce that owners of automobiles must be cautious about having their lanterns lighted and attached to the cars both in front and in back while driving after dark, this is in compliance with the state law and must be obeyed.

Anyone found violating this clause are subject to arrest and will be dealt with according to law, and the state law is very severe in dealing with anyone who disobeys it.

WILL RECEIVE STATE AID.

This City Named As One To Receive Aid Under Putman Act.

$2,500 Appropriated for Courses In Agriculture, Manual Training And Domestic Science.

Twenty high schools of the state Saturday were designated by the state high school board as beneficiares of the Putnam act, passed by the last legislature, allowing $2,500 state aid to that many schools on their providing courses in agriculture, manual training and domestic science. The schools designated are the following:

Thief River Falls, Cloquet, Deer River, Fergus Falls, Hector, Kasson, Litchfield, Little Falls, Madison, Milaca, Northfield, St. James, Sleepy Eye, Spring Valley, Bemidji, Warren, Westbrook, Wheaton, Willmar and Worthington.

The ten high schools, which have been working under the law passed two years ago, providing similar aid under the same condition, are those of Albert Lea, Alexandria, Canby, Cokato, Glencoe, Hinkley, Lewiston, McIntosh, Red Wing and Wells.

At The Drummers' Dance.

The travelingmen's ball given in the Auditorium last Friday evening was very well attended and everyone in attendance reports as having had a most excellent time. In addition to the large number in attendance from this city quite a number of outsiders were also present.

The ball was not only a success socially but financially as well, and the proceeds from the tickets netted the organization a neat sum which will go towards the expense of securing suits and paraphernalia for the ball team.

The hall was tastily arranged for the occasion and nothing was left undone by the travelers for the entertainment of their guests. Frappe was served during the course of the evening to those who desired refreshments and the following clipping which was pinned to a display of base ball articles was read by many of the guests and was the source of considerable amusement:

When the train pulls in and you grab your grip,
And the hackman's there with his frayed-out whip,
You call on your man and try to be gay,
And all you get is, "Nothing doing today",
Then you're a Peddler
By Gad, you're a Peddler.

When you get into town and call on your man
"Can't you see any, Bill?" "Why, sure I can,
You size up his stock—make a rough count,
And "Bill" presently says, "Send the usual amount,
Then you're an Order Taker,
By Gad, your an Order Taker.

When you travel along and everything's fine,
And you don't get up till half past-nine,
When you see each concern and talk conditions
And write it all home with many additions,
Then you're a Traveling Man
By gad, you're a Traveling Man

The Three Day Conference.

The district Methodist conference adjourned last Wednesday evening after being in session three days. W. A. McKenzie was granted local elder's orders, and these were recommended for admission into the annual conference on trial: J. E. Rains, Fred W. Barnett, E. P. Hansamann and James Carter; while J. H. Waters and P. W. Beck were granted renewal of licences. Rev. H. Heewood was recommended for admission to the annual conference on trial. Miss Mary A. Hanson, of Detroit was granted a deaconess license.

Valley Schools Teach Farming.

Manual training and domestic science are features of practically all progressive high schools or rural graded schools, but added to these many of the high schools of this section are also doing excellent work in agricultural training and the interest is manifesting itself in hundreds of well-kept gardens in the villages and better gardens on the farms.

The Argyle Commercial club has issued a fifty-page illustrated booklet which will serve to advertise the advantages of northern Minnesota wherever it is sent, and the idea is to be followed by other commercial clubs. The publication contains a frontispiece showing Argyle's new high school and full-page cuts of the cooking, sewing and manual training classes at work.

The special feature is a full-page illustration showing the students in their gardens. Each boy last year planted and cared for a garden 20x120 feet. Each had a variety of vegetables, and is instructed as to the planting and care of the various varieties, and the keenest competition results. The knowledge leads to better gardens at home and various experiments.

Thea Brokke Passes Beyond.

Monday morning April 17th at 9 o,clock at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. S. Brokke of Thorwick, occured the death of Thea Brokke at the age of 20 years, 8 months and 17 days.

The deceased has been an invalid for 10 years. A short time ago she contracted a cold and, in her weakened condition she was unable to withstand the shock and passed away as stated above.

She leaves besides her parents five sisters and two brothers to mourn the loss of a beloved daughter and sister.

Besides relatives from Thorwick and immediate vicinity, those from a distance who were present at the funeral were, Mrs. George Fritz, St. Paul, Targe Brokke, Thief River Falls and Mrs. Nels Gunderson, Adgor.

The funeral services were held Wednesday of last week, and were performed by Rev. I. T. Aastad.

Must Not Catch Pike.

People fishing in the Red Lake River should be very careful about catching pike before May 1st. Every pike caught before that date should be thrown back into the river and carelessness about this will result in costly prosecutions. It is understood that one or two fishermen were in ignorance of the law, but this cannot be pleaded as a valid excuse in court. Bull heads and pickerel may be caught now, but pike must not be taken before the first day of May.

90,000 Petition Congress.

Ninety thousand citizens of the United States petitioned congress Friday to withdraw the troops from the Mexican boarder. It required three men to carry to the speaker's platform, when the house convened, huge bundles of petitions submitted by Victor Berger, the socialist member from Wisconsin.

"What is all this?" asked Speaker Clark, in surprise.

Mr. Berger explained that the petitions had been received from residents of every state except Delaware, and from every territory except Alaska. They declare that the presence of troops is aiding in the suppression of what the petitioners believe to be a just struggle for liberty.

ALL BIDS REJECTED.

Bids For Remodeling Court House Rejected By Commissioners.

New Bids Called For Will Be Opened May 15th.

At the meeting of the county commissioners held last Saturday afternoon the bids for the remodeling of the court house was opened and passed on by the board. Two bids were received but were rejected on the grounds that they were too high. The highest bid received was by James Brady of Red Lake Falls who offered to do the job at the cost of $6,500. The lowest, by Ed Krohn of this city, was $6,339.

New bids have been asked for and will be received by the board up to Monday, May 15th.

Better Pay For Carriers.

Increased compensation for rural carriers is authorized in a bill before the U. S. senate introduced by Senator McCumber of North Dakota, which provides that on and after July 1, 1911, all rural carriers now serving daily routes of twenty-four miles or more shall receive $1,200 a year. Those serving daily routes of less than twenty-four miles shall receive as compensation such proportion of $1,200 as the miles of the routes served by them bears to twenty-four miles. The McCumber bill provides that no compensation paid to rural carriers shall be less than $600.

Buying Marsh Lands.

Mr. Robinson, who is at the head of the Crex Carpet Company at St. Paul accompanied by another member of the firm were in the city Saturday, looking over lands in this vicinity.

These gentlemen made the trip from the Twin Cities by way of Fargo in Mr. Robinson's touring car which was driven by Charley Kelcher, and arrived in the city late Friday evening. They were enroute, on this trip, to Winnepeg, where they went to view some marsh lands.

This company owns thousands of acres of marsh lands all over the Northwest on which they sow grass adopted for their use in making carpets, and just recently purchased 8,000 acres near Brainard, this state.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION ENDS

Several Important Measures Rushed Through During the Closing Hours.

After several weeks of confusion in which it appeared that the 1911 session of the state legislature would have the poorest record of accomplishment of any legislature in recent years both houses finally got down to work and passed several important measures which had been pending and the record, contrary to expectations, will show a number of important bills passed.

The four bills that have caused the most discussion during the session were the four popular vote bills, namely, the popular election of senators, the statewide primary, the recall and the initiative and referendum. The senate passed the Keefe bill for the popular election of senators by a good sized vote. The initiative and referendum, which had passed the house, did not come to a vote in the senate, where it had come out of committee only a couple of days ago.

The statewide primary and the recall were both senate bills which the house had amended. The senate on Monday refused to concur in the house amendments and conference committees were appointed on both bills. The conference committee on the statewide primary recommended that the house recede from its amendment putting in the judges and that the senate accept the house amendment including the legislative members. The house adopted the report and repassed the bill, sending it over to the senate. This put both of these bills up to the senate.

Abolishes Capital Punishment.

Capital punishment will no longer be practiced in Minnesota, as soon as the governor can receive and affix his signature to the bill passed by the senate. By a vote of 35 to 19 the McKenzie bill, which already had passed the house, was adopted by the upper branch of the legislature.

The senate also repassed the bill limiting any county to seven senators, as amended by the house, and the governor announced that he would sign it.

Hundreds of bills fell by the wayside when the session ended and a few of the bills over which the house and senate have spent lengthy arguments and long filibusters during the last few weeks have become law. But despite that a number of important measures have gone through, but have attracted less attention because the opposition to them was not so pronounced.

Following are the important bills passed: One mill tax for good roads; enlarging highway commission; general forestry bill; prohibiting sale of malt drinks; monthly sales of state lands; limiting any county to seven senators; peddlers' license; popular election of senators; abolition of capital punishment.

Following are some measures that failed to pass: Reapportionment; tonnage tax; county option; 5 per cent gross earnings tax; initiative and referendum; the recall; statewide primary; workmen's compensation acts; regulation of telephones; reorganization of state departments; waterway and water supply bills; local option for fourth class cities.

SIGNED BY THE GOVERNOR

Oregon Plan of Electing Senators Now the Law in Minnesota.

Governor Eberhart has signed the Keefe bill for the nomination of United States senators by direct vote of the people, making the Oregon plan a law in this state. The bill passed the house unanimously and there were but six opposing votes on the final passage of the measure in the senate.

James A. Tawney has questioned the constitutionality of the law, but the governor says that he can find no point at which the bill can be seriously attacked along that line. While he does not consider the bill perfect, it was passed by a large vote by the legislature and as he believes in the principle he could not justify himself in vetoing it.

CANTERBURY IS ACQUITTED

Former Minneapolis Fire Chief Not Guilty of Grand Larceny.

James R. Canterbury, former fire chief of Minneapolis, was found not guilty of grand larceny in the first degree in the Hennepin county district court. Mr. Canterbury practically was carried out of the courthouse by his friends following the verdict, which was accompanied by loud cheering. The jury was out about four and one-half hours.

Mr. Canterbury was accused of purchasing a lot at University and First avenues southeast after he had learned that the city wanted a repair shop site for the fire department and had voted so in a committee meeting of which the fire chief was a part.

SENTENCES ARE COMMUTED

Lives of Michael Rossi and Martin O'Malley Spared.

The state board of pardons has commuted the sentences of Michael Rossi of Duluth and Martin O'Malley of Le Sueur Center from hanging to life imprisonment.

The board has had this matter under advisement several weeks, awaiting only the action of the legislature on the bill to abolish capital punishment. The bill passed and the papers commuting the sentences will be issued at once. The men will be transferred to Stillwater to begin their sentence as soon as possible.

Ten Red Wing Boys Captured.

Two of the twelve boy inmates who escaped from the state training school at Red Wing are still at liberty, the other ten having been recaptured and returned to the school.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The most important battle of the Mexican revolution was fought at Agua Prieta between 1,600 federals under command of Lieutenant Colonel Diaz and 1,000 rebels under Balasario Garcia and resulted in the repulse of the former. The battle, however, was not finally decisive. It lasted from 6:30 a. m. until sundown. At nightfall two federal machine guns were in possession of the rebels and the federals had sustained a loss estimated by the rebels as at least 200 killed and wounded. The rebels gave their own loss at twenty. From the beginning of the battle, regardless of the warning given by the United States government to the leaders of both forces, a rain of bullets poured into the American town of Douglas, Ariz., and when the day was over it was found that seven noncombatant residents of that city had been wounded. It was a day almost of terror in Douglas.

An armistice of five days affecting the district between Juarez and Chihuahua, Mex., and west of the latter city was made effective in an exchange of letters signed by General Francisco I. Madero for the rebels and General Juan Navarro for the government. The truce provides that there shall be no movement of troops of either side during the five days and that provisions and medicines may be brought to either camp from the American side without payment of duty.

Thirty-two persons were killed in the wreck of a passenger train on the Kowie railway, in Cape Colony when it plunged to destruction into a gorge 250 feet deep through the collapse of the Blaauwkrantz bridge. In addition many were injured. It was the most appalling wreck in the history of South African railways.

The Mexican rebel army, after almost eighteen hours of incessant fighting in defense of Agua Prieta, quietly evacuated the town at night. It moved out silently and when day broke was nowhere to be seen. The Mexican federal troops entered the city at dawn, encountering no resistance.

The Portuguese mail steamer Lusitania is piled up on Bellows rock, two miles southwest of the Cape of Good Hope. Her 800 passengers and crew were taken off by the British warship Forte and a government tug. Eight persons were drowned during the transfer.

Lieutenant Walter H. Rodney of the Second United States cavalry, stationed at Augur barracks in the department of Mindanao, Philippine Islands, was murdered by a Moro Juramentado, crazed with religious passion, who ran amuck, thirsting for the blood of a Christian.

It is reported that following the capture of Santiago Papasquiaro, Mex., by the rebels, there was a general uprising on the ranches and in the villages throughout that region. The number of rebels now under arms in that section is said to be about 2,000.

Paris retains its position as the third largest city in the world, the census taken last month showing a population of 2,846,986. The present census shows an increase of 124,255 over the figures of 1906.

Twenty-five persons were drowned when the British steamer San Fernando sank off Fernistero, Portugal. Four survivors were picked up by the German steamer Portimao.

Captain Carron of the French army aviation corps fell with his aeroplane from a height of 250 feet and was crushed to death.

WILL BRING COURT ACTION

Representative Washburn Opposed to Seven Senator Bill.

Representative W. D. Washburn, Jr., of Minneapolis has announced that if no one else moves he will bring action in court to set aside the "seven senator" bill for an amendment to the state constitution.

Hennepin county members determined, when the bill passed in such an alleged irregular way, to contest it to the end, but they have had no consultation since the session adjourned. Later definite plans for the legal fight will be made.

"The passage of the so called 'seven senator' bill, by which Hennepin county now and probably Ramsey and St. Louis counties in the future, are deprived of the equal rights of suffrage, is a gross violation of the constitutions of the state and of the United States, which guarantee to every citizen equal rights and equal protection of the law," said Mr. Washburn.

DISTANCE TARIFF BILL KILLED

Cashman Measure Defeated in Upper Branch of State Legislature by Vote of 29 to 32.

The state senate has defeated the Cashman distance tariff bill, the final vote on the measure being 29 for and 32 against it. The opinions of Attorney General Simpson, ex-Attorney General Young and former Justice T. D. O'Brien that the passage of the bill would wipe out the work done by the state in the commodity rate cases were used with telling effect, but for these opinions the result might have been different.

The debate concerned itself only with the main arguments, Senators Cashman and Putnam speaking for it and Dwinnell and Clague against it. When they were through the vote was taken.

What is known as the university deficiency bill, calling for an appropriation of $636,442, was disposed of by the senate committee on finance after many days of hearings and figurings and delays for investigation of items, but only after all the items for equipment had been subjected to a flat cut of 10 per cent, or a total reduction of $64,340.

Initiative and referendum, by a vote of 57 to 50, was made a special order for Thursday, March 9, at the session of the house.

By a vote of six to five the house committee on compensation of public officials turned down the senate bill introduced by Senator Boyle to increase the salary of the state treasurer from $3,500 to $5,000. The bill already has passed the senate.

The senate, under suspension of the rules, passed the university deficiency bill introduced by Senator J. T. Elwell. Senator Elwell adopted the reduced figures on the estimated cost of equipment of the various university buildings and embodied them in a new bill.

OPPOSES EXTREME PENALTY

Governor Eberhart Fails to Fix Date for Hanging.

The Le Sueur county grand jury has requested the legislature to inquire why Governor Eberhart "refuses and neglects" to fix a date for the execution of Martin O'Malley, sentenced to death Oc. 29, 1910, by Judge Morrison.

Under the law the governor has ninety days after sentence is passed in which he is to fix a date for the execution. Governor Eberhart is opposed to capital punishment and is said to be unwilling to act.

The O'Malley case was taken before the state board of pardons, which considered it Jan. 9 and refused a commutation.

Representative McKenzie of Gaylord has a bill before the house and Senator Peterson of Litchfield has introduced it in the senate abolishing capital punishment. The governor has postponed action in the O'Malley case to await the legislature's course on the bill, which he strongly favors.

TO PROVIDE SAVINGS BANKS

Minnesota Bankers Urge Passage of New Bill.

A bank bill to permit the establishment of savings banks in every city and village of the state was proposed by a delegation of bankers at a joint meeting of the house and senate banking committees. The bankers said the object of the scheme is to compete with the government postal savings banks and keep the money for investment at home. Under the present law there are but ten savings banks in the state, these being confined to Minneapolis, St. Paul, Winona, Mankato and Red Wing.

CHILD IS SHOT BY PLAYMATE

Accidental Discharge of Shotgun Fatal to Girl.

Bowia Lovak, seven years of age, was accidentally shot through the heart at Ely when a shotgun in the hands of a neighbor boy, Joseph Kernz, seven years old, was accidentally discharged.

The boy took his father's shotgun down from above the bed, inserted a loaded shell, aimed at the little girl who was peeking at him through the door, which was opened slightly, and touched the trigger. The girl's death was instantaneous.

Shoots Girl and Himself.

As the result of a lovers' quarrel at the village of Hopkins Laura Miller, nineteen years old, employed in a Minneapolis department store, has a bullet hole in her thumb and Jacob Frydle, twenty years old, is in the town jail with two bullets in his abdomen. His condition is serious.

Lowest Price in Four Years.

Wheat for May delivery sold in the Minneapolis market Friday at 95¾ cents, the lowest price since the spring of 1907. In August, 1909, May wheat was down to 95¼ cents momentarily. A year ago the price of Minneapolis May wheat was $1.14½.

SWEDISH EDITOR IS DEAD

Berndt G. Anderson Passes Away at St. Paul.

Berndt G. Anderson of St. Paul, former state food and dairy commissioner and for the past thirty years an associate editor of the Minnesota Stats Tidning and editor-in-chief of the Skaffaren, a state organ of the Swedish Lutheran church, died of cancer of the throat at the advanced age of seventy-one years. Mr. Anderson had been ill since Jan. 1, giving up his work as associate editor of the Stats Tidning Jan. 13.

The deceased was born in Lund, Sweden, Aug. 2, 1840. He came to this country in 1880, going direct to St. Paul, where he soon became connected with the Minnesota Stats Tidning. He was very active in politics of the state, being an ardent Republican. He was also a very active member of the Swedish Lutheran church of the state.

In 1893 he was appointed state food and dairy commissioner by Knute Nelson, who was then governor, which office he held for six years, having the distinction of being the first Swede in Minnesota who was ever appointed a chief of a state department.

Mr. Anderson is survived by a widow, three sons and two daughters.

ASKS DELAY ON RECIPROCITY

Resolution Adopted by Minnesota Senate.

After a debate during the course of which Senator McGrath hotly declared that President Taft either "lied" while making his tariff speech at Winona two years ago, or is "lying" now when he proposes to remove the tariff on Canadian products, the senate adopted the Rockne resolution requesting the Minnesota senators and representatives in congress to use all the power at their command to postpone until next December action on the Canadian reciprocity treaty.

The debate brought out the fact that a majority of the senators are not familiar with the terms of the treaty and they want the measure laid over until the farmers of the state learn its provisions. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 26 to 36.

The house passed the Congdon reapportionment bill by a vote of 85 to 31.

FAVORS BASEBALL ON SUNDAY

Minnesota Senate Defeats Bill Repealing the Law.

The state senate killed Senator Sageng's bill repealing the law of 1909 permitting Sunday baseball. On the final vote there were 20 for the bill and 28 for Sunday ball.

In committee of the whole the senators let loose some of their long pent up oratory on Moonan's bill to repeal the laws giving pensions to the defenders of the Indian outbreak of 1862. The bill was finally killed.

The senate judiciary committee, by a vote of 12 to 6, voted to recommend for passage the Moonan-Haycraft bill for a constitutional amendment limiting the membership of any county in the senate to four.

BANKER FINED FOR CONTEMPT

Minneapolis Man Must Pay $250 or Go to Workhouse.

Andrew D. Clarke, aged sixty-nine, former president of the Minnesota National bank of Minneapolis, was fined $250 for contempt of court with an alternative of thirty days in the workhouse.

Clarke pleaded guilty to contempt in disposing of stock in the State Bank of Algona, Ia., and 10,000 acres of North Dakota land, following the issuance of a restraining order by Judge H. D. Dickinson forbidding the sale or transfer of any of his holdings until the validity of a divorce obtained by him at Carson City, Nev., had been determined.

FATALLY WOUNDED IN FIGHT

Ely (Minn.) Saloon Man Stabbed by Austrian Miner.

John Pluth, a saloon keeper of Ely, and Tom Marinpell, an Austrian miner, who was in the former's place of business, engaged in a fight, the former using a revolver and the latter a knife. Pluth is reported to be dying and Marinpell is under arrest. Marinpell had some quarrel with Pluth's son and the father sent the boy away and started to subdue the miner.

The men produced weapons. Pluth fired two shots without effect. Marinpell stabbed Pluth just below the heart. No hope is held for his recovery.

Kick of Cow Is Fatal.

Kicked by a cow a month ago, Walter, the fourteen-year-old son of E. Cash, a Little Falls dairyman, is dead in that city from its effects. The bruise soon developed into blood poisoning and an operation did not eliminate the trouble.

Saves Crippled Mother.

Mrs. Victoria Pederson, twenty-two years of age, at the greatest risk to her own life saved her invalid mother, a cripple, from burning to death in a fire which completely destroyed their home at Pike lake.

Wire Worker Electrocuted.

While working on the crossbeam of an electric wire pole at Minneapolis Harry League, thirty-one years of age, was electrocuted. He expired twenty minutes after 2,300 volts had passed through his body.

There is nothing in the line of things to eat that is nicer than a fine fresh egg and nothing that is worse than one that is "off color."

So far as his ever being of any use in the world, a small boy might as well tie a forty pound rock to his neck and jump into the nearest pond as to let the cigarette habit get its clutches on him.

In climates sufficiently mild for outdoor rose culture there are probably no roses that bloom more profusely and beautifully than the Killarney and Caroline Testout, and for this reason they are especially adapted for hedge and border uses.

Flower lovers who last fall took the pains to secure hyacinth, narcissus and daffodil bulbs are just now receiving a hundredfold return in the wealth of bloom and fragrance from these responsive and delicate plants. Especially are they prized because they come at a time when there is a dearth of other bloom.

The farmers of Denmark carry on not only remarkably successful cooperative dairies and creameries, but bacon factories. The output of the latter runs into millions annually and are so economically managed that the members realize 4 cents more per pound for their bacon than the hog raisers of any other country.

It will be well for those who have kept canna bulbs through the winter for the first time to inspect them and see what condition they are in. If their vitality seems to have been impaired or they seem too dry it will be a good idea to pot them at once and put them where it is light and cool, under which conditions they will sprout, but will not make much growth.

The University of Missouri has six registered Jersey cows that produced 4,314 pounds of butter in a year, or an average of 719 pounds per cow. This butter sold at an average price of 32 cents per pound, which meant a gross average return per cow for butter alone of $230. If these cows gave milk testing 6 per cent they gave 71,900 pounds of it in the same period, which was worth at 50 cents per hundredweight $359, or nearly $60 apiece.

The flesh of from 1 to 2 per cent of the hogs slaughtered in the United States is infested with a parasite known as trichina. Its presence in pork which is eaten raw or rare often causes serious illness and sometimes death. To safeguard against this danger all pork eaten should be thoroughly cooked, so that the meat is white all the way through. While thorough curing usually kills these parasites or flesh worms, such meat is not always thoroughly cured, hence should be thoroughly cooked before eating.

The dairy business of the country will be put on a much more profitable as well as a fairer basis when the price paid for cream is determined not only by butter fat content, but freedom from odors, filth, etc., which mean inevitably a poor butter quality. Just so long as a dirty patron gets so much per inch for his cream on the basis of the Babcock tests, no matter how loud and filthy it is, a distinct injustice will continue to be done the clean and careful patron, while there will continue to be lacking in the case of the filthy patron a compelling motive to be any cleaner or do any better.

The other day the writer ran across the very unusual case of an attempt to set the broken leg of a horse. The patient, a faithful old family nag, had been kicked by a livelier stable mate with the above result. Hating to kill the faithful animal, the owner called in a skilled veterinarian, who put the broken leg in a plaster cast and strapped it up in such a way that it was lifted from the floor. The last reports were that the broken bone was healing rapidly. The reason why this is not more often done is that such an animal cannot be kept quiet and its leg in a condition of relaxation for a long enough time for the bone to knit.

It would be impossible to express in terms of dollars and cents the value of the moisture which fell generally throughout the Mississippi valley and the vast region lying west about the middle of February. In some sections the welcome moisture, so essential to plant growth, fell in the shape of rain, while in the more northerly and mountain territory it came in the shape of snow. The precipitation was copious and assures a crop of wheat in a vast territory where it was feared that there could be little or nothing. In the more strict arid sections, including New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, the heavy fall of snow insures a supply of moisture necessary to furnish water for irrigation.

The fine young heifer bearing her first calf, in which the owner feels real pride, should be given a little extra attention the few weeks before as well as the few weeks after calving. One of these precautions is the feeding of such a ration as will provide her with a generous amount of protein needed in equipping her calf with a strong and healthy body. Corn fodder or ensilage with clover and alfalfa makes an excellent and well balanced ration. If the legumes are not to be had bran and oilmeal should be substituted, the last named element not being fed in excess of a pound per day. If such a ration is given and the heifer is given dry and warm sleeping quarters there will be no good reason why her offspring will not be strong and lusty.

Kick the Printer

BULLETIN
LATEST NEWS
BOOM

In the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., there has been for many years a conspicuous signboard outside an office which reads, "KICK THE PRINTER."

Bibulous persons sometimes go inside to carry out the apparent request, but they discover that the printer is a gentleman by the name of Kick.

In every town there are persons who, if they do not actually feel like kicking the printer—the newspaper man—at any rate do a lot of kicking at the way he conducts his paper.

Please DON'T kick the printer; he is doing the best he can.

And what he does for the town and community, despite his occasional mistakes, may be a great deal more than the kickers themselves are doing. Did THAT ever occur to you?

We are all neighbors in this town. What helps one helps the others. What hurts one hurts the others. Every community is a mutual benefit association, whether organized or just running wild. The printer is a charter member.

If you had no printer—no newspaper—how would you like that? Do you know what happens to towns that don't support a newspaper? Nothing happens. Nothing ever happens in a town like that. As soon as things begin to happen in a town the newspaper comes along and tells about them.

The newspaper boosts the town. It records progress and offers suggestions, by the editor or the readers, as to further progress. Every copy of every issue advertises the town. This is all free advertisement. It costs the town nothing. It costs the people nothing. It is a part of the business.

In view of this fact, which nobody can dispute, it is much better to pat the printer on the shoulder now and then or to speak kindly of him than to kick him.

Too Many Idle Acres.

Minnesota has 155,759 farms averaging 177 acres each. It would be better for Minnesota if she had twice as many more or as much other land. There are too many idle acres in Minnesota and the acres that are cultivated could and ought to yield twice as much. The average price per acre of her improved lands has advanced from $26 to $46 during the past ten years. With more farmers and more intensifid farming these prices can also be doubled. These may appear to be big figures, but they will not look big a few years hense —Montevideo Leaner.

SCHOOL NOTES

Thief River Falls was named last Saturday as one of the twenty favored high schools which will hereafter receive $2500 annually from the state to aid in maintaining departments of agriculture, manual training and domestic science. There were eighty applicants, several schools having made application at the last moment in addition to the list of sixty seven published in the daily papers. All towns were represented at the hearing at the state capitol by delegations of from one to eight men. The following schools from northwestern Minnesota appeared as applicants: Stephen, Argyle, Detroit, Roseau, Red Lake Falls, Bemidji, Warren and Thief River Falls. Only the last three from this section won out.

The Junior-Senior reception at the Lincoln last Friday evening was a delightful social event for the students and the members of the high school faculty and board of education, who accepted the invitations to be present.

—Only five weeks of school remain, and parents of children who are making unsatisfactory or even bare passing marks are urged to see that these pupils are permitted to attend school regularly for the remainder of the term. Passing mark is 75, but a record based on a mere passing standard is little better than a plain failure

During the warm dry weather the grade children are granted intermission morning and afternoon in lieu of the usual physical exercises.

But few schools in the state receive more state money in the form of special and regular aid and appropriations than does Thief River Falls. This accounts in part for the fact that this city has the lowest school tax rate of all the northwestern Minnesota towns and villages with but one exception. This year the state grants Thief River Falls $750 for maintaining the normal training department; $1750 regular high school aid, approximately $5,000 of state apportionment (this amount is based on the attendance of the children for at least 40 days and amounts to about $5 per capita). Next year, in addition to the above, it will receive $2,500 special aid under the Putnam Act, making a total of $10,000 of an actual gift to this city for its schools. It is significant that the state grants special aid most generally to those schools which exhibit an inclination to assist themselves.

Pennington and Red Lake county friends of Mrs. O'Brien, teacher in the Central school, will be pleased to learn that she has been elected principal of the semi-graded school at Big Fork, Koochiching county, at a salary of $80 per month.

The educators of northern Minnesota appreciate the wisdom of Representative D. P. O'Neill of this city in amending the enlarged Putnam bill in the House this winter, whereby the number of special high schools was increased from 15 to 20, thus clinching the claims of Thief River Falls and other northern towns to places on the coveted list. Lacking this action, the upper Minnesota towns would have stood scant chance of securing the $2500 annual state aid under this act.

The kindergarten rooms are so crowded that no more beginners can be permitted to enter this term.

All the teachers for next year have been engaged with the exception of a teacher of agriculture. As soon as the list is complete it will be published.

There will be no services in the United Church next Sunday afternoon. Choir rehearsal at the home of Mayor Hamre Friday evening. Catechumens meet with Rev. Roseland next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Would like to dispose of the following articles by May first. 1 small coal stove $5, 1 sheet iron stove $1.50, 1 gasoline stove $2.50, 1 oil stove $2.20, 1 oak dresser $7, 1 commode $2, 1 kitchen table $1, 2 iron beds with springs, $1.50, 1 oak folding bed $5, 1 large bookcase and writing desk $8, 1 walnut hat rack $2, 1 washing machine $2. C. C. Jackson.

A. O. Bergland disposed of his farm seven miles north of this city for a consideration of $6,000 Tuesday to Joseph Russell, who is from Wisconsin. Mr. Bergland has not as yet made up his mind as to his future vocation but at present will take a well-needed rest. He left yesterday afternoon for Fisher to spend a few days.

Sophie XIX. of Hood farm, in Massachusetts, completed a year's test on Dec. 31, 1910, in which she gave 14,373 pounds of milk, which contained butter fat sufficient to make 1,011 pounds of butter. Her milk sold for 10 cents a quart and made a net profit above feeding expense and care of $263.22. A glance at these figures shows that this cow gave a larger net return than the average herd of ten or a dozen cows over the country, and yet you now and then run across a chap who says it doesn't pay to raise full bloods.

AMERICAN FENCE

Made of Hard, Stiff Wire, of Honest Quality

Good Fences are a farm investment that bring the most returns for the least money

ARE you losing money? If you had a hole in your pocket, out of which you were losing hard-earned dollars, would you sew it up? The time has arrived when a fence around the farm is as much a necessity as a cultivator.

If you are feeding 60c or 70c corn to hogs in a dry lot, allowing good, green feed to go to waste on other portions of your farm, you have a hole in your pocket, out of which you are losing good, hard-earned dollars. Sew it up.

Look up an American Fence dealer and let him show you how a few dollars invested in fence will yield a big big rate of interest on feed saved.

American Fence is made of hard, stiff steel. It is made of a quality of wire drawn expressly for woven-wire-fence purposes. Galvanized by latest improved process—the best that the skill and experience of years has taught. Built on the elastic, hinged-joint (patented) principle, which effectually protects the stay or upright wires from breaking under hard usage.

The real test of a fence is the service you get out of it. Test, judge and compare American Fence under any and all conditions, and you will find that the steel, the structure and the galvanizing are equal in durability, strength and efficiency to the hardest usage.

The first cultivation of the corn following a thorough dragging a day or two before it comes up should be deep and just as close to the hill as one can get by going carefully and slowly. Later tillings should be more shallow and farther from the corn rows, as the roots of the plants develop and spread.

Ducks are by nature water fowls, but the experience with them of leading poultrymen covering many years shows that they make faster gains if they don't have a pond or stream to puddle around in. Far more important than this is keeping them supplied with an abundance of clean water to drink.

If a bill introduced into the New York legislature forbidding the offering for sale of eggs which have been kept in storage longer than three months becomes a law there is a prospect that omelets and angel food will be very exclusive rations. Some have the hardihood to predict that strictly fresh eggs will reach the two dollar mark per dozen if such a law is put in force.

If the small boy and girl could only realize more clearly than they do that all their tomorrows are but the continuations of their todays and that the kind of men and women they will be will depend largely on the kind of boys and girls they are today at home and in school, there are a lot of them who would turn over a new leaf, get busy and make the most of their opportunities.

An English scientist has estimated from data carefully gathered that in a year each rat in the United Kingdom does a cent's worth of damage a day, which for Great Britain alone would mean a loss of $75,000,000 annually. In America students of the rat question are more moderate, placing the damage at 20 cents per head per year, which means for all of this class of rodents a damage of $100,000,000 annually.

Nineteen thousand oil burners have been made by the owner of a mammoth orchard near Hutchinson, Kan., to be used in keeping the temperature of his orchard above freezing at blossom time. He has placed the burners in his orchard, has filled them with crude oil, and they are ready for business at the touch of a match. The equipment has cost him several thousand dollars, but he plans to save this several times over by their use in a single season.

Twenty-five years ago the seed byproduct of southern cotton gins was one of the banes and chief wastes of the cotton growing industry, and thousands upon thousands of tons of the seed were burned or allowed to lie and rot. But soon there came a change. A method was devised for extracting the heavy oil content, and a little later the protein value of cottonseed meal was discovered. In 1910 the value of the oil and meal or cake manufactured from cottonseed was placed at $140,000,000, or about one-fourth of the total value of the cotton crop.

There is one simple method which the prospective buyer of land in a new section can adopt which should enable him to determine whether he is being asked a price that is exorbitant and greater than conditions will justify. This is to shock the real estate agent for a period of several days and quietly nose around among the settlers of the locality and find out what some of them will sell out for. A gullible buyer we read of not long since failed to do this—swallowed all the real estate agent's hot air without winking, paid $6,000 for forty acres of land and a few weeks later, when he came to, found the tracts right beside his own and just as good could be bought a-plenty for $2,000 each. He knows more today, but it just about bankrupted him to find it out.

The first irrigation project started after the signing of the reclamation act by President Roosevelt in June, 1902, was formally dedicated March 20. This dam, built to impound the heretofore waste waters of Salt and Tonto creeks, in Arizona, is the chief feature of one of the largest irrigation projects in the world. It is located seventy-six miles east of Phoenix, which is in the midst of a wonderfully fertile valley, 240,000 acres of which will be refreshed with water from the great reservoir which the dam creates. The dam is 235 feet long at the bottom between the canyon walls, and from the river level to the crest of the spillways at either end of the dam it is 220 feet. The base of the dam, which rests on the solid rock forty feet below the bed of the river, is 170 feet thick, tapering from this to a thickness of sixteen feet at the top. Over this and the bridges which span the spillways at either end a road runs, protected by a four foot coping at the sides. The dam is curved and arches upstream to give greater strength. The dam creates a reservoir which will extend twelve miles up the streams mentioned and will have a capacity of 1,284,204 acre feet. The dam has cost $9,000,000 to date, and it is estimated that $2,000,000 more will be required to complete it. An interesting fact connected with the construction of the dam was the blasting of a road from the solid rock through the mountains a distance of some twenty-four miles, over which the bulk of the materials used in the construction work had to be hauled by teams. Another was the manufacture at the site of the dam from nearby rock of practically all of the cement used in the building of the dam, thereby saving hundreds of thousands of dollars.

CHILDREN PERISH IN FIRES

Bonfire and Box of Matches Fatal to Two Little Ones.

A bonfire and a box of matches were responsible for the death by burning of two children at St. Paul.

Elizabeth Egger, the five-year-old daughter of Michael Egger, was trying to take her small brother away from a bonfire when her own clothes ignited and before aid reached her she had inhaled flames and was severely burned about the body.

Robert Edmondton was left alone in an upstairs room by his sister and during her absence found a box of matches by which in some way he set his clothing afire. He was so severely burned that he died.

Just now, when the spring rains are flush, is a good time to clean out the cistern, which contains the accumulation of a winter's smoke, soot, leaves and other dirt. Attended to now, there will be a chance to catch a nice supply of clean water to tide over the dry months of the summer.

Summoned By Death.

Last Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock occurred the death of Mrs. Ole Rude, of this city, after an illness from bronchitis.

The deceased has been ill off and on for the last seven years but not seriously until just recently.

Mrs. Rude, nee Miss Bailey, was born in Sauk Centre, this state, about fourty-six years ago, and was the first white child born at that place. She moved with her parents to this city, which was then a small hamlet, in 1885, shortly after the Indian massacre. She was married in this city in 1889 to Ole Rude, and to this union seven children was born, of which four of them, Edward, John, Mary and Ervine, with her husband remain to mourn the untimely demise of a loving wife and mother.

Besides the above she leaves three brothers and one sister, Richard Bailey, of Chestertown, N. Y.; Bony Bailey, Sauk Centre; Risty Bailey, Fisher, Minn.; Mrs. C. B. Smith, of Cloverdale, California.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock and interment in Greenwood cemetery.

A short time before taken seriously ill when she realized that the end was near Mrs. Rude wrote the following history of her life for the information of those who survive her:

"Deceased's maiden name was Rose M. Bailey. She was born at Sauk Centre, Minn., Feb. 10, 1865. She came to this country with her parents in 1885 and settled on a homestead in the town of Excel. Three years later she was married to Ole Rude and lived in the town of East Valley until five years ago when her health began to fail they removed to this city where she has since made her home.

She has suffered long but now God has called her home where sickness and suffering are no more."

Law Suppliment This Week.

With this issue we give our readers in a supplement form the general laws as passed at the legislative session of 1911, which closed last week. Everyone should make it a point to look this supplement over carefully and become acquainted with the work done by the legislature. We have secured enough suppliments to give our readers each a copy, and should anyone fail to get one they will know it's a mistake and should insist on calling at the office and secure one.

We are asked by a reader what to do to kill the insects which gather beneath dead portions of bark on the trunks of his apple trees. As a rule such insects do little or no damage. However, such bark should be cut away. The birds and the sunlight will do the rest.

The road problem the country over will be a long way near solution when the idea is more universally recognized that money raised for road improvement should be spent primarily with the idea of benefiting the roads and not of putting a bunch of easy money into the pockets of township supervisors or others having the road work in charge.

They are telling a pretty good joke on the Ohio legislature—that not a single member of either house could tell offhand whether a cow's ears were in front of or to the rear of her horns. If such be the case it will hardly be charged that Ohio farmers have been packing the legislature in their own interest. But, seriously, how many of our readers can tell where a cow's ears are located?

Henceforth in the United States the men who will be most influential and independent, as well as physically most healthy and vigorous, will be those who own and till the soil. There is no other condition possible. For this reason he is a sensible man who at the earliest possible time gets title to a piece of land—it matters not whether here or there, but only that it is fertile and near a good market.

Do not be led into paying exorbitant prices for sittings of eggs from so called heavy laying strains of chickens. The poultry department of the Maine experiment station worked this thing out very thoroughly and found that no reliance could be placed on the productiveness of pullets from high record hens, but rather that it was largely an individual matter. Some other station may have secured different results, but if such is the case its findings have not been generally published.

CALLS FOR ANOTHER PROBE

Resolution to Investigate Former Insurance Commissioner.

John A. Hartigan of St. Paul, former insurance commissioner, may come under the fire of the state legislature. W. A. Campbell, house member from Minneapolis, introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the department of insurance since 1905. Mr. Campbell declares expenses of the department were greater than under the old fee system.

There will be no reorganization of the state department of public instruction by the present legislature. The house committee on education, after giving the Kunze bill for a state board of education several sharp kicks, sent it to a subcommittee "to devise decent means of burial," as one of the members expressed it.

Prohibition won a temporary triumph in the house. The question arose when the committee on temperance reported postponing indefinitely the A. V. Anderson bill calling for an amendment making possible statewide prohibition. Mr. Anderson objected and moved that the bill be printed and placed on general orders. The motion carried.

ADMITS WHIPPING THE BOYS

Red Wing Training School Superintendent Testifies.

Taking the witness stand in his own behalf F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the state training school for boys at Red Wing, against whom charges of cruelty have been preferred, told the legislative investigating committee that he believed baring boys' backs and flogging them with a leather strap—"spanking" he called it—was humane treatment, preferable to solitary confinement and preferable to shackling.

Mr. Whittier admitted the existence of a spanking device, or place, but said he had made no calculation of the percentage of boys in the school who had been whipped. He also admitted that a barrel recently had been used.

MISSING WOMEN REPORTED SAFE

No Lives Lost in Big Fire at Minneapolis.

There were no lives lost in the Syndicate block fire at Minneapolis, according to Fire Chief Ringer. Although Mrs. Mary Buck, proprietor of the Arion restaurant, and her maid, Miss Bertha Radons, were reported missing, Chief Ringer states positively that they were rescued.

"I took Mrs. Buck out myself," said the fire chief.

S. W. Thomas, watchman, was on the first floor when he heard an explosion. He ran to the second floor and, looking out, saw flames breaking through the walls over the Five and Ten-Cent store.

When the firemen arrived the basement and ground floor of the building was a mass of flames. About fifty persons were rescued within the first twenty minutes. There were many narrow escapes.

Fire Chief Ringer arrived soon after the first alarm and immediately turned in a general alarm. With practically the entire Mill City fire force fighting the flames the fire threatened to spread beyond control. As the flames gained headway and the entire retail district became in danger Chief Ringer called on the St. Paul department for aid.

The total loss is estimated at $915,000.

IS DRAWN ON NEW LINES

Insurance Fund for Employes Proposed by Minnesota Legislator.

An appropriation by the state of Minnesota of $300,000 as the nucleus for a gigantic indemnity fund and subsequent contributions from wages of employes and employers engaged in hazardous industries is proposed in a bill introduced in the senate by Swanson of Anoka county. The measure is intended as a substitute for the various workmen's compensation codes pending in the senate and house.

The Swanson bill incorporates many of the features of the original liability code drafted by the commission appointed at the last session of the legislature. Instead of designating every industry in which an accident occurs as "hazardous" it defines specific occupations and tells who shall be termed an "employer."

SAID TO BE ADULTERATED

Thousands of Pounds of Butter Seized at St. Paul.

W. H. Grimshaw, United States marshal, seized 11,[illegible] pounds of butter, property of the Milton Dairy company of St. Paul, on the complaint of A. C. Houpt, United States district attorney.

It is claimed that the butter bore no mark as to its alleged adulteration.

The butter was claimed to be made under such a process that it contains over 16 per cent water. In doing this the butter becomes subject of a special tax and a further tax of 10 cents per pound, besides being clearly marked to show that it has been adulterated.

CASH ROAD TAX IS KILLED

Minnesota Senate Votes Down Bill Abolishing Labor Option.

The senate killed the Peterson house bill requiring payment of road taxes in cash and abolishing the highway labor taxes in towns and the office of overseer of highways and providing for the appointment of an inspector of highways.

The senate spent another afternoon discussing the statewide primary bill, amended it so that its friends hardly recognized it and then ordered it reprinted as amended and placed it on the calendar to be voted on.

Apology, inclusive and complete, was made to the speaker of the house of representatives by F. L. Klemer. Mr. Klemer is the member from Rice county who electrified the house and started things by casually remarking that the house committees had been packed in favor of the special interests.

ST. PAUL ITALIANS IN DUEL

Two Taken to Hospital in Serious Condition.

A pistol and knife duel took place at St. Paul between a number of Italians. Gito Guancostoro and another man were wounded. One was shot in the neck and the other was stabbed close to the heart and cut about the shoulders. The injured men are at the city hospital.

Nic Nitti and another Italian, who declines to give his name, are under arrest. Nitti had a revolver with five empty cartridges in it when the police got him. It is said at the hospital that neither of the wounded men will die.

FORM MINNESOTA SOCIETY FOR PEACE

Prominent Men Address Gathering at St. Paul.

The Minnesota State Peace society was organized at the old capitol at St. Paul for the purpose of a popular campaign of education to develop a strong public sentiment in favor of world peace, the settlement of disputes by arbitration or judicial process and the establishment of a simple, effective agency through which the people of Minnesota at any time can voice their sentiments in favor of peace.

Governor Eberhart presided at the mass meeting. Those who addressed the gathering were the governor Louis Betz, Edward L. Hunt of New York, who is promoting the peace movement; Dr. Cyrus Northrop, Professor George W. Davis, J. A. O. Preuss, F. C. Hoffman, J. W. Olsen and Rabbi Rypins. All expressed in eloquent terms their ideas of amenity and concord among nations. A constitution was drafted, which eliminates the scheme of annual dues. Several hundred persons became charter members of the organization.

The following officers were elected: Honorary president, Governor Eberhart; active president, Cyrus Northrop; vice presidents, Archbishop Ireland and Mrs. C. G. Higbee; secretaries, J. S. McLain and Miss Ella Patterson.

FLAMES FANNED BY GALE

Spectacular Blaze in Residence District of Minneapolis.

Fire set by school children playing around a bonfire threatened the entire lower part of the Park avenue residence district at Minneapolis, destroyed a small lumber yard and damaged sixteen houses and barns in a spectacular blaze fanned by a high south wind to the extent of about $30,000.

The fire zone extended five blocks and Fire Chief Charles Ringer was forced to send in a 3-11 alarm, bringing out all available fire fighting apparatus, and for a time it seemed as though St. Paul would have to be appealed to.

Burned to Death in Box Car.

A farmhand who has been working in the vicinity of Morton recently was burned to death in a box car. He had been drinking heavily for several days and crawled into the car to sleep. The only clew to his identification was a peculiar pocket knife in the ruins of the fire. He went by the name of Doyle and hailed from New Jersey. The man was about thirty years old.

Makes Attack on Jailer.

Martin O'Malley, who last October was sentenced to be hanged for the poisoning of his two stepchildren and who is confined in the Le Sueur county jail, tried to kill his night watch. He hurled a cuspidor at the keeper, Thomas Mouldry, but it hit the door and was broken.

Minnesota Legislator Dead.

W. A. Fisher, member of the house of representatives from Minneapolis, is dead in that city. Mr. Fisher had been sick since early in the session and his death was not entirely unexpected, although recently it was said that he had a chance of recovery.

Mill City Gambler Ends Life.

R. L. Scott, familiarly known as "Scotty," a gambler, is dead at Minneapolis, a suicide. He attempted his life Thursday by shooting, and it was believed for a time he would survive.

The FREE Sewing Machine

This "different" machine, this "superior" machine, this perfect master piece—the machine of your imagination which you sighed for every time the thread slipped around the spool pin of your old machine and broke, every time its shuttle wore out, every time its stitch slipped, every time its needle broke, every time your back became weary and your feet became tired, this machine with its 32 fault-removing inventions we now offer to you at your own terms as low as

$1.00 A Week

The price is so low that we promised Mr. Wm. C. Free, the inventor of this 20th Century machine that we would never publish it. You are accustomed to paying so much more for machines which are not near so good that it will be hard for you to realize that the lower priced FREE sews faster, runs lighter, is more beautiful, lasts longer and makes a more perfect stitch than the highest priced machine on the market. To appreciate the price you must first come to our store and see the quality.

Then as an evidence of the implicit faith we have in The FREE ourselves, we want you to give it a right in your own home. Sew on it. Test it on all sorts of material.

Then if after 30 days you are not entirely satisfied—if you are not absolutely convinced that it is the best machine you have ever sewed on—the most improved—the most up-to-date—and at its low price, the biggest bargain you ever made—return the machine to us and we will refund all you have paid on it so that the trial will not cost you one cent.

We make this offer because we know that when you notice for 30 days how ornamental its beautiful French Leg design, its golden oak finish and its [illegible] Japanning are.

When you find out how convenient it is—

—how when the machine is closed, the drawers are automatically locked—

—how when you raise the lid, the head lifts automatically—the drawers unlock and the belt [illegible]—

—how just a touch on the Improved Head Latch button release the head—

—how the 8 sets of Ball Bearings make it so light running that treadle will keep running 3 minutes longer than other machines—

—how the Rotoscillo Movement makes it faster than the fastest Rotary and simpler than the simplest Round Bobbin Machine—

—and how it has a score of other improvements—

—Then after you have enjoyed all these conveniences for 30 days, you will never be satisfied to be without The Free. Come tomorrow and take The Free home with you for a 30 days trial.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Governor Eberhart has appointed Alexander W. Crozier of Minneapolis state hotel inspector in accordance with the terms of a bill passed by the legislature. This law is a redraft of one passed in 1905, except that in the former statute there was no appropriation and the inspector appointed refused to do the work unless there was some salary. The present law carries an appropriation of $6,000 for two years, the inspector being paid $1,800 and being allowed a deputy.

Minnesota is to have the best paid state forester in the United States. The last legislature created this office and stipulated an annual salary of $4,000. After conferring with Governor Eberhart the forestry board wired an offer of the position to a Minnesota man in the employ of the United States forestry service. His name is withheld pending his answer. Should he refuse two other men in the government service will be considered.

Charles K. Sharood of St. Paul has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. He places his liabilities at $83,043.50 and his assets at $70,000. Mr. Sharood was president of the Sharood Shoe corporation, which was adjudged bankrupt several months ago, and the assets of which are now being liquidated.

Representative Hammond of Minnesota has introduced a bill in the house proposing to reorganize the banking system with reference to loans. The bill authorizes the acceptance of first mortgage real estate liens as security for loans by national banking associations.

Professor E. M. Phillips, superintendent of schools of Albert Lea, has tendered his resignation of the position, after nine years of effective work. He will become commissioner of rural schools of the state, an office created by the legislature at the session just closed.

Duluth is one of the large home ports for documented vessels on the Great Lakes. The quarterly report of the collector of customs shows 439 vessels registered as of April 1, with a gross tonnage of 902,223 tons. In point of tonnage Duluth leads all other lake ports.

Dr. Christopher W. Hall, head of the department of geology at the University of Minnesota and known as the father of the department of natural sciences, is seriously ill at his home in Minneapolis and there are grave doubts of his recovery.

Hon. Champ Clark, speaker of the national house of representatives, will be the star attraction at the Lake City Chautauqua from July 9 to 16.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Miss Anna Mosky, twenty-one years old, daughter of August Mosky, residing three miles north of Oronoco, Olmsted county, is dead as a result of a fire which completely burned her entire body. The young lady had raked the yard about her home and had set fire to the rubbish. Later she attempted to extinguish the blaze and her clothing caught fire.

A southbound extra freight on the Minneapolis and St. Louis road was derailed in Fritche's ravine, two and a half miles north of New Ulm. The engine and seven freight cars landed in the ditch. James Schimeger, engineer, and Harry Mitchell, fireman, were caught underneath the engine when it tipped over and are seriously injured.

Yeggmen blew the safe in the postoffice at Dodge Center and secured about $100 in cash. They broke into the section house, securing a bar with which they pried open the front door. Nitroglycerin was used to blow open the safe, the door of which was completely demolished.

Despondent because his wife sought a divorce from him Albert Gronquist committed suicide at Duluth. He took poison in the corridor of an office building just outside the door of his wife's attorney and died a few minutes after reaching the police station.

Louis H. Jerabek, twenty-two years old, of Eden Prairie committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. No cause is known for the act. He complained shortly before of a pain in the head and temporary derangement is regarded as responsible for his act.

Christopher Ericson, thirty-five years old, died at the Minneapolis city hospital from hemorrhage of the brain. Ericson was hit in the face while engaged in a fight with unknown parties several days previous to his death.

Julius Jonas, aged fifty-one, who tried to kill himself by shooting in front of the home of a relative at St. Paul two weeks ago, has ended his life at Afton, twelve miles south of Stillwater, by taking strychnine.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

William Foreman, a former member of the Minnesota legislature, died at St. Elizabeth hospital, Wabasha, aged sixty-seven years. Mr. Foreman was born in Ireland and came to this country with his parents in 1854 and settled in the town of Glasgow, this state, which has been his home up to the time of his death.

GOVERNOR CAN BAR VETERAN

Duluth Judge Finds Preference Law in Appointments Void.

Judge Dibell of the Duluth district court has declared unconstitutional the state law which provides that old soldiers shall be given the preference in state appointments where they can qualify for the situation.

The decision was in the suit of Albert Woolson against Governor Eberhart. Mr. Woolson sought the office of deputy boiler inspector. He said he was an expert on boilers and an old soldier and claimed that Governor Eberhart violated the state law when he appointed another man to the place.

This was the second case of this type to come up this spring, but the first case was dismissed on a technicality.

FIGHT BEAR WITH PENKNIVES

One Man May Die and Another Seriously Hurt in Encounter.

Word has reached Duluth from Knife River that George Blackman, an employe of Alger, Smith & Co., at camp No. 5, on the Duluth and Northern Minnesota road, is expected to die from injuries that he received in a fight with a bear.

Blackman and a campmate named Jack Scanlon were walking to a spring bear camp when they suddenly came upon a bear. They thought to frighten the animal, but it would not scare, but attacked them instead. They succeeded in killing the bear with their pocket knives. Scanlon escaped with severe but not dangerous wounds.

Interesting News From Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

TO VISIT THE FATHERLAND

Large Number of Swedish-Americans Will Journey "Home" This Year. Former Norwegian Consul Gade of Chicago Removes to Christiania. Denmark's Population Increasing Despite Heavy Emigration.

SWEDEN.

A large number of Swedish-Americans will this year make the journey "home" to visit relatives and friends. It was only a few years ago when such a journey was regarded rather unusual and to be taken by only a class of people who had plenty of money. Not so now, however. The workingman and the workingwoman, besides those who are better allotted in life—all go now and when they go home there is much joy. Such a trip gives the Swedish-American a new lease on life. He returns recreated and generally brings some good friend or relative with him. The home visits of Swedish-Americans is not looked upon any too favorably for this reason by many of the home Swedes. They feel over there that they are advertising their land of adoption too liberally. Yet this is true and since they have learned to love the new home it is little wonder that they advertise its great advantages liberally and patriotically. Few Swedish-Americans go home to live. It is true that there are many of the wealthier classes of Swedish-Americans who own estates and homes over there, but they only go over there to live for the summer and then they return to their business here.

Anders Zorn, the eminent Swedish portrait painter, who is at present in the United States to paint several prominent and wealthy people, is against the "natural order of things." In a recent interview he said: "Anything that is opposed to the natural order of things, that does not take into consideration the fundamental object of the Creator, would prove disastrous and not be permanent. Women were created for a different field of activity than men; they were meant to be mothers of children and the keepers of our homes. When a woman gets outside of the home and believes she is bettering her condition, she makes a grave mistake, which will lead her nowhere and make for ineffective discontent to all—man and woman." There are undoubtedly thousands of people all over the world who stand ready to coincide heartily with Mr. Zorn's views in this regard.

Some time ago the Swedish Augustana synod of America sent a petition to King Gustaf praying that he put an end to the missionary work of the Mormon church in Sweden. Recently three prominent Mormon elders sought an interview with the king and presented him a resolution adopted at a mass meeting in Salt Lake City, Utah, in which the petition of the Augustana synod is denounced. The king received the elders cordially, but informed them that he could take no action with respect to their resolution, except to refer it to the proper officials of the Swedish government.

The newspapers of Sweden, says a Stockholm correspondent, are seriously discussing a proposition to abolish the military music bands. Those who are in favor of the change make the most of the fact that it would save the government over $500,000 a year. The leading military authorities are not in favor of such a movement and believe that such a change would be a fatal mistake. Military bands and military music has always been very popular in Sweden and it would undoubtedly be rather difficult to make the change.

According to Truth (London) Crown Prince Gustaf will be among those of the royal set who will be gazetted knight of the Order of the Royal Garter. There are very few persons who have been honored with knighthood in this order. In Sweden the awarding of high orders has been getting rather common lately and there is a disposition to curtail it on the part of the people, but they have not a great deal to say in the matter.

Martina Bergman-Osterberg has donated 5,000 crowns to the National Suffrage association in Sweden. The women's suffrage move is being pushed throughout the country and pretty soon Sweden will follow Norway in this matter and allow her women to vote and hold office.

The dedication of the Swedish church in Copenhagen will not, as previously reported, occur on Pentecost, but will take place some time in May instead, according to the wishes of the Danish king.

The crown prince has sold the lot on which the Grand Hotel Royal is located for 2,244,000 crowns. It was sold to one of the leading stock companies of the city.

NORWAY.

Former Norwegian Consul Gade in Chicago has moved to Christiania, bringing his American wife and family with him. He has had a great row with the foreign department, whose head, the minister of foreign affairs, Mr. Irgens, had promised Mr. Gade a chance of working in the foreign office, presumably with a view of securing later on a position as secretary of one of the Norwegian legations abroad. However, it seems that the minister has broken faith with Mr. Gade in failing to appoint him. As an excuse he insists that Mr. Gade must first spend two years in Norway so as to regain his Norwegian citizenship, but as it is known that this can be arranged for in a couple of days by a royal decree the entire affair appears mysterious, to say the least. Mr. Gade, who is independently rich, cares only for the chance of following a diplomatic career, which seems for the time to have been cut short. The whole affair has been the cause of much excitement, interpellations having been made in parliament and innumerable editorials having been written for and against Minister Irgens' course of action. But meanwhile Mr. Gade has gained a tremendous amount of sympathy and it is not improbable that in time to come he may himself be the occupant of the same chair that Mr. Irgens now fills. With his great knowledge of America and other foreign countries and training as a lawyer he might make good material for a head of a foreign department, besides his popularity with the people will carry him far whenever a new cabinet is going to be made.

According to the Norwegian returns the country in ten years increased its population at the same rate as the average European nation. The rural districts show a larger gain than at any time since 1860, owing to the agricultural development and activity in mining operations, but the cities do not make as good a showing as they did during the last years of the Nineteenth century. The region along the coast has prospered more than the interior mountain districts. Of the large cities Bergen has made least progress, barely holding its own the past ten years, while Christiania gained 16,000. Trondhjem and Stavanger gained about 20 per cent.

At Arendal the Roman Catholic church has purchased a valuable property and intends to start another mission. This will make the fifteenth Catholic mission church in the country. The Catholics are gaining ground slowly in the Scandinavian countries.

Trondelagen is to have a new insane asylum, which will be erected at an expenditure of about [illegible] crowns. A separate building will be erected for women.

The Inner Mission society of Fredrikshald celebrated its fortieth anniversary last month. There was a large attendance.

DENMARK.

Notwithstanding the strong emigration from Denmark in late years the population of the country has increased to the number of 167,954 during the last five years and 307,333 since 1901. The entire population of the country now is 2,756,873. Copenhagen, including Frederickburg, has a population of 559,502, more than all the other cities of the different provinces have together, namely, 549,531. The country districts have a population of 1,647,840. During the last five years Copenhagen has increased its population 45,000, while in the five preceding years it had increased 37,000. Of the seventy-five cities of the country sixty-seven had an increase of population in the last five years.

Alberti, through good behavior, is making some progress in jail. While he made faster progress using up $4,000,000 belonging to other people he also shows that he can be very exemplary in jail. As a result of his good behavior he has been transferred to a new section of the jail, where he is to remain for a period of six months. In this section he will be permitted, under certain limitations, to read, write and receive letters.

The value of the crops of Denmark in 1910 is estimated at 550,000,000 crowns. The corn crop is valued at 233,000,000 crowns, vegetables at 165,000,000, field and meadow hay at 85,000,000 and the straw at 67,000,000 crowns. Now that's a pretty fair showing for a small country like Denmark and evinces that they have the science of farming down to a fine point in that country.

Through Dr. Egan, American minister to Denmark, it has become known that there is to be established in that country a hero fund by Mr. Carnegie. His donation will be $100,000 and the income is to be used to reward heroic deeds. From the same source it has leaked out that Sweden, Norway and Holland are to be presented with like funds.

The fishermen along the west coast of Jylland are doing very well at present. Those who are after codfish generally bring in from fifteen to twenty big fish for each boat and the boats fitted out for catching bring from 3,000 to 5,000 pounds each trip.

If a certain bill passes the Danish riksdag the king will in the near future appoint a royal commission over Greenland. The term of office is to be four years and the new official is to be controlled by the home and church departments.

ATTACKS CERTAIN MEASURES

James A. Tawney Decries Alleged "Wave of Populism."

Declaring that he was "trying to check the wave of populism that is running mad," and that William Howard Taft was equal to any of his predecessors in office, James A. Tawney, former representative from the First Minnesota district, took issue with the present political tendency, when speaking before the Young Men's Republican club at Minneapolis.

He assailed the initiative and referendum, attacked the recall and declared that the Oregon plan for the election of United States senators just passed by the Minnesota legislature was unconstitutional and that it gave the minority the right of electing a United States senator from Minnesota. He intimated that the legislature was not all that it should have been and declared, with apologies to those members who were present, the fact that the legislature had passed the Keefe bill would not give the measure a great deal of weight with him, if he were governor.

ABOARD A DAIRY SPECIAL.

It was the writer's good fortune the other day to make a trip of a hundred miles aboard a dairy demonstration special. The itinerary of the special had been arranged beforehand, and at each place where stops were made crowds of interested people, mostly farmers, were present to receive the benefit of the hour's instruction given by the several members of the party. There were four coaches, in each of which a half hour's lecture was given by as many speakers, who took up the matter of testing the cows with the Babcock test, balanced rations, barn ventilation, silos, etc., while the last half hour was devoted to giving a cow demonstration from the door of a baggage car which was equipped as a stock car and at the time referred to contained a Holstein cow with a milk record of 18,000 pounds, a Jersey bull worth $1,000 and a Jersey cow with a butter record of 500 pounds per year. At the proper stage in the demonstrator's talk these animals were led to the door of the car and their strong points as dairy representatives pointed out and contrasted with traits and characteristics of beef animals. Among the traits emphasized for the good dairy cow were vigor and constitution, depth of body at the heart line, a big paunch or barrel, a well developed udder extending well forward and back, large and winding milk veins, a soft pliable skin, a bright and prominent eye and a condition of flesh along the back indicating that the feed given was put into the udder in the shape of milk and not on the back in the shape of fat and flesh. At all stops made a rare degree of interest was manifested, and there is little question that scores of those who attended the lectures went home with a determination to put more brains into and to get more revenue out of their dairy operations.

PUT OUT THE LIGHT.

It is hard to believe that a dairy barn could be battened so tight and have windows and doors so close fitting as to virtually put out a lantern because of a lack of oxygen, but such an occurrence was related the other day by a farmer to one of the speakers on the Iowa dairy special, which has been making a tour of the state. This chap thought at first that his wick was short or the oil low, but on going outside of the barn, where the air was pure, the light revived. This fact was noticed on two other occasions, so that there was no question as to the cause of the poor light. Yet in the face of this terrific condition of affairs cows were kept housed within this stable and were expected to give a profitable milk return when they had virtually no oxygen with which to purify their blood and make milk production possible. After hearing the lecture we understand this fellow went home and put in a window between every other set of studding and inserted glass and cheesecloth alternately over every other opening. This let in the sunshine, which is the best germ killer, and admitted fresh air without making a draft. A whole lot of barns need ventilating in the above manner when the air isn't so absolutely foul that it will extinguish a lantern.

TOP GRAFTING TENDER APPLES.

As a result of observing the thriftiness and hardiness of top grafted apple trees the writer has much faith in the possibility of producing semi-tender apples of the Jonathan and Crimson Golden type on hardy stocks like the Hibernal and Virginia crab in northern latitudes, where the former varieties could not be sufficiently hardy to withstand the severe winter weather. It is true that for its season there is no apple which will fetch more on the early winter markets than a juicy, well colored Wealthy, but if the two varieties mentioned could by top grafting be added to the rather limited list of known hardy apples northern horticulturists would be materially benefited. The writer would like to hear from any reader who has given the above plan such a trial as would demonstrate its practicability. It would seem to give much promise.

GIVE THEM A LIFT.

In latitudes where snows are deep and winter temperatures low a kindly service may be rendered some of the birds which remain and bear the rigors of the cold weather by putting out food in shrubs or trees so that they may have access to it. Nothing answers the purpose better than pieces of beef suet. If this should not be handy scraps from the table will do. If a little platform is fixed and suspended from a limb screenings or other grain may be scattered there, and the little feathered friends will be very grateful for it. Such slight help as this may be the means of carrying many insect destroying birds through the season of short fare and cold nights.

LEGALLY HANGED

By CHARLES LEWIS PHIPPS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Which one of all your cases," I asked Wilcox, the celebrated criminal lawyer, "has most excited your interest?"

"That of Mathews, who was accused of murder."

"Was he innocent or guilty?"

"Innocent."

"Did you secure his acquittal?"

"No."

"Hanged?"

"Yes; legally hanged."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I'll tell you. Mathews was in the employ of Henderson, the man who was murdered. I don't care to go into the details of the case; I will only say that there was so much circumstantial evidence against him that from the first I despaired of saving his neck. I knew he was innocent, though he could no more explain the circumstances that pointed to his guilt than I could."

"How did you know he was innocent?"

"By both experience and intuition. I defy any of my clients to deceive me in this regard. I simply look them in the eye, and that tells me the story.

"There was everything about Mathews' case to interest me. He was a younger son of a British country gentleman and in love with the daughter of another British gentleman. His mother had no knowledge of his having been accused of crime, much less having been convicted, for I could do nothing to prove him innocent. He showed me his mother's letters, and it was distressing to read them. His betrothed was also writing him without any knowledge that he was under sentence of death. A week before he was to be hanged a letter from solicitors in England was handed him, informing him that a bachelor uncle had died and left him a large fortune."

"Upon my word! It was an interesting case, wasn't it?"

"I should say so. If ever there was a man who had everything to live for Mathews had. And to be judicially executed without ever having wronged any one in his life was simply awful. You have no idea how having a life on your hands wears on a man, and this case nearly drove me insane.

"But I braced myself for a gigantic effort. After conferring with Mathews I decided to cable the solicitors in England, giving them the situation and asking how much funds they could cable me within a few days. They placed £20,000 to my credit, and with this sum I went to work. There was no use in trying to secure delay or a new trial. What I must do was to interest the sheriff. I had a long secret conference with him, but could not move him to act for money, though I so far secured his judgment that he must do an official wrong in hanging Mathews that he consented to wink at any game I might practice, provided it could be kept secret.

"I got a friend of mine who was a professor in a medical college to apply for the body of Mathews as soon as he was dead. This enabled me to gain possession of the condemned man the moment the hanging was over. Then I 'fixed' every official who was to be present at the hanging. Mathews put in a request that there should be no spectators present. I could not even be present myself. But there was not one of the officials to whom I paid less than $10,000, and the hangman got $25,000. My friend the doctor was the only one present who got nothing. He had a coffin ready for the corpse as soon as it was taken from the gallows and a hearse to carry it to the hospital.

"Well, that night I went to the hospital and found Mathews locked in the doctor's room."

"But how was the hanging managed?"

"I don't know; I never asked. There were half a dozen men paid by the state to see that Mathews was hanged, and I paid every one of them—in all $100,000—to go through the process without hanging him. All I know is that I paid the money and found Mathews alive in the doctor's room. Some burnt cork, a woolly wig and a suit of clothes procured from a Jew tailor fixed him so that no one would know him. I had a steerage ticket for him in an outgoing steamer, and early the next morning he was on his way to England."

"He must have been very grateful to you."

"Grateful! I should say so. Before parting with me he made me promise that I would come over as soon as possible and see him. I couldn't go for a year, and then I found him in possession of £50,000 a year income and married to the woman he loved. He met me on the steamer, and the first thing he did was to impress it upon me that neither his mother nor his wife nor any one living except his solicitors knew that he was judicially dead in America. He had often tried to bring himself to unburden his secret to his wife, but had always failed.

"Mathews entertained me royally and begged me to suggest some way for him to pay the debt he owed me, even if it required every cent of his fortune. I assured him that I took more comfort in his case than in all the cases I had ever won, though I had lost it.

"After spending a month with him I left him to return. He could hardly bear to part with me and regretted that it wouldn't be safe for him to come to America or he would cross the ocean with me. He shed tears when I came away."

SPHERICITY OF THE EARTH.

"Parallax" Bet Against It, and He Lost His Wager.

The straightest canal in the world is in England and runs from Erith, in Cambridgeshire, to Denvers Sluice, twenty-two miles away. It was here that years ago a decisive experiment was conducted to prove the sphericity of the earth. At that time, says "Highways and Byways In Cambridgeshire," a deluded gentleman, who called himself "Parallax," was obsessed with the notion that the globe was a flat disk and used to go lecturing with great vigor on the subject. After these lectures he invited questions, none of which was able to shake his belief. When asked, for example, "Why does the hull of a ship disappear below the horizon while the masts remain visible?" he would answer, "Because the lowest stratum of air is the densest and therefore soonest conceals objects seen through it." Finally he showed his whole hearted belief in his absurd views by laying a heavy wager that no one would disprove them. The stakes were deposited in the hands of judges, and the trial, under agreed conditions, took place upon the New river, as part of the canal is called. Three boats were moored three miles apart, each provided with a crosstree of equal height. If the earth was spherical the central cross would appear above the other to an observer looking through a telescope leveled from the crosstree of the boat at either end; if it was flat he would see both the other crosstrees as one. "Parallax" declared that he did see them so, but the judges unanimously decided against him, and the poor man lost his money.

The small boy may be able to muster a little more enthusiasm in the matter of waging war on the weeds in the garden patch if his daddy keeps a good edge on the old hoe.

Inherited vigor and hardiness as well as care determine both the longevity and usefulness of a horse. While the average horse is considered past its prime at twelve years old, one now and then runs across a team that are remarkably well preserved and doing their daily stint of work at twenty five.

Some figures which have been compiled the past season on the subject of pasturage for hogs are interesting and may be put to good use next spring in providing such pasture. They show that an acre of mixed oats, rape and clover produced 831 pounds of pork at a cost of $3.34 per hundred; clover alone, 748 pounds at $3.51 per hundred; rape, 713 pounds at $3.44 per hundred; oats, rape and Canada field peas, 604 pounds at $3.03 per hundred, while an acre of blue grass and timothy produced 367 pounds of pork at a cost of $3.81. It is interesting to note the economical production of pork with the first two pastures, in which clover appears. Had alfalfa pasture been available in the experiment it would probably have made an even better showing than did the clover.

VOL XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 4, 1911 NUMBER 19

FAIR ASSN. MEETS

Held Meeting at the Commercial Club Rooms Monday Night.

Date Set for Holding Fair, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Aug. 2, 3, 4.

A meeting of the Fair Association was held last Monday night at the Commercial club room for the purpose of electing officers for the Pennington County Fair Association and to set the date for holding the fair this year.

The resignation of C. C. Jackson was accepted and resolutions were adopted expressing the appreciation of his long and faithful service as a member and head of the association. W. W. Prichard, Jr. was elected to fill the vacancy.

David Gustafson was elected 2nd vice president, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of O. J. Schei.

John Myrland was elected Assistant Secretary.

A committee on premium list was appointed and is composed of the following: O. Gustafson, M. V. Evenson and Mrs. Bryant.

It was voted by the association to greatly increase the premium list over the past years, and the present year's offerings in prizes will, without a doubt, bring a larger and better exhibit than had ever been shown in this county or this part of the state, heretofore.

That these able young men who have been selected to have charge of the affairs of the association will use every effort in trying to make the fair this year the success that it deserves goes without saying, and should have the hearty co-operation of everyone in their efforts in making it so.

The lease on the fair grounds which expired last year was renewed.

Plans, and Aims

The controlling idea and desire of the present management is to make Minnesota and Minnesota's State Fair first in everything. Their aim is to increase the educational value of this great institution and without lessening its interests from a recreative and amusement standpoint to largely increase its capabilities for teaching the farmers and the whole people what they should know. The idea is to give them concrete examples of the best products of man's industry and ingenuity whether it is expended in the office, the factory or the field.

Extensive plans of enlargement in several of the departments, but especially in the agricultural department, have been made and are being worked out. More attention will be paid and more effort will be used to secure agricultural exhibits from all of the counties of the state. Special attention will also be given to the exhibits of agricultural and other schools. The woman's department will be increased, as will the exhibits in the horse, cattle, machinery, and other departments.

Every effort will be made by Secretary J. C. Simpson and the directors to make the 1911 fair a Mecca for the hundreds of thousands who want to be entertained and instructed at the same time and a place where every one can learn of Minnesota's greatness.

Postal Savings Bank.

The second postal savings bank to be established in Minnesota and the only other one to be established in the state this year has been opened at the St. Cloud postoffice.

A Good Catch.

The largest fish to be pulled out of the river here for sometime is the muskalong recently caught by Nels Fountaine which weighed 25 pounds.

Look Out For Grasshoppers.

St. Paul, April 22.—A warning was sent out today to the farmers of Minnesota of an impending scourge of grasshoppers. It was dispatched at the instance of Prof. F. L. Washburn, state entomologist, and head of the department of entomology of the state agricultural college.

Basing his predictions on numerous reports from different parts of the state regarding the discovery of grasshopper eggs supplemented with inquiries as to the best method of treating them. Prof. Washburn looks to see the scourge marked as it was last year, when two-thirds of the flax crop was destroyed by it.

With a legislative appropriation of $5,000 Prof. Washburn is organizing his work for the extermination of the pest, and in a short time will have two or three experts in the field making investigations and giving instructions to the farmers. In the meantime he has requested that all farmers who find evidences of grasshopper eggs in their field write him for instructions as to the means of their eradication.

Speaking of the situation and of his plans for meeting it, Prof. Washburn said:

"It is hard to say just what the extent of the scourge will be this year, but from present indications and in the absence of remedial measures the pest will be as bad or worse than it was last year, when two thirds of our flax crop was lost. Conditions are bad in many places, particularly in those parts of the state where there are large uncultivated tracts and in the Red River valley. We have received numerous inquiries from farmers who have found the grasshopper eggs in their fields and we want all those who so discover traces of the pest to report to us. The eggs resemble shriveled wheat kernels, of yellowish color, and are found about an inch below the surface of the soil. Specimens of this chracter should be sent to us upon discovery for examination, and we will advise the farmers as to the best method to be pursued.

Within a short time with the means afforded by the legislative appropriation I will have three or four experts in the field going from place to place instructing the farmers as to how the grain infected should be treated. We are conducting investigations at the present time as to the best manner in which the grasshopper can be exterminated, and the result of these will go exploited throughout the state by the experts.

Wants Her Boy.

Newspaper notices, telegrams and letters have so far failed to locate Rual E. Surring, the 17 year old boy wanted by his mother who lies on her death bed at 3013 Bryant avenue. For ten years she has not seen him.

Frantic efforts to locate him are being made by the husband of the boy's mother, Chas. Whipple, and by other Minneapolis relatives. Physicians say that Mrs. Whipple cannot live long. She wants to see her boy before she dies.

In 1901 she, then Mrs. Millie D. Surring, was divorced from the boy's father. By a degree of court the lad then seven years old, was turned over to his grandfather, William Surring of Volney, Allamakee county, Iowa, who has been appointed guardian, Mrs. Surring was allowed by order of the court to write to the boy and see him, four times a year.

"I have had one letter from him since that time" she said yesterday.

"The one letter I received from the guardian said that he could not be bothered by my correspondence to my boy. I have heard that they told him his mother was dead and that now when we are trying to reach him, where ever he is, have kept from him our telegrams and letters.

Money, to come to Minneapolis, has been left with telegraph offices should the boy learn that his mother is searching for him. His mother believes that he has been sent to Canada.

OFFICIALS VISIT CITY

Great Northern and Soo Officials Were in the City Last Week.

Purpose of Their Visit is the Cause Of Much Speculation.

Just what is the significance of the visit here of officials of the Soo and the Great Northern cannot be definitely stated. The following Great Northern officers spent the greater part of the day inspecting the road's property and the city; General Manager Gruber, Assistant General Manager Emerson, Assistant General Superintendent Scott, Division Superintendant Allen.

On Thursday the city was visited by President Pennington and General Manager Huntington of the Soo line. The latter were accompanied about the city by President Grundy of the Commercial Club. They all spoke cheerfully of the crop prospects and of the general uptrend of business on the roads and in general.

The Soo people repeated their promise of a new brick station for this city, and it is expected that if no untoward event transpires to lessen the crop yield this season that this city will have a station which will be a credit to the railway and to the city.

The Great Northern officials gave no inkling of the purpose of their visit, though many believe it had something to do with the improvement of terminals in this city.

There is nothing to the rumor that one of the roads will build this summer in a northeasterly direction towards International Falls. This road will be constructed in time, but not this season.

Goes on Long Journey.

Ed Rolfe left on the Soo flyer last evening on an extended trip and will visit many points of interest on his thirty days sojourn. Mr. Rolfe some time ago purchased a ten acre tract of land about 60 miles southwest of Jacksonville, Florida, and goes down there to look after his interests. While en route he will make a number of stop-overs, especially in the southern states and intends to get thoroughly acquainted with the country and its conditions down there before returning.

Mr. Rolfe has been in the service of the Soo for five years and during that time has not been absent from his duties a single day, and he chose this as the opportune time of taking a well needed vacation. That the Soo railway company is very generous and considerate with their employes is shown by the fact that free mileage was furnished Mr. Rolfe on his entire trip. John Hoffseth will take charge of his duties during his absence.

Governor Sets Mother's Day.

Governor Eberhart has issued a proclamation designating the second Sunday in May for the observance of Mothers' Day.

The proclamation follows:

"The beautiful custom of setting apart one day in each year to pay tribute to our mothers should not be abandoned or be forgotten. No element in either national or domestic life is more important than the mothers of our country. Home virtues are the safeguard of our existence. Our mothers are their highest exemplification.

"I recommend, therefore, that the second Sunday in May be so observed as to make it of practical service to mankind and to give it a permanent place in the list of Minnesota holidays."

State Tennis Meet In Duluth.

The Minnesota State Tennis Association has selected Duluth as the place, and the week commencing August 14th, 1911, as the time for holding the Annual State Tennis Tournament. This event is open to all male players residing within the State.

It is the desire of the Association that this Tournament shall be the largest and best ever held in the state not only from the standpoint of numbers, but also for the class of tennis offered by the winners.

The association is desirous to have anyone who may contemplate entering the contest to confer with Carrol F. Graff, Secretary State Tennis Assn.

Coronation of George V.

David Bertie, travelling passenger agent, of the Canadian Pacific Atlantic Steamship Lines with headquarters at Minneapolis was in the city Friday of last week. While here Mr. Bertie left at this office a book just recently gotten out by that company giving a concise outline of the services incident to the Coronation of George V at Westminster Abbey, London, England, and is one of the best that has come to our notice for some time.

In addition to the discriptive reading relative to the coronation the book is profusely illustrated and is richly bound.

Married.

On Tuesday evening, April 25, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anderson, M. O. Gigstad and Miss Hilda Anderson were united in marriage, Rev. Alex Sands officiating.

Both the contracting parties are well known and highly respected in this community. The bride has grown from childhood in our midst, while the groom is one of our leading citizens. The Spectator joins with their many friends in wishing them much happiness.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Returns After Stay In Norway.

Mr. and Mrs. Iver Olson returned to this city last Saturday after having spent three years in the northern part of Norway. They left here about three years ago for the "Old Coutry" and purchased a farm there, which they disposed of just before leaving for this country and will make their future home here.

They were up to the time of leaving this country residents in the northern part of the state.

Visits Old Home.

Claus Peterson, who about three years ago resided near St. Hilarie, was in the city last Friday enroute to that place from his home at Osnesbrock, N. D., for a few days visit.

This is Mr. Peterson's first visit her since he left this vicinity and he notes many changes and improvements during his absence.

Ralph Exonerated.

State Engineer George A. Ralph was exonerated from all charges preferred against him. The investigating committee of the house commended Mr. Ralph for his efficient work and recommended his retention.

THE FIRST GAME

Locals to Play Red Lake Falls Team at That Place Next Sunday.

T. Aaselind, Recently of Warren, Will Be in the Firing Line For the Locals.

Weather permitting the base ball season will be formally opened (for this section at least) when the local team will go down to Red Lake Falls and try conclusions with the team in that city.

The local team which has been undergoing some heavy practices during the pastweek promises to be in excellent shape for the contest.

Tenney Asselind, who recently arrived in this city from Warren will be on the firing line for the locals. "Tenny" is the one who twirled for the Warren team when they walloped the locals to the tune of 1 to nothing last season, and from whom the locals are expecting great things this summer.

Altho the arrangements have not as yet been completed it is thought that the boys will drive down Sunday morning, and if the weather proves favorable quite a number are expected to be in attendance.

The Minnesota Territorial Pioneer Association.

On Thursday, May 11th, at the Old Capitol, St. Paul, the Society will celebrate the 53rd anniversary of the admission of the state of Minnesota into the Union. Any person residing in the state prior to May 11th, 1858, no matter where they are living now, can be enrolled as a member of the association on payment of one dollar, which includes badge, button and certificate of membership. The society has gathered a very large number of relics, and has the largest collection of framed portraits of the pioneers of any of the western states. Their biographical record is quite extensive. All of these sources of information have become recognized and are frequently drawn upon. In addition to this, their annual meetings, the gatherings at the State Fair, excursions and banquets are features looked forward to and much enjoyed by all. This year the executive committee of the territorial pioneers are assisted by a committee from the Pioneer Women's Club in adding features to make the gathering more interesting than usual, and a social evening in the hall of the house of representatives is talked of. Address Geo. H. Hazzard, secretary, St. Paul, for any information desired.

3,500 Will Sing Landkjending By the Norwegian Composer, Grieg.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 28—Grieg's Landkjending will be given in an impressive way at the German sangerfest in this city in the latter part of June. The big chorus numbers about 3,500 voices and the orchestra has 65 members. Ludvig Hess will sing the solo parts. Grieg's "Foran Sydens Kloster" will be sung by a ladies' chorus of 700 voices. Other numbers by Grieg are Hjertesaar" and "Vaaren".

Grieg's Landkjending will be one of the star numbers at the sangerfest at Thief Riter Falls June 23—24.

The Antlers Dance.

The Antlers gave another of their club dances last Friday evening and the usual good time is reported by those in attendance.

The fore part of the evening was spent in playing progressive whist which was followed by a delicious lunch, after which the guests betook themselves to the ball room where dancing was indulged in to a late hour. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Concert Orchestra.

Obituary.

Ole Amundson Hougestol died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Swedin, of this city Thursday evening, April 20, at 6:10 p. m. after an illness of four weeks at the age of 90 years, 9 months and fourteen days.

Mr. Hougstad was born in 1820 at Roolandstrand, Telemarken. In 1850 he was married to Ambjor Harvaas and in the spring of 1852 they emigrated to America. First they lived at Rock River, Wisconsin for four years. From there they moved to Dakota county, Minn.; where they lived for 55 years.

Here he was blessed with 12 children, 7 of whom are living: Mrs. Hans Paulson of Northfield, Minn.; Mrs. Lewis Mattern, Macfarland, Wis.; Mrs. Hannah Gould, Skein, Minn.; Mrs. John Swedin, of this city; Amund Hougestol of Alberta, Canada; Martin and Jacob of Skein, Minn.

His wife died at Dakota County in 1870. He was again married to Guri Severson. She died in 1899.

He moved to Roseau county in 1904 where he lived with his son, Martin for 4 years. From that time he lived with his daughter, Mrs. John Swedin, of this city.

His remains were taken to Christiania, Dakota county, Minn., where the funeral services were held, Rev. Quammen officiating. The remains were laid to rest in the Norwegian Lutheran Cemetery.

Returns from Journey.

Alex F. Lattimore, the editor of the Eleven Towns, who left a few months ago for California for his health, returned to this city last Monday morning and left for Erie Tuesday, Mr. Lattimore reports his trip as very beneficial to his health, altho he states that the weather on the coast has been far from ideal the past winter. He says that during most of the time of his stay in southern California it rained, and there was a steady down-pour which would last for one or two weeks at the stretch intermediated with one or two days of fair weather.

While returning by way of Washington he reports a heavy snow fall and prevailing cold weather in that state.

Among various other places he spent a week at Sault Lake City, Utah, and as a whole had a most eventful and enjoyable time.

Thursday Musicale.

The Ladies Thursday Musicale will give their spring recital tonight (Thursday, May 4th) at the High School.

The program will consist of piano and vocal numbers by Mesdames Halvorson, Bjerkhoel, Melby and Miss Godward, and two piano duets, also a chorus of twelve voices, consisting of the following: Mrs. G. W. Booren, Mrs. Corbeil, Mrs. Nason, Misses Robbecke, Larson, Aldrin, Cipra, and Bakke and Mesdames Woolsey, McKinney, Stokke and Anderson.

This is to be the final program of the club and we hope all friends of the members as well as all music lovers will avail themselves of this opportunity and show their appreciation of the hard work put in by the club ladies. An admission of 25 cents will be asked.

Bad Money Plentiful.

The lair of the counterfeiters who are flooding Canada with bogus silver is believed to be in Winnipeg. For three weeks the ablest members of the police force have been carrying out a systematic investigation, during the course of which a number of homes of colored residents have been raided and searched, but so far no trace has been found of the molds.

Government detectives have arrived from Ottawa to assist. The money imitated is a 50-cent piece, and the form used for making it has evidently been a plaster cast. The metal is decidedly off color. The weight is not bad, but the finish on the edges is very rough, being done by a separate operation after the casting is made.

There is nothing in the line of things to eat that is nicer than a fine fresh egg and nothing that is worse than one that is "off color."

So far as his ever being of any use in the world, a small boy might as well tie a forty pound rock to his neck and jump into the nearest pond as to let the cigarette habit get its clutches on him.

In climates sufficiently mild for outdoor rose culture there are probably no roses that bloom more profusely and beautifully than the Killarney and Caroline Testout, and for this reason they are especially adapted for hedge and border uses.

Flower lovers who last fall took the pains to secure hyacinth, narcissus and daffodil bulbs are just now receiving a hundredfold return in the wealth of bloom and fragrance from these responsive and delicate plants. Especially are they prized because they come at a time when there is a dearth of other bloom.

The farmers of Denmark carry on not only remarkably successful co-operative dairies and creameries, but bacon factories. The output of the latter runs into millions annually and are so economically managed that the members realize 4 cents more per pound for their bacon than the hog raisers of any other country.

It will be well for those who have kept canna bulbs through the winter for the first time to inspect them and see what condition they are in. If their vitality seems to have been impaired or they seem too dry it will be a good idea to pot them at once and put them where it is light and cool, under which conditions they will sprout, but will not make much growth.

—The University of Missouri has six registered Jersey cows that produced 4,314 pounds of butter in a year, or an average of 719 pounds per cow. This butter sold at an average price of 32 cents per pound, which meant a gross average return per cow for butter alone of $230. If these cows gave milk testing 6 per cent they gave 71,900 pounds of it in the same period, which was worth at 50 cents per hundredweight $350, or nearly $60 apiece.

The flesh of from 1 to 2 per cent of the hogs slaughtered in the United States is infested with a parasite known as trichina. Its presence in pork which is eaten raw or rare often causes serious illness and sometimes death. To safeguard against this danger all pork eaten should be thoroughly cooked, so that the meat is white all the way through. While thorough curing usually kills these parasites or flesh worms, such meat is not always thoroughly cured, hence should be thoroughly cooked before eating.

The dairy business of the country will be put on a much more profitable as well as a fairer basis when the price paid for cream is determined not only by butter fat content, but freedom from odors, filth, etc., which mean inevitably a poor butter quality. Just so long as a dirty patron gets so much per inch for his cream on the basis of the Babcock tests, no matter how loud and filthy it is, a distinct injustice will continue to be done the clean and careful patron, while there will continue to be lacking in the case of the filthy patron a compelling motive to be any cleaner or do any better.

The other day the writer ran across the very unusual case of an attempt to set the broken leg of a horse. The patient, a faithful old family nag, had been kicked by a livelier stable mate with the above result. Hating to kill the faithful animal, the owner called in a skilled veterinarian, who put the broken leg in a plaster cast and strapped it up in such a way that it was lifted from the floor. The last reports were that the broken bone was healing rapidly. The reason why this is not more often done is that such an animal cannot be kept quiet and its leg in a condition of relaxation for a long enough time for the bone to knit.

It would be impossible to express in terms of dollars and cents the value of the moisture which fell generally throughout the Mississippi valley and the vast region lying west about the middle of February. In some sections the welcome moisture, so essential to plant growth, fell in the shape of rain, while in the more northerly and mountain territory it came in the shape of snow. The precipitation was copious and assures a crop of wheat in a vast territory where it was feared that there could be little or nothing. In the more strict arid sections, including New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, the heavy fall of snow insures a supply of moisture necessary to furnish water for irrigation.

The fine young heifer bearing her first calf, in which the owner feels real pride, should be given a little extra attention the few weeks before as well as the few weeks after calving. One of these precautions is the feeding of such a ration as will provide her with a generous amount of protein needed in equipping her calf with a strong and healthy body. Corn fodder or ensilage with clover and alfalfa makes an excellent and well balanced ration. If the legumes are not to be had bran and oilmeal should be substituted, the last named element not being fed in excess of a pound per day. If such a ration is given and the heifer is given dry and warm sleeping quarters there will be no good reason why her offspring will not be strong and lusty.

Pigs and chickens seem to be quite subject to tubercular trouble and sheep and horses, on the contrary, remarkably immune to it.

*The world's 1910 wheat crop aggre*gated 3,667,000,000 bushels and was harvested from 254,000,000 acres. This was an average yield of 13.2 bushels per acre.

Many an unprofitable hen might be induced to turn over a new leaf were she given a ration containing less corn and more protein and made to scratch for all the grain fed. Before putting these idlers into a potpie it might be well to give them such a test.

The only ingredients that make prepared stock foods worth a continental are bran, linseed or cottonseed meal and alfalfa meal and like foods which they contain. This being the case, it is better to buy these ingredients in their natural state and not pay two or three prices for a fancy name and a multicolored package.

If What We Say Is True You Want This Roofing

You are a business man. Here is a business proposition. We make some strong claims in this ad as to what Vulcanite Roofing is and as to what it will do. If these statements are facts, you can't afford to buy any other kind of roofing. It costs nothing to investigate.

Here's the way to test us. Go to the dealer named below. Ask him for the book, "Ten Years Wear in Ten Minute Tests" and a sample of Vulcanite Roofing. Then get samples of other kinds of prepared roofings, both lower and higher priced than Vulcanite. Apply the tests the book contains, and choose the roofing that proves itself best.

No amount of money will bring a better piece of goods than

Vulcanite Roofing

Every dollar you put in Vulcanite Roofing brings you one hundred cents worth of real roofing value. Prices are based on actual cost of material and making. No prepared roofing can be better than Vulcanite. Higher prices can't bring you more roofing worth. They simply mean more profit for the maker. Lower prices can't bring as good a roofing as Vulcanite. Cost of material and making won't permit.

So go to the dealer and get the book today. It is well worth having and well worth keeping.

LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVE FAILS

In regard to skin diseases medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT. A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D Prescription, penetrates to the disease germs and destroys it, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 25-cent trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN BY F. E. TRIGG CENTRAL POINT ROGUE RIVER VALLEY OREGON CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

Viewed in one way, the peanut is a sort of modest, insignificant proposition, yet $12,000,000 worth of peanuts are consumed annually in this country.

California orange growers stand in much fear that the orange maggot, which has made the citrus industry of Mexico practically worthless, will invade their splendid ranches. The strictest kind of quarantine has been adopted, and it is hoped that the pest can be kept out.

A poultryman who has had good success raising ducks recommends the following ration for them during the laying periods: Cornmeal, 45 per cent; bran, 20 per cent; cooked vegetables, 15 per cent; beef scraps, 15 per cent, and grit or sand, 5 per cent. This should be mixed with milk and fed night and morning.

A western woman, a resident of Seattle, Wash., has suggested to the city council the passage of an ordinance which will compel all owners of cats to put small bells on them so that the birds will be given warning on their approach and thus thousands of the feathered tribe saved from destruction. Considering the uselessness of the average cat, the above suggestion would seem to be a good one.

There are several states in which tracts especially and definitely devoted to the production of timber or orchards are exempted from taxation covering a considerable period of years. Those who are interested in either of the above lines would do well to look up the laws of their respective states relative to the matter in order to profit therefrom, while if there be no such laws the attention of one's state representative may be called to the fact.

An unkempt cedar or cypress hedge is not a lovely thing; but, trimmed or no, it furnishes the birds—our most valued benefactors—with a protection from their worst enemies—cats and hawks by day and owls by night. We passed just such a hedge the other evening at dusk, where a number of juncos were roosting, and caught a screech owl in the attempt to get at the birds. But in spite of the fact that its eyes were good the hedge was so dense that the owl could not get at its prey. We have had a kindlier feeling for that hedge since.

Even under the most favorable conditions the giving of birth to the young animals on the farm means for the dams a severe drain not only upon their nervous system, but also their store of physical vitality. For this reason great care should be taken to see that all animals with young should be so fed as to be abundantly nourished, while the quarters in which they give birth to their offspring should be dry and clean and free from drafts of air. Care in these two particulars would save a world of grief and loss for the average stock raiser.

A Wisconsin reader makes inquiry as to the right way to dip cattle. While spraying thoroughly with a disinfecting solution of the proper strength will give good results, the surest and safest way is sousing the animals in a tank of the solution. This should be deep enough so that they will have to swim at the middle and should be provided with sloping approaches for ingress and exit. It is customary at the central stockyards, where thousands of animals are given the dip daily, to drive them through the tank in single file and as they reach the middle for an attendant stationed above to give the head a downward shove, so that the animal will be completely submerged. There are several good dips on the market, put up in cans of several sizes, with full direction for use.

Now and then an orchard is situated on such a slope that it is necessary to keep it in sod to prevent the washing and gullying of the surface, but with the exception orchardists are pretty well agreed that sod in the orchard tract should be killed and the soil given thorough and frequent cultivation during the early part of the season—at least to July 15. This will make available for the use of the trees in their production of fruit the fertility contained in the soil and will reduce to a minimum, if followed year after year, the damage from insect pests like the curculio, which finds an ideal harbor in a blue grass sod. It is more than likely if the orchard tract is an old one and has been neglected that it will need fertilizing before it will produce profitably. Some barnyard manure may be used but this will not give as satisfactory results as the specially prepared commercial fertilizers in which potassium and phosphoric acid predominate.

SOME PRUNING SUGGESTIONS.

The first two or three years' pruning of an orchard of young trees is the most important as determining the framework and shape which the trees will have in later years. Allowed to develop at will, apple and pear as well as peach trees grow too tall and lack strength and sturdiness of head and limb. The first pruning to secure the desired results should consist in cutting the yearling trees back to a height of about twenty inches within a week after they are set out. This will cause the little trees to throw out from them three to five or six lateral shoots. These should be allowed to grow without interference during the first season. In the early fall, if it is desired to hasten the maturing of the wood, one may trim these branches back to a length of from twelve to fifteen inches, depending somewhat upon the vigor and size of the tree. More frequently this job is put over until the April and May following—about now. In doing this cutting one should be guided by the habit of the tree. If a vertical grower one should prune to outside buds, while if the tree is of a spreading variety, like the Spitzenburg, one should prune to inside buds, which will throw the subsequent shoots in instead of out. The best orchardists favor the vase shaped or open crown because it lets the sunshine color the fruit and gives when mature a tree that is low growing and easy alike to spray and to prune and whose fruit is easy to thin and harvest. The pruning a year later should be of the same general character and a good half or more of the new growth be cut back. This treatment will give a strong and sturdy head or frame, which later will give the tree sufficient strength, except in rare cases, to bear its burden of fruit without much propping.

During the growing months the young orchard should be gone over, and water sprouts or shoots that are clearly out of place should be removed with the fingers or a sharp knife. If the orchard has arrived at an age when it ought to bear and does not, summer pruning may be adopted during the month of July. This discourages a growth of wood and encourages the setting of fruit buds for the following season. This same treatment may be adopted with any mature orchard where the trees are shapely and where it is not necessary to encourage the growth of wood for the formation of new tops. In the case of the peach trees the pruning should be rather heavy, including not only a cutting back of half or more of the previous year's growth, but a thinning out of at least a third of its branches. Fruit buds form on wood of the previous season's growth, so that pruning has a very direct influence on fruit bearing. With the peach tree as with the apple and pear, the broad spreading, low headed tree is desirable, as well as the open crown, which will let in the sunshine to color and ripen the fruit. While general directions such as the above may be given, it is well to remember that trees, like folks, have an individuality both of habit and form; hence each should be studied separately and be pruned and handled accordingly. Trees are wonderfully responsive, and it is remarkable what one can do in helping them to a beautiful as well as useful development. Pruning should usually be in a ratio to the rapidity of growth of the tree, which in turn depends upon richness of soil, abundance of moisture and length of the growing season.

BACK TO THE FARM.

The restless, eager boy may well reflect, when tempted to leave the often humdrum life of the farm for the city, with its salaried positions, its tinsel and glitter, on the step which has been decided on by W. C. Brown. There are so many men by the name of Brown that such a simple statement about him will not arouse much interest. Well, the Brown in question was born on a farm, grew tired of it, learned telegraphy, became an operator, then agent, assistant superintendent, and so on, until he became president of the New York Central, one of the greatest railroads in the land. But after a few years of the terrific grind and responsibility he is going back where he started from, to the farm, to enjoy a little quiet and peace and contentment before it is too late. He says that places of large salary—those at the top—are will-o'-the-wisps, elusive and disappointing and do not satisfy the longing of the one who covets them. He will soon retire to a fine farm he has and there devote his energy and brains to a scientific tilling of the soil and to raising the finest of blooded stock. It is a wholesome picture, and we need more men possessed of this man's judgment and the good sense to carry such a plan into execution.

HAY CURING MACHINE.

References in the agricultural news of the past few months tell of a machine recently invented by experimentors employed by the department of agriculture which will take in green and steaming hay at one end and deliver it dry, cured and baled at the other. If this report is true it means a boon has been discovered for the hay farmer in all of the humid sections which it would be hard indeed to estimate. There is little question that hay handled in this way would preserve a maximum amount of its nutritive elements, while the farmer would be freed from the anxiety and loss incident to unfavorable weather at cutting time.

School Notes.

The Juniors will present a literary program at the Lincoln next Friday evening at 8 p. m. A small admission of ten cents will be charged, but the cost of admission is no criterion of the value of the entertainment. It is expected that this entertainment will equal that recently presented by the Seniors, and that is saying not a little.

This week closes the school month of April and but four weeks of school remain. These will be crowded with reviews, examinations and other work incident to the last month.

A teachers' meeting was held at the normal room Tuesday afternoon.

The senior class is ordering all class pins, banners, etc., from or through local dealers where it is possible to do so.

Rev. Adolph B. Reseland of the United Lutheran church of this city will preach the baccalaureate sermon on the evening of Sunday, May 28th. All the churches of the city have been or will be invited to officiate at this function. It is the custom of the school to invite the churches in turn and the senior classes decide the matter by ballot.

About fifty agriculture and botany students are planting gardens on the Bishop property near the Lincoln. The tract south of town, being new breaking of grubbed land, will be sown to flax with the exception of one acre which will be planted with potatoes. Next year this five acre plot will be in condition for gardening or for any other purpose.

The class memorial which the 1911 seniors have decided to present the school will consist of a generous cash donation to the board of education to build or aid in building a neat fountain immediately opposite the main entrance to the Lincoln. A concrete saucer shaped fountain some sixteen or eighteen feet in diameter and two feet high and ornamented with a low iron railing or fence can be constructed at a moderate cost. Some device could be erected in the centre for the fountain proper. If not this season, at least in the near future, the high school campus will be leveled, seeded and completed with curving cement walks. This ground is possible of being made the most handsome spot in the city and a fountain built as suggested will enhance the beauty and value of the property greatly.

The department plan of work in operation in the grammar grades has proved satisfactory and will be continued next year.

Miss Olson, teacher of home economics at Warren, spent Wednesday visiting the local schools.

Lease Lands Near Thorwick.

W. W. Robinson and G. W. Ream, of the Crex Carpet Company of St. Paul, who passed thru this city last week enroute to Winnipeg arrived over the G. N. in this city last Monday and on Tuesday drove out to Thorwick to look over some marsh lands near that place. While here they made arrangements for the lease of considerable land but upon their arrival from the Twin Cities in a few days more deals will be made.

They expect to have these lands sowed to wire grass immediately and will send up machinery and men to take care of the work this summer.

This company has an enormous amount of land on which they raise wire grass out of which they manufacture carpets and twine.

Moran—Provincher Marriage.

Last Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Catholic church occurred the marriage of Miss Melina Moran to Mr. Julien Provincher, Father Adolph officiating.

The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Crookston and other points in Minnesota to spend their honeymoon and expect to return to this city about Friday or Saturday of this week.

The News joins in with their host of friends in extending congratulations.

WANT THE PINE CUT

Last Big Stand of Virgin Forest in Minnesota Threatened by Annual Fires.

Mills Are Running Now, and Indians Would Benefit From High Prices Offered.

St. Paul Dispatch: Thief River Falls, Minn., May 1.—Again the danger of forest fires threatens the best timber sections of northern Minnesota. For three years in succession disastrous forest conflagrations have swept out of existence valuable quantities of timber which the increasing town and farm population of the Red river valley and North Dakota stand in such dire need of for building purposes. This spring is so dry that, despite the recent heavy rainfall, all the northern streams are at low stage.

The sawmills at Baudette, Spooner, Thief River Falls, Crookston and East Grand Forks are idle because the logs cannot be moved without a driving stage of water in the streams. Today fires are found all over Beltrami and adjoining counties where forests are to be found and interested persons fear another season of waste by fire.

About the Red lakes are vast areas of mature white and Norway pines estimated to contain three-quarters of a billion feet of lumber. This forest has been injured by fire in the past and its partial or total destruction is ever imminent. As this tract constitutes almost the sole remaining body of pine timber in northern Minnesota available for sale to the farms and towns in the sections indicated, its injury would seriously affect the interests of persons not directly connected with the lumber industries, to say nothing of the monetary loss to the Indian owners.

Were the state and federal government to protect these forests by scores of wardens it would avail little or nothing should fire get started. The fact is that this timber, being mature and in its prime, should be disposed of at once while the mills and mill companies are here to pay a fair price and in order to insure the full value to the Indian owners, but above all to supply the people of the prairie country to the west with lumber at reasonable prices.

Many commercial bodies in this state and North Dakota, aware of the facts and the conditions, have petitioned their representatives at Washington to take steps to obtain an early sale of the timber which is mature on the Red Lake Indian reservation, before it becomes the prey to the annual flames which endanger the forests of northern Minnesota.

The Indians favor the sale, which might be arranged so that the pine would be cut over a period covering several years as it is needed. The farmers and townspeople on the prairies prefer to buy this lumber, as the price will be increased to them as they have to go further away towards the eastern part of Minnesota for their supply. The mills are here now to bid on the timber, whereas in the not far distant future they will all be dismantled and moved to the West.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470. Which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 25th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of Mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said Mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen,
Assignee of Mortgage.

A. S. King,
Attorney for Assignees,
Lake Park, Minn.

A Connecticut gardener, a Mr. Shamel, who is of an experimental turn of mind, has hit upon the plan of applying steam to the soil in his tobacco seeds beds. He has found that keeping the beds up to at least 185 degrees F. for an hour very effectually kills the root rot to which the plants are subject and all other forms of fungous life and all weed seeds which the soil may contain. The steam is applied to the soil by being forced into a rectangular pan of the width of the bed and of a convenient length, which is inverted over the portion of the bed to be steamed. The tobacco seed is sown immediately after the treatment, the soil being in the finest possible condition. Plants started in this sterilized soil have proved to be remarkably strong and thrifty. The plan is recommended not only for tobacco seed beds, but those in which any other kind of plants are raised.

Not Pleased With Canada.

Walter Robbecke returned Tuesday morning from a trip to points in Northwestern Canada. Mr. Robbecke went to Saskatoon for the purpose of looking over the country with a view of taking a claim but found no land available without going about 200 miles from railroad and these lands were all a desolate prairie. He states that people are flocking into that country by the thousands, but more are returning discouraged then encouraged.

While the country as a whole showed no outward signs of prosperity, he says, the only ones reaping any harvest is the real estate men, and they are plentiful, who circulate everywhere their circulars and literature telling about the grand and glorious opportunity in store for those who should settle in their midst, but, who upon their arrival find entirely different existing conditions.

During his stay there that country was visited by a severe blizzard and when he left the ground was covered with six inches of snow.

During his stay in Saskatchewan he visited with his brother, Philip, who is employed in a big hotel at that place.

Why Pete Smiles.

The cause of the pleasing expression on the countenance of Pete Becken, the ticket agent at the G. N., these days has been the cause of considerable speculation of late among his friends. Some of the wise ones, in trying to fathom the mystery, have ventured bold enough to lay the cause of this sudden jubilation to the departure of his mother-in-law, others have it that it is a bit of fortune left him by a rich uncle. We contend that these are mistaken calculations and that WE hold the key to the mystery. For the benefit of those who are still in doubt we will venture to state that the true cause of all those smiles is the arrival of a brand new baby boy in the Becken household last Saturday.

In Onion Business.

Chief With-eye-e, who has part of his wigwam in Crookston and the balance at Warroad, has secured an acre of land from Chief Mamie Puck, of Warroad, after smoking several peace pipes, and announces that hereafter he will be glad to receive orders for future delivery. He has purchased two bushels of onion seed and will finish planting next week. He had broken away from his tribal relations pretty well of late years, and had discarded his blanket and feathers for good, he said, but Chief Mamie Puck won him back and he will play Indian at least half the time in the future.

DEAR SIR:-

If you can spare a few minutes today we wish you would drop over to the store, and let us show you some classy models in men's Collegian Clothes. We have just received a large shipment of these garments, and can truthfully say that no house in this vicinity ever showed such a varied line of styles. You already know the reputation of Collegian Clothes, as most well-dressed men wear them; therefore, it would be wasting time to go into details. We simply want to tell you there's any number of styles in the lot that will just suit your fancy. Anyway, you don't have to make a purchase; we want you to see them.

Very respectfully,

Kick the Printer

BULLETIN
"BOOM"

In the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., there has been for many years a conspicuous signboard outside an office which reads, "KICK THE PRINTER."

Bibulous persons sometimes go inside to carry out the apparent request, but they discover that the printer is a gentleman by the name of Kick.

In every town there are persons who, if they do not actually feel like kicking the printer—the newspaper man—at any rate do a lot of kicking at the way he conducts his paper.

Please DON'T kick the printer; he is doing the best he can.

And what he does for the town and community, despite his occasional mistakes, may be a great deal more than the kickers themselves are doing. Did THAT ever occur to you?

We are all neighbors in this town. What helps one helps the others. What hurts one hurts the others. Every community is a mutual benefit association, whether organized or just running wild. The printer is a charter member.

If you had no printer—no newspaper—how would you like that? Do you know what happens to towns that don't support a newspaper? Nothing happens. Nothing ever happens in a town like that. As soon as things begin to happen in a town the newspaper comes along and tells about them.

The newspaper boosts the town. It records progress and offers suggestions, by the editor or the readers, as to further progress. Every copy of every issue advertises the town. This is all free advertisement. It costs the town nothing. It costs the people nothing. It is a part of the business.

In view of this fact, which nobody can dispute, it is much better to pat the printer on the shoulder now and then or to speak kindly of him than to kick him.

NO; DON'T KICK THE PRINTER.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN
BY
CENTRAL POINT
ROGUE RIVER VALLEY
OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

The hidebound animal and the sod-bound orchard are alike in this respect—both are apt to be pretty scrawny, unprofitable propositions.

Just as fertile eggs and even more vigorous chickens will be had if the cock bird or cockerel is kept from his mates every alternate two days during the breeding season.

It is with hens as it is with hired men and dairy cows, "handsome is that handsome does." This statement is prompted by a glance at the picture of a celebrated Plymouth Rock hen that has a record of 230 eggs in a year. She was very short legged, comb twisted and ill shaped, tail feathers looking as if she had been the sport of a half grown puppy, and yet she delivered the goods—fifty-six pounds of eggs which sold for $4.75. Her bill of fare cost $1.50, leaving a net revenue of $3.25, more than is got from thousands of cows over the land.

Our readers know in a general way that there was a persistent drought over the country the past year, but perhaps few of them have seen it expressed in definite terms. The writer wished to have this data and so wrote the director of a north Iowa United States weather station. The director reported that covering a period of years the normal rainfall at his station was 31.23 inches, but that for the year from March 1, 1910, to March 1, 1911, the precipitation had been but 16.44 inches, which was a shortage of 14.79 inches as compared with the normal rainfall. Assuming that a pint of water weighs a pound, these figures mean that in the twelvemonth period there was a shortage of 1,366 tons of water per acre. Taking in connection with this the fact that an inch of water soaks down a foot in loose soil, one gets a good idea of the depth from which water was drawn last season to supply the needs of growing crops.

A reader of these notes living in a section where very little has been done along the line of growing alfalfa inquires how to go at it to get a stand, his purpose being to make a spring sowing of the seed. The writer is of the opinion that more satisfactory results will be had in getting a start with alfalfa if the sowing is delayed until the middle of August. The land used for the purpose should be well drained, enriched with seven or eight loads of barnyard manure per acre and just as free as possible from weed seeds. A piece of land from which a crop of wheat or oats has just been removed would serve the purpose very nicely, as a good share of the weed seed germinates within a short time after the grain is cut, while the remaining seed can be killed in the preparation of the soil for the alfalfa seed. While the seed can be broadcasted, there is little question that more uniform germination will be secured if it is drilled in. From fifteen to twenty-five pounds of seed may be used, the smaller quantity being required if a drill is used. There is a species of bacteria which works on the roots of the alfalfa plant, and a much thriftier growth will be secured if these are introduced into the soil. This may be done by mixing soil from an established alfalfa field with the manure with which the field is fertilized, or soil from the roadside where the wild sweet clover has grown will answer the same purpose, or one can make application to the department of agriculture at Washington for a little tube of the nitrogen fixing bacteria, which is diluted in water and the seed wet with this a few hours before sowing. After being treated the seed should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The writer has known of a number of instances in which a good stand of alfalfa has been secured by sowing the seed in the spring, but in these cases the soil was free from weed seeds, and the young alfalfa plants got a foothold at once and were not swamped with rank weeds, as is so often the case.

Whether in garden patch or farm field, it is well to remember that the best time in the whole season in which to dispatch weeds is just as they are breaking through the ground—"just a-bornin'," as some one has said. This is so because it is then that they are most easily killed, while they have not as yet begun to pull on either the moisture or fertility of the soil. Another decided advantage in doing the job at the start is that the weeds can be killed literally by the million with drag or harrow, while a few weeks later one is able to put them out of business with difficulty by thousands or less with hoe or cultivator.

Now and then one sees a garden which has been put in a haphazard, hit-and-go-miss fashion, looking for all the world as though the fellow who planted it had approached the job back end to and had continued this way clear across the patch, then for the succeeding rows had followed the same tactics. Things taste just as good grown in a garden where the rows are straight as from one in which they are crooked, while added to this there is the satisfaction to the eye in seeing things true and straight. More than this, the job of caring for the stuff is rendered much easier if the rows are straight and can be done with a wheel hoe or cultivator.

The country has lost one of its greatest agricultural benefactors in the passing of Dr. S. A. Knapp, who died at Washington a short time ago. For years he had been one of Secretary Wilson's able lieutenants in the line of bringing in a better era of agriculture. He had made many trips to countries in the far east for things that might be raised with benefit here. For several years past he had also had the direction of the agricultural extension work in the southern states, by means of which new and valuable crops have been introduced and the area of others extended and model farms established, where a rational type of agriculture has been demonstrated, showing the possibility of a restoration of soil fertility and an increase in crop yields. The service he has rendered in the last named field alone in proclaiming the "better way" can never be fully estimated.

There came to the writer's notice the other day the case of a boy—by no means a bad one as boys go—who four or five years ago quit school at the end of the seventh grade. He had little or no encouragement at home and, like many a youth at that age, was smart—thought he knew it all and so quit. This same boy hasn't whiskers on his face yet, but he thinks now that he made a mistake—this barely four years after. He surely did, for he is overgrown, and he would be ashamed to pick up the threads of school work again with those younger and smaller than himself, and the chances are that he does not possess force and persistence to take the studies up by himself. He defrauded himself by quitting school, and the conviction of it will grow on him as he ages. Pity it is, and yet thousands of boys are doing the same thing every day.

That was a profitable disposal that a couple of farmers made of an old shepherd dog the other day in a Mississippi valley town. They cut his ears off and got $5 bounty from the county on the representation that they were a wolf's and next palmed off the hide as a wolf pelt on a town buyer for 75 cents.

Ducks are by nature water fowls, but the experience with them of leading poultrymen covering many years shows that they make faster gains if they don't have a pond or stream to puddle around in. Far more important than this is keeping them supplied with an abundance of clean water to drink.

If a bill introduced into the New York legislature forbidding the offering for sale of eggs which have been kept in storage longer than three months becomes a law there is a prospect that omelets and angel food will be very exclusive rations. Some have the hardihood to predict that strictly fresh eggs will reach the two dollar mark per dozen if such a law is put in force.

If the small boy and girl could only realize more clearly than they do that all their tomorrows are but the continuations of their todays and that the kind of men and women they will be will depend largely on the kind of boys and girls they are today at home and in school, there are a lot of them who would turn over a new leaf, get busy and make the most of their opportunities.

An English scientist has estimated from data carefully gathered that in a year each rat in the United Kingdom does a cent's worth of damage a day, which for Great Britain alone would mean a loss of $73,000,000 annually. In America students of the rat question are more moderate, placing the damage at 20 cents per head per year, which means for all of this class of rodents a damage of $100,000,000 annually.

Nineteen thousand oil burners have been made by the owner of a mammoth orchard near Hutchinson, Kan., to be used in keeping the temperature of his orchard above freezing at blossom time. He has placed the burners in his orchard, has filled them with crude oil, and they are ready for business at the touch of a match. The equipment has cost him several thousand dollars, but he plans to save this several times over by their use in a single season.

Twenty-five years ago the seed by-product of southern cotton gins was one of the banes and chief wastes of the cotton growing industry, and thousands upon thousands of tons of the seed were burned or allowed to lie and rot. But soon there came a change. A method was devised for extracting the heavy oil content, and a little later the protein value of cottonseed meal was discovered. In 1910 the value of the oil and meal or cake manufactured from cottonseed was placed at $140,000,000, or about one-fourth of the total value of the cotton crop.

There is nothing in the line of things to eat that is nicer than a fine fresh egg and nothing that is worse than one that is "off color."

So far as his ever being of any use in the world, a small boy might as well tie a forty pound rock to his neck and jump into the nearest pond as to let the cigarette habit get its clutches on him.

In climates sufficiently mild for outdoor rose culture there are probably no roses that bloom more profusely and beautifully than the Killarney and Caroline Testout, and for this reason they are especially adapted for hedge and border uses.

Flower lovers who last fall took the pains to secure hyacinth, narcissus and daffodil bulbs are just now receiving a hundredfold return in the wealth of bloom and fragrance from these responsive and delicate plants. Especially are they prized because they come at a time when there is a dearth of other bloom.

The farmers of Denmark carry on not only remarkably successful co-operative dairies and creameries, but bacon factories. The output of the latter runs into millions annually and are so economically managed that the members realize 4 cents more per pound for their bacon than the hog raisers of any other country.

It will be well for those who have kept canna bulbs through the winter for the first time to inspect them and see what condition they are in. If their vitality seems to have been impaired or they seem too dry it will be a good idea to pot them at once and put them where it is light and cool, under which conditions they will sprout, but will not make much growth.

The University of Missouri has six registered Jersey cows that produced 4,314 pounds of butter in a year, or an average of 719 pounds per cow. This butter sold at an average price of 32 cents per pound, which meant a gross average return per cow for butter alone of $230. If these cows gave milk testing 6 per cent they gave 71,900 pounds of it in the same period, which was worth at 50 cents per hundredweight $359, or nearly $60 apiece.

The flesh of from 1 to 2 per cent of the hogs slaughtered in the United States is infested with a parasite known as trichina. Its presence in pork which is eaten raw or rare often causes serious illness and sometimes death. To safeguard against this danger all pork eaten should be thoroughly cooked, so that the meat is white all the way through. While thorough curing usually kills these parasites or flesh worms, such meat is not always thoroughly cured, hence should be thoroughly cooked before eating.

The dairy business of the country will be put on a much more profitable as well as a fairer basis when the price paid for cream is determined not only by butter fat content, but freedom from odors, filth, etc., which mean inevitably a poor butter quality. Just so long as a dirty patron gets so much per inch for his cream on the basis of the Babcock tests, no matter how loud and filthy it is, a distinct injustice will continue to be done the clean and careful patron, while there will continue to be lacking in the case of the filthy patron a compelling motive to be any cleaner or do any better.

The other day the writer ran across the very unusual case of an attempt to set the broken leg of a horse. The patient, a faithful old family nag, had been kicked by a livelier stable mate with the above result. Hating to kill the faithful animal, the owner called in a skilled veterinarian, who put the broken leg in a plaster cast and strapped it up in such a way that it was lifted from the floor. The last reports were that the broken bone was healing rapidly. The reason why this is not more often done is that such an animal cannot be kept quiet and its leg in a condition of relaxation for a long enough time for the bone to knit.

It would be impossible to express in terms of dollars and cents the value of the moisture which fell generally throughout the Mississippi valley and the vast region lying west about the middle of February. In some sections the welcome moisture, so essential to plant growth, fell in the shape of rain, while in the more northerly and mountain territory it came in the shape of snow. The precipitation was copious and assures a crop of wheat in a vast territory where it was feared that there could be little or nothing. In the more strict arid sections, including New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, the heavy fall of snow insures a supply of moisture necessary to furnish water for irrigation.

The fine young heifer bearing her first calf, in which the owner feels real pride, should be given a little extra attention the few weeks before as well as the few weeks after calving. One of these precautions is the feeding of such a ration as will provide her with a generous amount of protein needed in equipping her calf with a strong and healthy body. Corn fodder or ensilage with clover and alfalfa makes an excellent and well balanced ration. If the legumes are not to be had bran and oilmeal should be substituted, the last named element not being fed in excess of a pound per day. If such a ration is given and the heifer is given dry and warm sleeping quarters there will be no good reason why her offspring will not be strong and [illegible]

THE DEATH RECORD.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is dead at her summer home at Middletown, R. I. Death was due to heart failure resulting from advanced age and a severe cold recently contracted. She was ninety-one years of age. During her many years of activity in various fields Mrs. Howe published more than a dozen volumes, including books of poems, travel, reminiscences and views of life and men. Although Mrs. Howe's achievements in any one of a number of fields of activity have been sufficient to bring her worldwide fame it is as the author of the inspired lines of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" that she is most intimately known to the people of her own and other lands.

David B. Hill, ex-United States senator and former governor of New York, died suddenly at Wolfert's Roost, N. Y., his country home. About two weeks ago Mr. Hill was seized with a bilious attack while at his law office in Albany and although his condition was not considered serious at the time his physician advised him to remain at home until he recovered. A cold developed and a few days later alarming reports of his condition were circulated. These reports, however, were denied by friends. In fact, the patient appeared to be improving until just before the end, when he suffered a sinking spell which resulted in his death.

Cable dispatches announce the death in Palmanes, India, of Rev. Dr. Jarod W. Scudder, one of the oldest and most distinguished Americans in the foreign missionary field. For more than fifty-two years he had been one of the principal representatives in India of the Reformed church of America.

William Vaughn Moody, poet, playwright and critic, is dead at Colorado Springs, Colo. Although but forty-one years of age Moody had achieved unusual distinction in literary fields and as a playwright. One of his best known plays was "The Great Divide," played for several seasons by Henry Miller.

Willard Stephen Whitmore, inventor of the papier mache matrix process of stereotyping, used by nearly every newspaper in the country, and from which he gained no material benefit, is dead at Washington, D. C., aged sixty years.

John Geoffort, seventy-five years old, and his wife, aged sixty-eight, were found dead in bed in their residence in Vandalia, Mo. A coroner's jury decided the man had died of heart disease and his wife of indigestion.

Thomas T. Eckert, former president of the Western Union Telegraph company, is dead at West End, Long Branch, after an illness of several days. Mr. Eckert was born at St. Clairsville, O., April 23, 1825.

David Rankin, aged eighty-five, millionaire farmer philanthropist, owner of the largest farm in the world under cultivation and one of Missouri's wealthiest men, is dead at his home at Tarkio, Mo.

Rev. Winfield Scott, former national chaplain of the Grand Army of the Republic, died at his home in Scottsdale, Ariz., following an operation.

There is probably no phase of neighborly relation in which the Golden Rule finds nicer exemplification than in keeping one's flock of hens shut up when the neighbors have their flower and vegetable gardens nicely spaded, raked and planted.

It is said on good authority that under the system of taxation which prevails in Mexico the peasant—in reality an agricultural slave—pays a larger amount to support the government than does one favored and wealthy family which owns 10,000,000 acres. Little wonder that there is unrest across the border.

The tiller of the soil who understands the chemistry of a spring snow which comes after a part or all of the early seeding is done always welcomes it, for he knows that in addition to the moisture which it contains and its mellowing effect upon the surface soil it deposits a considerable amount of nitrogen, which it absorbs in passing through the air.

Under a recent order from the general land office at Washington 21,820 acres of land surrounding the Wichita national forest in Oklahoma are to be restored to homestead entry and will be subject to entry after May 10 and until June 15. This will be under the usual conditions, which require the payment of $1.25 per acre at the time final proof is made.

SHYSTER LAND PROMOTERS.

If there is any type of graft or skin game that is a close second to the promotion of "salted" mining enterprises from the standpoint of sheer fraud and skulduggery, it is that followed by certain real estate promoters, chiefly in the south and west, who buy large tracts of very spotted or worthless land, plat it and issue glowing advertising matter, publishing therewith the stolen records of other nearby bona fide fruit, vegetable or grain growing sections to serve as a bait for the always greedy and usually gullible public. In some cases the fraud perpetrated consists of selling at long prices land where there is so little soil above bedrock or hardpan that trees will hardly survive beyond the time when they are turned over to buyers at "bearing age." In other cases the soil may be all that could be desired, but the tract is located in an arid or semi-arid section where, though grafter promoters who make guarantee of perpetual water rights have seemed to build irrigation systems, no water will ever be running when water is most needed. In other cases the land sold "unsight and unseen" may consist largely of impassable bogs, which have been in the past and will likely remain the stamping grounds of alligators, mosquitoes and malaria. All of these promotion schemes and others which might be listed are fraudulent and rotten, and the grafters who are backing them are just as guilty and even more detestable than the highway robber, who, whatever else can be said of him, is not a wolf in sheep's clothing and doesn't pose as a public benefactor. The south and west as sections possess marvelous and varied resources, can stand on their own worth and merits and have a wonderful future, but they don't need, neither are they helped, but rather given a black eye, by the lurid and dishonest advertising of the tribe of sharks above referred to. People in both sections should unite in locating, branding and putting out of commission those chaps who are in the land business solely to fill their pockets and who are in every way a detriment to legitimate growth and wholesome devel

SHOULD GROW POSTS.

It goes without saying that, with the forests of the country falling prey to tooth of flame and sawmill, posts along with other forms of timber products, are bound to advance in price. For this reason every farmer who has fences which will need repairing or building during the coming years may well consider the wisdom of a small timber lot on which his post timber may be grown. Conditions of temperature, moisture and soil will be largely determining factors. The adaptability of trees of a given kind to such conditions can readily be determined from some nearby reliable nurseryman or from the horticultural department of one's state experiment station. The federal government has also issued a large number of leaflets on the planting of different varieties of trees, and these would also be helpful. Of trees grown for posts perhaps the catalpa (speciosa) is the most satisfactory. For sections where the winters are not unduly severe the Russian mulberry makes an excellent post timber, while the locust is very satisfactory if the borers do not bother. Where conditions of soil or moisture make the growing of any of the above impossible substitutes may be found in the cottonwood, Norway and Carolina poplar, rapid growing soft woods. However, if such timber is used the posts should be cured before setting and treated with creosote or other wood preservative, which will make them as durable as untreated hardwood posts. A feature in the care of the wood lot that should be kept in mind is that to make the most rapid growth the little trees, for two or three years at least, should be given thorough and regular cultivation. This will mean not only more vigorous growth, but straighter and more uniform trunks.

THOUSANDS OF LOAFERS.

Figures which have lately been published by Hugh Van Pelt, state dairy expert of Iowa, show that of the 1,500,000 cows kept in the state there are at least 500,000 which not only do not return their owners any profit during the year, but are handled at a positive loss—that is, the farmers who milk and care for these cows or hire men to do it actually pay for the privilege of monkeying with them. Iowa's showing in this regard may be poorer than Wisconsin's or New York's, but it is a fair guess that in

Viewed in one way, the peanut is a sort of modest, insignificant proposition, yet $12,000,000 worth of peanuts are consumed annually in this country.

California orange growers stand in much fear that the orange maggot, which has made the citrus industry of Mexico practically worthless, will invade their splendid ranches. The strictest kind of quarantine has been adopted, and it is hoped that the pest can be kept out.

A poultryman who has had good success raising ducks recommends the following ration for them during the laying periods: Cornmeal, 45 per cent; bran, 20 per cent; cooked vegetables, 15 per cent; beef scraps, 15 per cent, and grit or sand, 5 per cent. This should be mixed with milk and fed night and morning.

A western woman, a resident of Seattle, Wash., has suggested to the city council the passage of an ordinance which will compel all owners of cats to put small bells on them so that the birds will be given warning on their approach and thus thousands of the feathered tribe saved from destruction. Considering the uselessness of the average cat, the above suggestion would seem to be a good one.

There are several states in which tracts especially and definitely devoted to the production of timber or orchards are exempted from taxation covering a considerable period of years. Those who are interested in either of the above lines would do well to look up the laws of their respective states relative to the matter in order to profit therefrom, while if there be no such laws the attention of one's state representative may be called to the fact.

An unkempt cedar or cypress hedge is not a lovely thing; but, trimmed or no, it furnishes the birds—our most valued benefactors—with a protection from their worst enemies—cats and hawks by day and owls by night. We passed just such a hedge the other evening at dusk, where a number of juncos were roosting, and caught a screech owl in the attempt to get at the birds. But in spite of the fact that its eyes were good the hedge was so dense that the owl could not get at its prey. We have had a kindlier feeling for that hedge since.

Even under the most favorable conditions the giving of birth to the young animals on the farm means for the dams a severe drain not only upon their nervous system, but also their store of physical vitality. For this reason great care should be taken to see that all animals with young should be so fed as to be abundantly nourished, while the quarters in which they give birth to their offspring should be dry and clean and free from drafts of air. Care in these two particulars would save a world of grief and loss for the average stock raiser.

A Wisconsin reader makes inquiry as to the right way to dip cattle. While spraying thoroughly with a disinfecting solution of the proper strength will give good results, the surest and safest way is sousing the animals in a tank of the solution. This should be deep enough so that they will have to swim at the middle and should be provided with sloping approaches for ingress and exit. It is customary at the central stockyards, where thousands of animals are given the dip daily, to drive them through the tank in single file and as they reach the middle for an attendant stationed above to give the head a downward shove, so that the animal will be completely submerged. There are several good dips on the market, put up in cans of several sizes, with full direction for use.

Now and then an orchard is situated on such a slope that it is necessary to keep it in sod to prevent the washing and gullying of the surface, but with the exception orchardists are pretty well agreed that sod in the orchard tract should be killed and the soil given thorough and frequent cultivation during the early part of the season—at least to July 15. This will make available for the use of the trees in their production of fruit the fertility contained in the soil and will reduce to a minimum, if followed year after year, the damage from insect pests like the curculio, which finds an ideal harbor in a blue grass sod. It is more than likely if the orchard tract is an old one and has been neglected that it will need fertilizing before it will produce profitably. Some barnyard manure may be used, but this will not give as satisfactory results as the specially prepared commercial fertilizers in which potassium and phosphoric acid predominate.

A desperate effort has been made by paint and varnish makers to prevent the passage of laws in some of the states which compel the printing on every can of paint or varnish the formula according to which each is put up. One of the arguments which they are offering is that paints and varnishes do not affect the health, hence there is no need of giving the formula. True, this adulteration does not hit a fellow's digestive apparatus, but it surely does his pocketbook, for probably there is more adulteration of paints than of any other product of common use. If the paints are made of good pigments and pure linseed oil there is really no reason why the facts should not be stated on the outside of the package.

Probably no experiment station in the country has done more along the line of poultry investigations than that of Maine. For those of our readers who are interested in poultry raising we give below the receipt used by this station for making lice powder and making a spray for use in the hen house. To make the powder mix three parts of gasoline with one part crude carbolic acid (or cresol) and add while stirring enough plaster of paris to give, when thoroughly mixed, a dry, pinkish brown powder. As a rule it will take four quarts of the plaster to one of liquid. This should be worked into the feathers, especially around the vent on the lower side of the body and under the wings. A second treatment should be given in four or five days and a third after about the same interval if the birds are badly infested. The wash or spray is made by mixing just before using three parts of kerosene with one part of crude full strength carbolic acid, and this should be applied with a hand spray pump or brush to the interior of the house.

There recently appeared in the daily newspapers of the central states a statement credited to a state dairy inspector to the effect that there was no danger in the use of milk from a tuberculous cow unless the lesions of the disease were actually present in her udder. If milk could be drawn from the udder of a cow under absolutely sanitary conditions always, so that no germs could be introduced from the outside—the above statement might be true, but the fact is very little milk is so secured. On the other hand, it has been found that the manure of a cow will contain the germs of tuberculosis long before her milk will, and if particles of the excreta get into the milk, as is true in a majority of cases, without doubt such milk is likely to contain germs of tuberculosis and therefore is unfit for food. Contrasted with the loose and well nigh criminally careless view as expressed above is the opinion of one of the animal husbandry experts of the department of agriculture at Washington—namely, that from the moment a cow has tuberculosis in any part of her body she is a source of danger and is likely to impart the germs to other animals or to human beings.

A Fable For Critics

Once there was an Ox. He was a fine, hefty Ox. He could pull a big load. He never balked, but always liked to go straight ahead.

But the Ox had enemies.

There was the Flea and his whole big Family. "We don't care whether this Ox travels or not," said the Flea and his Folks. "All we want is some of his blood." Whereupon the Fleas eternally pestered the Ox and gave him That Tired Feeling.

Then there was the Tom Cat and his brothers—the Doubting Thomases. "We don't know whether this Ox is going the right way or not," said the Thomases. "Anyhow, we'll scratch his back for him." Whereupon the Felines jumped on the back of the Ox and scratched him for fair, which made the Ox exceedingly sorrowful.

GIT UP!
GIT UP!

Then there was the Fiste Pup and his Fellow Fistes—a whole litter of Fistes. "We don't care how slow the Ox goes," said the Fistes; "the slower the merrier for us. All we want is to lag behind him and bite his Tail." Whereupon the Fistes snapped continually at the Tail of the Ox, which gave the Ox a mighty mournfulness.

Finally the Ox, pestered constantly with the Fleas and the Felines and the Fistes, got to looking sickly. He stopped and lay down on his job, and there was no more going forward for him.

KEY TO THE SITUATION: The town is the Ox. The Fleas and the Felines and the Fistes are those citizens who criticise every progressive movement and do everything they can in their petty ways to make the Ox quit pulling in the right direction.

MORAL: Give the Ox a chance to pull. Everybody holler, "Git up!"

If there is anything meaner than a balky horse we don't know what it is

The drinking of large quantities of cold water and deep breathing of fresh air is an excellent cold cure.

Efficiency, which is being made the watchword of many large industrial enterprises, might be adopted by the tiller of the soil with equal profit.

Great care should be exercised in looking after the health of all dairy cows, but especially those that supply milk for the babies and little folk, who, if in frail health, are especially susceptible to tuberculosis.

It is a commentary on our present day-civilization that the most sacred rite and institution we have—that of marriage—often furnishes the occasion for a type of vandalism and horseplay that would shame a Fiji islander or a Patagonian.

A wise mother we know has prevented her little child from forming the candy habit by never allowing it to eat candy and so to acquire a taste for it. The necessary sweets are provided in other ways, and the child is encouraged to eat fruit, which is equally appetizing and much more wholesome.

Hair balls, sometimes reaching a diameter of two or three inches, are now and then found in the stomachs of cattle. They are usually covered with a shell-like crust or coat and are without doubt the gradual accumulation of hair licked from their bodies by animals at the time of the spring shedding.

A good idea of the size of the country is often obtained from reports covering the operation of a big railroad system for a year. The annual report of the Pennsylvania railway, recently published, shows that on the 4,004 miles of road belonging to the system there were hauled in 1910 441,010,033 tons of freight, while during the same interval there were carried 163,604,348 passengers.

There seems to be a disposition on the part of the railroads in the central western states, where the two cent fare laws were adopted, to let the rate stand, for since the new rate became operative it has been found that passenger traffic has been enough larger to more than offset the loss resulting from the reduction. If practicable in the sparsely settled western states it would seem as if conditions were such as to justify the rate in many an eastern state.

The world would probably be just as well off if a half or more of the dogs were put out of the way by some hurry up method, but now and then a valuable canine that one would really like to save gets a dose of poison. In such cases it is worth remembering that hot lard and milk will, if given at once, often induce vomiting, which will free the system of the drug. They also tend to act as an antidote for poisons having a corrosive effect. In the line of drug antidotes potassium bromide is excellent. It can be got at any drug store and may be given in a small quantity of water.

Brazil has a rival to our Niagara falls, called Iguassu, which is very similar in appearance to Niagara, having a horseshoe bend on one side. The falls cover a distance of about two miles, with a final leap of 213 feet. The depth at the foot of the falls is more than a hundred fathoms and is believed by the natives to be bottomless. During the rainy season the volume of water taking these wild leaps is much greater than that of Niagara, while Iguassu surpasses Niagara further in the fact that it stands in a primal wilderness, undisturbed and unmarred by commercialism.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York is lending aid to a back to the land movement that is, to say the least, unique and interesting. She selected twenty young women from many applicants and has placed them on her farm, Brookholt, on Long Island. They dress in bloomers, broad brimmed hats and boys' shoes and are to do all the work on the place, including wood-chopping and caring for the horses. They are to be given thorough training in household duties, and when the time comes will take up plowing, planting and the raising of poultry. At the end of two months, if they like "farming," they will have an opportunity to purchase small tracts from their benefactress. This plan may work all right awhile, but the chances are that most of these girls will have a man around the premises before many moons.

GROWING MUSHROOMS.

A reader living at Massillon, O., writes making inquiry about the raising of mushrooms. Since there may be other readers who are interested in this subject we give the following general directions relative to growing them. Mushrooms may be grown in any place where conditions of temperature and moisture are favorable. The proper temperature ranges from 53 to 60 degrees F., with the most favorable at from 55 to 58 degrees. Experience has demonstrated that it is unsafe to attempt to grow them on a commercial scale where the temperature will be much less than 50 or more than 63 degrees. It will be seen that the conditions here named will be found in caves, warm cellars, basement stables and greenhouses, while during the spring and fall they could be grown in sheds or under other shelters where right temperatures could be maintained. The next requisite is the bed. This is usually made of horse manure from well bedded stables containing a moderate amount of straw or other litter, first treating it by putting it under cover in broad piles three or four feet deep and allowing to cure for from twelve to eighteen days. At intervals of two or three days the manure should be forked over and made into a new pile to prevent excessive heating. If it gets too hot, indicated by turning white, or too dry water should be sprinkled on to make it moist, but not wet. When the temperature of the pile has gone down to 100 degrees it is ready for use. After selecting the place for the bed a layer of the coarsest of the manure should be spread and firmly tramped down. Succeeding layers should be added and tramped in the same manner until the bed is from twelve to fourteen inches thick. The wall of the building will furnish a retainer for the rear of the bed, and a board of the desired width will do for the front, with the wall or boards for the ends. Sometimes one part of rich soil is used with four or five parts of manure, some of the soil being added with each layer of manure, but this is not essential. The bed will heat and later cool, and when a thermometer inserted to a depth of several inches shows a temperature of 75 degrees the spawn may be planted. This is got in the shape of dried manure bricks from leading seed houses. Before being used the bricks should be broken into pieces about two inches in diameter and these planted at a depth of two inches in holes from eight to ten inches apart each way, the pieces of spawn being pressed firmly into place. These holes should be filled and the manure and soil packed down firmly. For about a week after planting the spawn the bed should be given a loose covering of excelsior or straw. This is then removed and the bed covered evenly with a layer of about an inch and a half of rich soil, which serves as a blanket to retain the moisture of the bed and gives a cleaner place in which the mushrooms may form. If the spawn is good and bed has been carefully made mushrooms should begin to appear in the course of five or six weeks. They are ready to pick when the gills beneath the umbrella are a bright pink color, and they continue in an edible condition until the gills have turned to a dark brown or black. The bed should be kept moist with a light sprinkling a couple of times a week. A bed will continue productive for from five weeks to as many months, and the yield per square foot of bed ranges from one-half to two pounds. Mushrooms will net the producer all the way from 35 to 75 cents a pound, depending upon quality, demand, etc. As soon as a bed is done fruiting it is worthless for future use, and all the manure and earth should be removed and entirely new material provided for the next crop. While there are good returns in the growing of mushrooms, there are also risks, which must be taken into account, and it is well for those planning to go into the business to try it at first on a small scale. Those planning to raise mushrooms would do well to send to the department of agriculture at Washington for farmers' bulletin No. 204, which goes into the subject in detail.

DRAWN AND UNDRAWN POULTRY

Some time ago investigations were undertaken by the department of agriculture with a view to determining the keeping quality of drawn and undrawn poultry. These tests were made during the season 1909-10, and the results have just been made public. The birds used were mature hens, large and fairly fat, and were killed and dressed by the regular employees of a poultry packing house—bled through the mouth and dry picked—and were shipped in the usual packages in a carlot of dressed poultry. They were received by the wholesaler, were handled with his stock, went to the retailer when he purchased fowls from the same carlot and remained in his shop for the period required to effect their sale. A part of the fowls were full drawn, some wire drawn, others "Boston drawn" and some not drawn at all. When the data were gathered it was found that the undrawn poultry kept best—decomposed more slowly; that the full drawn, with head and feet removed, decomposed most rapidly, while the two other classes stood about midway between these. These findings will tend to settle a point in the public mind which has been much in dispute and will be of practical and real benefit to the raisers and shippers of dressed poultry.

F. E. Trigg

Shelled corn, grits and water may be all right for the bunch of old Biddies that are being fattened for pie, but if eggs are wanted something that will furnish a protein element will have to be provided—bran, oilmeal, tankage, bran, clover or alfalfa.

An investigation into the probable cause of rust spots appearing on apples shipped from some Pacific coast points made by Professor D. J. O'Gara, fruit disease expert, leads him to the conclusion that the spots in question are due to impurities contained in the arsenate of lead used in spraying the trees and not to any fungous or scale pest.

While they may not be able to analyze the philosophy of it, it is remarkable at how early an age little children seem to acquire a sense and appreciation of what is right, just and fair. Many a parent ignores this faculty in the early years, only to wake up later to a realization of the fact that both the respect and confidence of the child have been forfeited.

The jungle fowl of India, supposed to be a distant cousin of our modern breeds of domestic fowls, follows out her natural instinct and lays a clutch or two of eggs a year, as many at one time as she can effectively cover and incubate. It is because of this natural habit of their early ancestors that the modern flock of hens incline under average conditions to produce 60 rather than 200 eggs in a year.

Until recently plaster was seldom used in the interior finishing of Pacific slope houses, owing to the fact that it so frequently became loose and fell off during the rainy weather. Instead, the rooms were finished with matched sheathing, heavy building paper or cloth and the paper put on over this. Since the introduction of wood fiber plaster it is being quite generally used in the section mentioned.

In a recent statement published by Chief Forester Graves the estimate is made that 84 per cent of the loss from forest fires during the year 1909 was directly traceable to carelessness on the part of settlers in burning their timber clearings and similar carelessness on the part of the railroads through failure to use effective spark arresters. Here is a type of conservation of natural resources that can be put into practice without the necessity of legislative deliberation or executive decree to make it effective.

COMMITS SUICIDE

Ole O. Bjorge, Residing East of City, Committed Suicide Last Saturday Evening.

Despondency Is Attributed As the Cause of His Rash Act.

Ole O. Bjorgo, who resides on a farm about six miles east of this city, committed suicide last Saturday evening by hanging.

Mr. Bjorge disappeared from his home last Saturday and on his failure to return in the evening the family became uneasy and thinking possibly he had met with an accident a searching party was formed to go in quest of him. A long and tedious search until a late hour Saturday night failed to reveal his whereabouts and the search was abandoned for the night.

Early Sunday morning the search was resumed and the body was found hanging in a stable about one mile this side of his farm. How long the body had been suspended in this manner is not known, but it is thought the rash act had been committed some time Saturday.

The deceased some time ago filed on a homestead about six miles east of this city on which a number of contests were entered, and dispondency over this and other matters is generally attributed as the cause of this action.

The coroner was called out there to view the remains, and the body was interred last Monday.

He leaves a wife and large family of children to mourn his demise and who have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

A Boy's Essay on the Editor.

I don't know how newspapers came to be in the world and I don't think God does, for he hain't got nothing to say about them in the bible. I think the editor is the missing link we read or of stayed in the bushes until after the flood and then came out and wrote things up and has been here ever since. I don't think he ever died, I never saw a dead one and never heard of one getting licked. Our paper is a mighty good one but the editor goes without underclothes all winter and don't wear any socks and pa hain't paid his subscription since this paper started. I asked pa if that was why the editor had to suck the juice out o' snowballs in the winter, and go to bed when he had his shirt washed in the summer.

Then pa got mad and took me out in the woodshed and licked me awful hard. If the editor makes a mistake folks say he ought to be hung, but if a doctor makes a mistake he buries them and people dassent say nothing, because a doctor can write Latin. When the editor makes mistakes there is a lawsuit, and swearing and a big fuss, but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and perfect silence.

A doctor can use a word a mile long without him or anyone else knowing what it means, but if the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges the man for the visit, but if the editor should go he gets a charge of buck shot. Any college can make a doctor to order, but an editor has to be born.—The Loyaltonian, Loyalton, Cal.

Company Doing Well.

On Feb. 6, 1900, a few of the farmers of eastern Pennington and Marshall counties met at the Erie postoffice to discuss the advisability of building a telephone line to Thief River Falls. As a result another meeting was held at Kratka on Feb. 15, at which were present, Stephen Singer, Geo. A. Johnson, Christ Rude, A. W. Hanson, Fred Solly, Edwin Olson, Andrew T. Nelson, Ole Vostrand, Peter O. Wold, Chas. Henry, H. R. Leslie, E. O. Erickson, Nels G. Hendrickson, Carl Hoven, Ole T. Waal, and Hans O. Hommy and Alex F. Lattimore.

At this meeting the "Red Lake Eastern Marshall Farmers Telephone Co." was organized. A large number of shares were subscribed for at the time and through the efforts of the promoters with the assistance of a few of the business men of Thief River Falls the line was completed from Grygla to Thief River Falls, a distance of about 50 miles, during the fall of 1910. In Dec. 1910, it was found necessary to borrow $800 in order to pay off all outstanding claims. This has been paid from the earnings of the line, the last payment being made about two weeks ago. The Company is now entirely free from debt, its stock is worth 100 cents on the dollar and the present monthly earnings are sufficient to insure the line's being more fully equipped and needed repairs being made besides leaving sufficient to insure a fair dividend on the outstanding stock, for all of which the officers and others feel thankful.—Eleven Towns.

Attention!

Rev. Alexander Irvine of New York, will be in Thief River Falls, Thursday, May 18th, and will give a lecture on Socialism, in the Auditorium at 8 o'clock P. M. The local Socialists feel jubilant, because they were able to secure such a prominent speaker. He is one of the foremost lecturers on the Socialist platform to-day. 25 and 35 cents admission will be charged, which will include 40 weeks subscription to the Appeal to Reason. Ladies Free See bills for further particulars.

Press Comment, Journal, Dayton, Ohio: Alexander Irvine, soldier of fortune, farmer, sociologist and lecturer is the biggest drawing card the Socialists of this city ever had. Long before the hour of opening, every seat was taken.

BEAR TAKES A JAUNT

Wrestling Bruin at the Grand Theatre Makes a Little Escapade.

Resents Slap from Manager For Using Toe-Hold and Skips.

Jim, the wrestling and performing bear who has been throwing all comers at the Grand the latter half of last week broke loose in the course of his act last Thursday night and gave everyone a merry chase for their money before he was recovered again.

Jim, who is as sensitive as a child and as strong as a bear, was at the time of his escapade in a heated contest with his keeper in a catch-as-catch can bout, the toe-hold barred, but in order to do quick work of his opponent Jim decided while his manager was not looking to use the toe-hold, which he did with such force that it brot forth a yell of pain from his opponent, which brought the referee quickly on the scene. The owner by way of reprimanding him gave him a slight slap on the nose which irritated bruin to such an extent that he knocked his opponent and his owner in a heap on the floor and made good his escape thru the back door.

Employees of the house soon gave chase, but Jim, who had wisely chosen the dark back alleys as the means of perfecting his little escapade soon managed to get into the open country without being detected.

As soon as the rays of "Old Sol" world furnished a guidance Friday morning hundreds of men and boys were searching the woods and every clump of trees that could possibly furnish a refuge with the hopes of recovering the bear, not so much because they had any particular love for bruin or were aching to come into any personal encounter with him, but the $250 reward offered by the owner for his recovery was an inducement for everyone who could possibly get away to go "gunnin for the bear."

A strenuous search all day Friday resulted in no further trace of the bruin than that he was somewhere in the vicinity north of the city and it was not until in the evening that word was received that he had been captured by four men of the section crew wandering along the railroad track up towards Strip, and he was brought to this city that evening.

Mr. Stevens, the owner was nearly broken hearted over his loss and spared no means in trying to capture his bear.

Everyone who has seen Jim perform will realize at what price the owner values his pet bear and whose loss would have been an irreparable one.

Pat Meehan Estate In District Court.

Before Judge Watts in chambers on Tuesday evening the evidence was submitted in an action brought by James Meehan, Jr., against the estate of Pat Meehan, deceased. The action is in the nature of a claim against the estate for $10,000 alleged to be due the plaintiff for services rendered. The case is carried up from the probate court of Red Lake county. Arguments by counsel will be submitted later.

The estate is that of Pat Meehan, the well known lumberman, who operated at Thief River Falls for many years, and who died a couple of years ago. The plaintiff, James Meehan, is a nephew of the deceased and formerly resided in Thief River Falls, but now claims Minneapolis as his home. Among the attorneys present at the hearing were D. M. Stanton, of Thief River Falls, and Greeley Carr, now of Minneapolis.—Crookston Press.

Washington News Item.

Henry Hall, in the Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph: There is quite a large "baby class" in this House. That is the class in which they put all the members over six feet in height, with weight "accordin'." The holdovers in the class are Representatives Barchfeld, of Pennsylvania; Dwight, of New York; Sulloway, of New Hampshire; Weeks, of Massachusetts; Anthony, of Kansas; Steenerson, of Minnesota, and James, of Kentucky. To these have been added Wedemeyer, of Michigan; Willis, of Ohio; Young, of Kansas, and Hinds, of Maine.

"These are all big men physically and mentally, and, like all big men, are popular with their fellows. Perhaps their popularity arises in some degree from the fact that their smaller colleagues realize what they could do to them if they wanted to, but the fact remains that all these gentlemen are among the most courteous and considerate members of the House. They certainly do not "presume on their size."

"If it should ever come to a rough-and-tumble in the House," said Representative Dwight, "we would sure have the advantage over the Democrats, for all the big fellows are Republicans, with the sole exception of Ollie James, of Kentucky. On the 'flying wedge' proposition we could lay it all over them."

Grasshopper Work—Important Notice

Grasshopper eggs are just beginning to hatch, and reports are reaching this office from various localities that they are quite abundant, in some places dangerously so. These eggs, when found, should be plowed deep. The same applies to the newly hatched grasshoppers. Where farms adjoin large tracts of unplowed land, and this unplowed land is found full of eggs, or swarming with very young grasshoppers, a young crop of grain might be protected for a while by plowing a strip of this reverted land two or three rods wide adjoining the field planted with grain.

We plan to have three or more experts in the field this summer, ready to go to the assistance of farmers. One man, Mr. M. P. Somes, is already located at Fergus Falls.

Grasshopper eggs are laid in the first inch of the soil in pockets made by the female grasshopper. These eggs resemble small kernels of wheat, and are yellowish or brownish.—F. L. Washburn, State Entomologist.

DROPS FIRST TWO GAMES

Locals Defeated By Red Lake Falls Team Last Sunday by 7 to 2 Score.

Local Travelers, Also, Become the Victims of Crookston Aggregation.

The local base ball tossers dropped their initiative game of the season to the Red Lake Falls aggregation last Sunday afternoon by a score of 7 to 2.

Tenney Aaseland, who was on the firing line for the locals, pitched a splendid game for the first few innings, when he went to pieces owing to a lack of training this spring and his arm not being in shape. S. H. Hess stepped into the box after this and pitched the rest of the game.

The locals made an abundance of hits, as did also the Red Lake Falls team, but were unfortunate in placing their hits right in the hands of the enemy and were unable to score more than twice.

Lack of training and team work so far this spring is attributed as the cause of their not making the showing that they might have done, but for the next two weeks Manager Peterson will put his bunch through a thorough training after which they ought to be in ship shape condition, and will play a return game with the down river bunch on the local diamond a week from Sunday.

Quite a number of boosters accompanied the team down in rigs and automobiles Sunday morning to be present at the game.

The local U. C. T.'s went down to Crookston Saturday where on Sunday they played a game with the Crookston U. C. T.'s and was handed one in the nature of a defeat by a score of 15 to 8.

The Crookstonites, it is asserted, landed out the "stingers" with marked regularity the first three innings and managed to run in eleven scores.

Bain, the pitcher for the locals was relieved by Nason, who held the opposing team down to a very few hits and who with Anderson on bases in the 3rd inning landed one over the fence and made a home run.

A game between the so-called "Out-Laws" and the "Tigers" at the fair grounds last Sunday afternoon resulted in a victory for the former, the score being 8 to 4. The game, it is reported, was an exceptionally interesting one. The winners got a big lead in the first inning when they managed to get four scores on three safe hits and two errors by those in the field, and after this the game was a very close and heated contest.

Business Men In Theatricals.

The New York Herald of July 8 says: "It's strange what strides the stage has made during the past five years, not to speak of a century. Business men have now taken a hand in that pie, and find it a very profitable investment. John T. Raymond, during his grand struggle through numberless difficulties, was backed by some of the solid business men of Boston. Dustin Farnum, who electrified this country in "The Virginian," was furnished the necessary funds by a large printing establishment in New York. And now a leading business man of Chicago has taken hold of the comedy, "The Climax," and, having engaged an extraordinary good company, will appear in all the principal cities in a trip across the continent. Prior to their run in San Francisco they will take in some of the minor towns and thus make the journey to the coast with more ease. Theatrical men, look sharp. The business men will crowd you out.

Care of the Health.

As authorized by law, the State Board of Health has issued and published the following regulation, and any violation of them is punishable:

No principle, superintendent, or teacher of any school, and no parent master or guardian of any child or minor, having the power and authority to prevent, shall permit any such child or minor having smallpox, scarlet fever diptheria, measles, chicken pox, tuberculosis influenza tonsilitis, erysipelas, whooping cough, mumps, itch, ringworm, or trachoma, or any other dangerous communicable disease, or any child residing in any house in which any disease exists, or has recently existed to attend any public, private, parochial church or Sunday school, until the local health officer of the city, village or township, shall have his permission for such attendance.

A school house wherein a child suffering from smallpox, scarlet fever, or diptheria has been present shall be deemed infected, and must be temporarily closed and thoroughly disinfected and cleaned, under the supervision of the local health officer before re-opening of the school. Such disinfection and cleaning shall be done according to directions of the Minnesota State Board of Health, in its circular on disinfection.

All schoolhouses should be inspected from time to time, by the local health officer, and if found to be in an unclean or unsanitary condition, said officer shall forthwith order that the place be closed and kept closed, until it has been properly cleaned or disinfected, or both, as the case may require.

Whenever it is proposed to build a new school house, the plans and specifications for the same, in respect to sanitary conditions, shall be submitted and filed with the Minnesota State Board of Health, and no such building shall be constructed until the sanitary arrangements of the same have been approved by the said board.

A Hilarious Sport.

One of our young men, whose name we refrain from mentioning, who has just returned from a trip to the southern part of the state tells of the following incident which happened while he spent a couple of days in his old home town which, he asserts, has gone thru the reformation stages. He states that he was taking a stroll around town with the hopes of meeting some of his old time friends one day, but to his amazement and chagrin he could not detect a living soul on the streets anywhere, and tiring of his walk he strolled into the park where likewise everything was quiet.

Seating himself on a park bench he was like everything around him just about falling asleep when he heard voices coming from a remote corner of the park. Upon closer investigation he discovered a handful of elderly gentlemen, some seated on the benches and some in a circle on the ground, who were engaged in something or other in which they were intensely interested. Deciding not to be an intruder he withdrew to his hotel to spend the night.

The next day on his visit again to the Park he again discovered voices from the same corner of the park and decided to make the discovery of their occupation. On approaching a little closer he recognized in these men the same as those he had seen there the day before and who were seated in the same manner. He accosted an elderly gentleman, who was sitting a little to the side, who was quietly looking on; sipping the contents of a pop bottle and smoking his pipe, and questioned him as to what game or other they were playing that should be so intensely interesting. "Playing Marbles" the old man replied.

Rev. Jones Leaves Crookston.

Rev. Owen F. Jones, rector of Christ's Episcopal church at Crookston has left that city for Oregon, where he has been appointed arch deacon by the Bishop of that church for that state with his field in Western Oregon.

HOME TALENT MINSTREL SHOW

Given For Benefit of the Band at Auditorium On Friday Evening, May 10th.

A rollicking old time colored show will hold the boards at the Auditorium on Friday evening, May 19th, for the benefit of the band.

Sixteen "cullud gemmen" from Thief River Falls led by Will Follett, a professional coon show organizer, will fill two hours with jokes, darkey songs, dancing, plantation fun and all sorts of coon stunts.

This will be the only simon pure fun making entertainment of the season and it will be clean as well. If you want to be happy for a while, to break up the fit of the blues, to forget your troubles and feel the sensation of laughing till your sides ache take this show in. All know how a local coon show well put on, pleases better than anything else. The music is catchy, full of melody and pleases the ear and possesses the feet; the jokes will have local application and are brand new; the dancing will include all manner of coon steps and the specialties will be original and entertaining. No one can afford to miss this real laughter making entertainment. It will be put on only once so be certain and attend.

A Peculiar Runaway.

What we might say was the most peculiar runaway we've ever seen took place last Saturday on 3rd street between Main and LaBree avenue when a horse ran away with the hose used for the purpose of sprinkling the streets, and which was attached to the hydrant. The horse which is required to pull the heavy hose became frightened and darted down the street while the hydrant was going full force and everything unfortunate enough to be in front of the nossal received a heavy drenching.

Strandquist News Items.

Ole Olstad was a Thief River Falls visitor on Monday of this week. We understand that he is soon to leave us, and all regret that we are unable to keep him with us all the time.

Miss Ottine Rokke is now rooming at the N. P. Nelson home, but still boarding at merchant Strandquist's house.

The Misses Magna Halseth and Hulda Rood, local teachers, attended the convention at Middle River last Saturday. They reported a fine time and also upon their return to Newfolden, where they attended an ice cream social.

John Nelson attended to business matters at Thief River Falls, on Saturday.

Miss Ella Carlson who has been at the hospital at Warren for some time is expected home this week, and we all hope she will be herself again soon.

Mr. Rundyon and wife of Minneapolis have been here today looking over the ground with a view of starting a bank here. Let us all speak a good word for the country and town, and try and see if we cannot have a bank soon. There is nothing that will do more for a town in assisting it along in every way, than a bank, and now that we have the opportunity of getting one, let us all work together and see if we cannot accomplish it.

Charley Carlson has now started a butcher shop, and various kinds of meat may be purchased from him.

Yackal our genial agent has purchased a speeder and he can now take in the Falls and all the towns along the line in almost as quick a time as the flyer.

Miss Annie Carlson is working as domestic at the Anton Jenson home.

O. E. Higley who lives on section 14, Lincoln has some oats that are up five inches, which is pretty good considering the season this year.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The first decapitating swing of the axe upon the army of Republican appointees in the house at Washington was made recently and found the heads of two Minnesotans in its path. C. R. McKinney of North St. Paul, enrolling clerk of the house, was led to the block, and had as a companion I. T. Ingbretson of Freeborn county, superintendent of the folding room. Both were party sacrifices of a heavy order, McKinney's position paying $3,000 and Ingbretson's $2,500.

The three counties of Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis paid 55 per cent of the direct state taxes collected last year. Walter J. Smith, state treasurer, has just compiled the total of payments made by the counties for the October and March settlements, covering the period from Aug. 1 to March 31. It shows a total of $2,193,426.48 collected Of this amount Hennepin paid $365,724, Ramsey $326,093, and St. Louis county, $525,000.

William T. Cox, assistant United States forester, will take charge of the Minnesota state forestry department May 15. The state forestry board dated the appointment of Mr. Cox from May 1 and granted him a leave of absence until May 15 so he could adjust matters connected with his work in Washington.

George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer, is in Roseau county, where he will make a survey of the proposed ditch which is to be dug in the western part of the county. The ditch will be about 100 miles long and will drain about four townships, or approximately 90,000 acres.

By ordinance the St. Cloud city council increased the saloon license from $500 to $1,000. This change was made to conform to the state law requiring that all cities having over 10,000 population must charge at least $1,000 license.

Nick Schutrup, once a wealthy farmer living near Chaska, went before Judge of Probate Glaeser and pronounced himself insane. Upon examination he was found to be demented and was taken to the St. Peter state hospital.

Representative Miller has introduced a bill to establish a hospital for tubercular Chippewa Indians at Walker, at an estimated cost of $100,000. The cost is to be met by appropriation from the Chippewa Indian funds.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Edwin W. Herrick, aged seventy-five, a prominent citizen of Minneapolis for many years, is dead. Mr. Herrick was one of the builders of the old Academy of Music in the Mill City and with his brother and Thomas Lowry, an intimate associate, built Temple court on the same site. He was instrumental in bringing the Soo line to Minneapolis. He and his brother created the Groveland addition to Minneapolis, now the heart of the residence district. He was an extensive traveler, visiting every state and territory of the Union and making many European trips.

Alexander M. Cragie, seventy years old, one of Minneapolis' early settlers, is dead. He was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, Sept. 18, 1841. He came to America in 1865 and engaged in the milling business in Balmoral with a brother, later removing to Minneapolis. Mr. Cragie was long in the employ of the Washburn-Crosby company, later taking charge of the Gladstone Roller mills at Gladstone, N. D., up till a short time ago when he became head stone dresser for the Washburn-Crosby company, which position he held till his death.

R. H. Bingham, a pioneer business man of Sleepy Eye, is dead from a paralytic stroke. He was sixty-three years of age and one of the best known business men in that part of the state. He was proprietor of a large hardware store, lumber yard, fuel and grain business.

News has been received at Lake City of the death of Rev. C. Axel Salquist, a missionary at Yachow, China, and a former resident of that city Death was due to typhoid fever after an illness of ten days.

Patrick Kane, aged ninety-one, territorial pioneer, is dead at St. Paul. Mr. Kane was born in Ireland in 1820, reaching St. Paul in 1856.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Lawrence Hayes, aged seven years, son of W. L. Hayes of Duluth, was killed by an automobile driven by P. G. Pastoret, the owner. The boy had been riding on the rear of a van and jumped off and ran toward the sidewalk, coming immediately in front of the machine.

Emma Schmidt, aged twenty, servant in the home of Fred S. Bryant of St. Paul, is dead from gas poisoning She was overcome by fumes escaping from a leaking pipe in her room and death resulted twenty-four hours later

An attempt was made by cracksmen to rob the Bank of Shevlin. The safe was shattered, but no money was secured, although there was $1,500 on hand.

Mrs. Christina Powell, mother of three children, was burned to death at her home near Hibbing while baking bread in an outdoor oven.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

PROBE WHITE EARTH AFFAIRS

House Committee May Inquire Into Indian Conditions on Minnesota Reservation.

The administration of Indian affairs on the White Earth reservation in Minnesota may be made the subject of investigation by the house committee on expenditures in the interior department, of which Representative Graham of Illinois is chairman.

A delegation of Minnesota Chippewas, comprised of Clement Beulieu, George Barry and Rain Cloud, who took their grievances relative to conditions at White Earth to Representative Stevens of Texas, chairman of the house committee on Indian affairs, were referred by him to Representative Graham.

It is the present intention of Representative Graham to make a thorough inquiry into the activities of every bureau of the interior department.

Mr. Graham is somewhat familiar with the organization of certain branches of this department. He was one of the Democratic members of the Nelson committee on inquiry into the Ballinger-Pinchot case and he wrote the report of the minority which demanded that R. A. Ballinger be dismissed from the cabinet.

Gus Beulieu, who also is here, insists that an investigation be conducted.

Has Knowledge of Blunders.

"I am familiar with conditions at White Earth and I am confident that a new roll of the Indians there should be made," said Gus Beulieu. "I know of my own knowledge of blunders that have been made in land suits instituted. One of my relatives, a 'mixed blood,' is involved in one of the suits on the ground that she is a 'full blood.' Other mistakes just as ridiculous appear in the government cases."

Beulieu declares that an investigation at White Earth would disclose a state of affairs that would result in the removal of certain officials. He charges there has been great delays in preparing the cases growing out of the alienation of the lands of "mixed bloods" and he attributes this delay to a desire on the part of authorities to retain in office persons engaged in the work.

The house Democrats are disposed to investigate the Republican administration just at this time. For this reason the visiting Chippewas believe they will have little or no difficulty in interesting Chairman Graham in conditions at White Earth and elsewhere in the Indian country of Minnesota.

WORLD'S RECORD FOR BUTTER

Minnesota Cow Produces 145.66 Pounds in Thirty Days.

The world's record for thirty-day butter production has been captured by Pietertje Maid Ormsby, a six-year-old Holstein cow, owned by John B. Irwin, proprietor of the Woodlake and Clover farms at Richfield, Hennepin county.

The record is attested by Professor T. L. Haeckler of the state agricultural college after Edward Field, a student of the college, spent the entire month of April on the farm, where he watched the operations of milking and weighing the product. The cow yielded 145.66 pounds of butter from 2,567.8 pounds of milk within the recorded thirty days. The highest previous record was that of 138.5 pounds of butter.

ROADS ASK THREE-CENT FARE

Injunction Suits to Be Started by Six Minnesota Lines.

Papers are being prepared for injunction suits in the federal court by the stockholders of the six roads in the state not affected in the previous rate cases.

This action is being taken to put all the roads of the state in the same position as are the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Minneapolis and St. Louis on the 2-cent rate. These three roads have been excepted by Judge Willard's decision from putting the lower rates into effect and July 1 the 3-cents-a-mile rate will be restored by these roads.

These suits for temporary injunction will be filed with the federal court in a few days.

Must Sprinkle Its Tracks.

Without a dissenting voice the supreme court of the state of Minnesota handed down an opinion holding valid the ordinance passed by the St. Paul city council in October, 1909, requiring the St. Paul City Railway company to sprinkle its right of way in all parts of the city where it operates.

Traveler Chokes to Death.

Gilman A. Hutchins, fifty years of age, a traveling salesman for the Claro Milling company of Waseca, this state, choked to death after partaking of a hamburger sandwich in his room at the Hotel Nicollet at Minneapolis.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS ELECT

Discharged St. Paul Man Is Chosen President.

The Brotherhood of Railway Mail Clerks of the Tenth division, with headquarters in St. Paul, showed its teeth to the postoffice department by electing Carl C. Van Dyke, recently dismissed, president of the organization.

The votes of all the men in the division were counted by the executive committee at the West hotel in Minneapolis and when the result was announced Van Dyke was found to have received 681 votes to 363 cast for O. E. Johnson.

The most significant feature of the election was the turning down of all the candidates for office who are active in the Railway Mail association, which is said to be in high favor with the postoffice department as an offset to the activity of the brotherhood. Mr. Johnson is a member of the old association.

F. B. CLARKE DEAD IN WEST

Prominent In St. Paul Business Circles for Many Years.

Word has been received at St. Paul that Francis B. Clarke, formerly president of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle, is dead at Portland, Ore. Mr. Clarke retired from active duty about a year ago because of ill health. He was in St. Paul a couple of months ago, however, apparently in fair health, and the news of his death came as a great shock to St. Paul railroad officials.

Mr. Clarke lived in St. Paul for about thirty-five years and was popular and active in local circles. Mr. Clarke was made president of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle when it was organized about two years ago by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. He was a close friend of James J. Hill.

DEMOCRATS WILL HOLD BIG MEETING

Notables to Attend Gathering at St. Paul.

St. Paul will be the nerve center of Democracy on June 1.

On that date the eyes of politicians in every state in the Union will be directed toward St. Paul, for Democrats of the Northwest may determine then to whom they will give their support for the next presidential convention.

On that day the recent victories of the Democratic party in state elections and its feat of deposing Republican rule in the house and the elevation of Champ Clark to the speakership will be celebrated in a jubilee, the like of which has never before been seen in this part of the country. The gathering will be a departure in the annals of the national Democratic party.

William Jennings Bryan, Alton B. Parker, Governor Norris of Montana, Governor John Burke of North Dakota, Congressman Hammond and probably Governor Harmon of Ohio will be present. Democrats representing the Dakotas, Iowa, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and probably Wisconsin and Michigan will be present. It is expected that more than 1,000 Democrats will be on hand from the Northwest to celebrate what one Democrat terms "the new birth of national Democracy."

SHOWS HUGE EXPRESS PROFIT

Rate Hearing at St. Paul Brings Out Startling Figures.

Continuing the investigation of the Wells Fargo Express company at St. Paul Attorney General Simpson introduced evidence tending to show that the company enjoys an earning ability equal to that of any other company in the United States.

With a property investment of not more than $5,000,000 and assets of $33,000,000—of which $28,000,000 is invested in stocks and bonds, mortgages, notes, loans and deposits in banks—the company not only is paying 10 per cent dividend but is rapidly accumulating a vast surplus.

While G. W. Hillman, expert accountant for the state, was on the witness stand Mr. Simpson asked:

"Assuming that the Wells Fargo company should go out of business as an express company today, withdraw all its agents and continue to live on the money it has invested, what per cent could it annually pay on capital stock?"

"Seven per cent," replied Mr. Hillman.

Woman Dies of Exposure.

Mrs. Caroline Nystrom of Becker, aged eighty-nine, was found dead in a pasture near her home She had been missing for three days. Coroner Trumbull decided that death was due to exposure and that a sudden mental derangement was the cause of her departure from home

Child Wife Commits Suicide.

Mrs. Charles Dubolts shot herself in the forehead with a revolver at her home in Fairfax Her husband and two small children survive her. She was not yet twenty years old and was living happily with her family, so far as known.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

ASKS FOR AN INJUNCTION

Minneapolis Representative Starts Court Proceedings Against the "Seven Senator" Bill.

Charles R. Fowler, during the last session of the legislature a representative from Hennepin county, has filed suit in the Hennepin county district court asking that the secretary of state be permanently enjoined from "in any way recognizing senate file 360 as a valid law."

Senate file 360 is the "seven senator" bill by which it is proposed to limit the representation in the state senate from big counties to seven members.

The suit is brought by Representative Fowler as a taxpayer. It sets out the following reasons for the prayer for the injunction:

First—That the bill was transferred from the house to the senate while a motion was pending in the house and that it is, therefore, illegal.

Second—That the bill, not having been signed by the governor, cannot, therefore, be legally submitted to the voters.

The suit is based upon the allegation that the act is in contravention of that part of the Constitution of the United States which grants free and equal representation. It sets forth that C. R. Fowler, as a taxpayer, and the county of Hennepin are deprived of equal representation and that they are taxed without adequate representation.

IN DOUBT ABOUT MEASURE

Minnesota Republicans In House Are Studying Free List Bill.

Most of the Minnesota Republican members of the house appear to be in an uncertain frame of mind over the Democratic free list bill now pending. Representative Davis is the only one of them who has announced that he will vote for it. Mr. Davis made known his attitude toward the measure in the debate on the Canadian agreement last week.

The other Minnesota Republicans are giving the free list bill careful thought and study. The chances are that Representative Stevens will vote against the bill, although he has not indicated so far just how he will side. Representative Volstead does not believe the bill will benefit the Northern farmer in the slightest degree. However, he may vote for it. Representative Lindbergh is thinking it over. Representative Anderson said that for the present he did not care to say how he would vote.

CENSURE SOLDIERS' HOME

Inmates of Minnesota Institution Make Complaint.

Inmates of the state soldiers' home declare the institution is mismanaged as to health and table. Officers in charge of the home reply these charges are made by dissatisfied old men and that these veterans are given all that is good for them, if not all they demand.

The inmates make the following specific charges: That only two light, crash roller towels are permitted each day to each washroom used by from fifteen to thirty men; that no milk or sugar is put on the dining tables and they are compelled to buy their own; that the visit of the Minneapolis health commissioner last Saturday who gave the management a "white wash" was a farce and that the officers in charge treat the inmates more like men under restraint than as those worn out in the service of their country.

INSISTS WHITTIER MUST GO

Governor Takes Positive Action Regarding Training School.

Governor Adolph O. Eberhart has written a letter to the state board of control putting the resignation or dismissal of F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the Red Wing training school for boys, squarely up to the board. One of the two alternatives is left for acceptance by the board

The letter was written after a conference between Governor Eberhart Superintendent Whittier and Judge Wilson of Red Wing, Mr. Whittier's attorney.

Advantages Of Our Farm Loans

A very desirable feature of our farm loans lies in the fact that you need not wait for all the papers to be sent back East for approval before knowing if the loan is really to be made.

When we pass on a loan it is final. The money is ready when all papers are completed.

Another important advantage of borrowing through us is that the principal and all interest payments are payable here. No expense in remitting to outside investors. All your dealings are with us.

When crops are short or times a little "off color" we make it a point to look after the interests of our farm loan customers first. It is no small advantage to have a considerable banking connection at such times,

Entered at the postoffice at Thief River Falls, Minn., as second class matter,

And the bear came back.

With the highly beneficial rain the first of the week and the seeding all done the crop out-look has never been better.

More new land has been broken up in this vicinity this spring than in any two seasons in history.

Steam and gasoline plows are doing their part in converting the lands into some of the most fertile and productive farms in the state.

Governor Eberhart has appointed the reclamation board provided for by the legislature. The members are W. R. McKenzie, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development Association; W. J. Brown of Warren, and A. J. McGuire, superintendent of the experiment station at Grand Rapids. A fund of $8,000 was provided and with this the board is to select ten forty acre tracts, clear them and plant them. The object is to show what can be done with the land in the northern part of the state from an agricultural standpoint,

Rural School Notes

Speaking of contest work, here is an opportunity especially for boys and girls in our rural schools. We want to see how well you can do as farmers in raising corn. This has been a great contest among schools in other counties; yes, even in Pennington county. Why should we not be able to produce corn as good in quality and quantity as our next neighbors, or to make the baby county in our state hold its own in the production of corn and vegetables?

Our boys and girls will give the answer next fall by the best display of products; for we are going to offer prizes in this contest. The boys and girls on some of our well tilled farms did splendidly last year, and let us make an effort to do even better this year. Northern Minnesota has enough of sunshine and fresh air and—moisture. Conditions are the best for raising these products. Send to Extension Division, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn., for Extension Bulletin No. 3 and you will get full information about the County Industrial Contest,

As for this county, we will distribute to the boys and girls who will promise to plant and care for a patch—we will send them some seed corn FREE OF CHARGE for planting. Ask your parents for a good patch, a patch that will show the best qualities of that farm, and plant the corn sent you and care for it. You will be surprised to see what elegant corn you can raise. Be sure to carry home that best prize. It will be yours next fall as an appreciation of your best efforts.

Let us have the names and addresses right now and we shall send you the seed, the best corn we can obtain for the purpose. Boys and girls in a family can club together to cultivate and care for the garden farm. Send for the seed at once, as the season is getting late. Let us have the satisfaction of giving you, boys and girls, many prizes next fall; and then, possibly, some of you, as a result, will have a chance to go to the University Farm, Minneapolis, for a week's study and observation at the Agricultural School, expenses paid and all free, that is if you win the best prizes. I cannot promise this for sure, but we will see what can be done in this regard. All depends on winning prizes now, so be sure at once to send in your request for seed corn.

CITY DELIVERY

City Delivery Service will be established at this office June, 15th, 1911, with two letter carriers. It is now the policy of the Department to make the establishment of city delivery service at new offices and its extension to new teritory at old offices contingent upon the provision of mail receptacles at all residences and places of business. If a patron prefer he may cut out a slot in the door which will serve the purpose of facilitating the work of the carrier.

It is distinctly to be understood that no patron (living within the bounds of City Delivery Service) will be served unless he provides some means for disposing of his mail by the carrier. The street letter boxes were located, carrier routes, schedules and the bounds of the City Delivery Service were laid out by the agent of the Post Office Department who made arrangements for the estblishment of the service.

The Bounds of City Delivery Service are laid out as follows:

May Erect Factory Here.

The Commercial club held a special meeting last Monday night for the purpose of considering a proposition submitted by Jesse L. Edgren of Milwaukee for the construction of a factory in this city. In a communication received here recently Mr. Edgren proposes, if satisfactory arrangements are agreed upon, to erect a factory for the purpose of manufacturing household specialties, etc. That the factory will not be a small one can be judged by the fact that it will require 4,000 feet of floor space and will employ from the start twenty men which will be increased to probably 150 to 200 men when the business becomes firmly established.

The firm which Mr. Edgren represents, the communication states, owns large factories in many of the eastern states.

No Hope For Berger Bills.

Washington, May 3.—Democrat house leaders have decided that they will permit the various socialist bills and resolutions of Mr. Berger, the socialist member from Milwaukee to die in the committee's hands to which they had been referred. This includes the resolution for the abolition of the senate. The resolution, in phraseology, is held to violate the house rules, which provide that no bill or resolution shall be received by the house which is insulting in it, character. This particular resolution is well within the meaning of the rule in its references to the decadence and general uselessness of the senate, and a proposition was made to Speaker Clark to secure his consent to have the resolution thrown out. The speaker, however did not give Mr. Berger an opportunity to pose as a martyr and to advertise his socialist doctrines, as would have resulted had the house refused to accept his resolution. So the resolution was sent to a committee with the understanding that it is to stay there. It was decided at the same time that a similar program should be followed with the other Berger bills and resolutions.

That Little German Band.

A little band of German musicians entertained large crowds in front of the business places in this city the latter part of last week by their renditions of the popular airs. The band arrived here over the G. N. from Crookston last Thursday and continued their musical activities until Saturday afternoon. To show impartiality they would render selections in front of every business place in return for which they would take up a collection.

COAST TO COAST

Coast to Coast Route By Railroads Is Now Almost A Certainty.

Duluth South Shore & Atlantic Places Order for 15,000 Tons of Steel.

The Minneapolis Journal of yesterday is authority for the statement that through transcontinental service over the Canadian Pacific, Duluth South Shore & Atlantic, and Soo line via Montreal, Sault Ste. Marie Duluth-Superior, Thief River Falls, and either the Winnipeg or Kenmare-Portal plan behind the placing yesterday, by the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic of an order for 15,000 tons of steel rails. This is one of the largest rail orders that the steel companies have booked for some time. It means rails enough to relay a large portion of the Duluth, South Shore line, and the practical reconstruction of the road.

The Canadian Pacific controls the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic through a majority stock ownership. The smaller road has long made a poor showing in earnings. In the varied reports as to future traffic combinations between the Canadian Pacific, Duluth South Shore & Atlantic, and Soo line that followed the acquisition of the Wisconsin Central road by the Soo, was one that emanated from Montreal and pointed out the transcontinental traffic possibilities. Compared with the long route across the north end of Lake Superior now maintained by the Canadian Pacific much might be obtained by operation on the south side. It was also reported that a plan to run the through Canadian Pacific trains from the Soo west via Minneapolis was under consideration.

—The later completion of the Thief River Falls line of the Soo into Duluth, and the more recent announcement of the purpose of the Soo to push work this summer on a line from Frederick, Wis., to Duluth, where the Wisconsin Central or Chicago division already enters, makes it clear that important traffic combination will work out, with the head of the lakes as the center, and the transcontinental plan of operation via the Duluth South Shore & Atlantic appears more probable.

W. F. Fitch, of Marquette, president of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road was in Minneapolis recently, President Edmund Pennington of the Soo line is out of town today.

The route from eastern Canada to western Canada would be much shorter over the suggested route than on the rails that now run north of Lake Superior. To put the burden of heavy transcontinental traffic upon the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic would mean practically the entire rehabilitation of the road. It might be necessary also to to build cut-offs at several points, but in any case a saving of a mileage that would be very important as a time shortening element, could be effected by the southern route rather than that now maintained north of Lake Superior in country that is sparsely settled.

New Landlord at Hotel Minnesota.

F. W. Busse, of St. Hilaire, has leased the Hotel Minnesota from Jos. Holland, and takes possession to day. His family arrived yesterday. He intends to conduct a good hotel and will undoubtedly get their share of the business here. Holland retains the bar room, and will move his family into the residence he purchased from F. Brown, in Highland Park. Mr. Busse is a licensed auctioneer and will also do some work along that line whenever an opportunity is offered. He will also conduct the livery and feed barn in the rear of the hotel, in connection with his business. Mr. Busse looks like a very desirable addition to our business circles.—Warroad Plaindealer.

REACHES SIXTIETH BIRTHDAY

Prominent Swedish Manufacturer Remembered by His Employes—Praise for Professor Sven Oftedahl, Norwegian-American Teacher, Who Died Recently—Census Shows Denmark to Be Very Densely Populated.

SWEDEN.

August Schmitz, the founder of the great woolen and cotton mills at Furulund, Malmo, has celebrated his sixtieth birthday. His employes had prepared and signed an address to him, thanking him for what he had done for them and the community. A silver bowl accompanied the address. Those who receive a pension from August Schmitz handed him an address of thanks in the form of a poem written by Mrs. Ingrid Berg. From the board of directors of the company which is formally running the mills he received two colossal urns of pure silver. Representatives from several business concerns and a great number of individuals called on Mr. Schmitz during the day to pay him their respects. He is a Catholic, and his contributions to charitable institutions have been very liberal. Bishop Bitter of Stockholm sent him a letter telling him that the head of the Catholic church had pronounced the Apostolic benediction upon him and his mother, who is ninety-two years old. Late in the day a telegram was received from the pope, announcing that a special blessing had been pronounced upon August Schmitz and his house.

The Swedish Lutheran church in London was dedicated on Feb. 25. Bishop Rhode of Sweden had been appointed to perform the dedicatory act in the place of Archbishop Ekman, whose health would not allow him to undertake the journey. Bishop Rhode was assisted by two Swedish ministers of London and several others from outlying districts. The bishops of Salisbury and St. Albans were also present and sat one on each side of the altar. A number of other dignitaries of London and Sweden were present and occupied prominent seats in front. The services were deeply impressive.

There is going to be a new city hall in Stockholm, according to latest reports. The city council of Stockholm resolved to build one by a vote of 67 to 24. The vote was not taken until Franckel and Wallenborg, two wealthy Stockholm bankers, announced their willingness to contribute $135,000 each to the cost. Graham Bros. had already promised to put in elevators free of charge. The cost of the elevators will be about $15,000. The two members of the city council who are each contributing the aforesaid amount are apparently doing their full duty as "city fathers."

The Swedish-American society held its annual meeting in Stockholm recently with W. F. Dahlstrom presiding. Director O. Assar read a paper entitled: "From the Atlantic Seaboard to the Pacific Ocean." The paper was illustrated by means of a lot of stereopticon pictures and was very instructive throughout. Director Assar made a trip to the United States some years ago and while there gathered a lot of exceedingly interesting material, which he is now using to good advantage in Sweden.

In the course of the last few years it has been proved that large quantities of valuable minerals are to be found in the Arctic regions. On Greenland's south coast copper mines have been worked for a long time and last year big mines were discovered in Spitzbergen. Now a dispatch has been received announcing that rich copper strata have been found on Vestmannd island, near the south coast of Iceland, and that mining will be started as soon as possible.

So called Swedish "splabread" is very popular abroad and the other day C. W. Schumacher & Co., bakers, sent a consignment of this bread to the steamship Vale, which will use the Swedish product on a German South polar expedition which will start out soon. The bread is packed in hermetically sealed packages and is unusually nourishing.

In a little country like Sweden it is a noteworthy fact that not less than 82,000 men saw actual service in the Swedish army last year. The United States has recently mobilized an army of 20,000 men on the Mexican frontier and that, in little Sweden even, would be considered a ridiculously small army.

During the absence of King Gustaf on his trip to the Riviera the crown prince has been appointed to assume the reins of government. The king will be gone about two months.

Andrew Carnegie has established a hero fund in Sweden. This will be the sixth big fund of this order that he has established.

NORWAY.

"In the death of Professor Sven Oftedahl, which occurred on March 30, the Norwegian Lutheran Free Church of America has lost its leader," says the Lutheran. "As professor in the Augsburg seminary for many years and as the moving spirit in a body of Norwegians about 20,000 strong he wielded a strong influence. He was remarkably gifted as a linguist, having performed the feat of making acquaintance with a strange language in the short space of a month. There is probably no Lutheran scholar in the country who has a speaking and other acquaintance with so many tongues as he. There was much about his personality that was unique. He was a Norseman of the Viking type, free and independent, and represented the extreme tendency to Lutheran individualism and congregationalism. He rallied around him the 175 pastors and 475 congregations of the Free church with remarkable effectiveness."

Lauritz S. Swenson of Minnesota has been nominated by President Taft to be minister to Norway. He is now United States minister to Switzerland. This is the first time in the history of the United States diplomatic service that an American citizen, whose parents are foreign born citizens, has been appointed to a diplomatic post in the land of his forefathers. Mr. Swenson's home is in Albert Lea and he was born and educated in Nicollet county, Minn. He speaks the Norwegian language fluently.

In late years one of the burning questions in Norway has been the ownership of parsonages. It was a question whether they were owned by the parish in which they were located, or by the government. The matter was carried to the courts and the supreme court decided that they belong to the state. We must remember that in many European countries the pastor's home is not simply a house, but often a very valuable piece of land is connected with it which makes a nice sized farm.

Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina" has been rendered to a full house at the National theater in Christiania thirty-seven times. The play is intensely dramatic and has held Christiania audiences perfectly spellbound and scores of people have gone to see it a second time.

Professor Henderson, who holds the chair of English language and literature at the University of North Carolina, recently paid a visit to the Christiania university to gather some important data for a new and important biography of Henrik Ibsen.

Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina" has recently been translated into the Norwegian language by Professor Olaf Broch of the University of Christiania and will be published by Aschehoug & Co.

The Christiania high school band will give a series of concerts this summer in the larger cities of the country and will also appear in Copenhagen and other Danish cities.

The Norwegian journalists' pension fund now amounts to 293,000 crowns. During the past year or so it was increased to the amount of over 72,300 crowns.

At Stenskjaer a society of Laplanders was recently organized. The organization already numbers about 100.

DENMARK.

The arrival of the Copenhagen university student singers is attracting a great deal of attention among all Scandinavians in the larger cities in the United States. There have been representative male choruses from all three countries and one chorus has been trying to outdo the other. The Lund chorus came first and scored such a great success that the Norwegians decided to try it and now come the Danes. That they will receive a hearty reception at such points as Chicago, New York, Omaha, St. Paul and Minneapolis goes without saying. They are trained to the hour and their singing is reported to be of the highest order.

The population of Denmark at the last official census was 2,757,076, of which number 559,000 reside in Copenhagen, 550,000 reside in the small cities and the rest live in the country districts. Denmark is a very densely populated country and can justly be called "the small big country" of the world. There is no country in the world where agricultural science has been driven up to such a high standpoint as in Denmark and her butter and egg exports exceed those of any country in the world, comparatively. Just now Denmark is a very prosperous country and her dairy industries lead the world in point of the amount of comparative production.

New postage stamps will soon be introduced in Iceland. The old ones represented the heads of two kings. On the new stamps these pictures will be replaced by pictures of King Fredrik and of Jon Sigurdson, an Icelandic statesman, whose 100th birthday, June 17, will be celebrated in an ostentatious manner by the people of Iceland.

Two members of the editorial staff of the Socialdemokraten have not been on friendly terms of late. The trouble came to a head the other day. From heated arguments they passed to blows and one of them had to retire with a blue eye.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 20th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county, and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen,
Assignee of mortgage.

A. S. King,
Attorney for Assignees,
Lake Park, Minn.

LEADER IN HIS PROFESSION

Death of Gustaf Gullberg, Stockholm Journalist, a Great Loss to Sweden. Article in Russian Newspaper Attracting General Attention in Norway—Danish Society of Small Beginning Has Notable Record.

SWEDEN.

In the death of Gustaf Gullberg Stockholm, as well as Sweden, has lost one of its most efficient newspaper men. He was for a number of years the editor and publisher of the Stockholm-Tidningen and was a real friend of the United States. Instead of always criticising America, like the average Swedish newspaper does, he upheld American institutions and made several visits to the United States. He was a representative of a syndicate of papers at the world's fair in Chicago and his reports were always characterized for their fairness. Gullberg was born in Malmo in 1859. At the age of twenty he decided that he would enter the theatrical world and so he did, following this avocation for about three years. He soon tired of this profession, however, and entered the newspaper profession, in which he at once felt at home and in which he afterwards made such a splendid success. He had published the Stockholm Tidningen since 1906 and the paper is today one of the leading and enterprising daily newspapers of Stockholm.

"Swedish hospitality is on a downward grade," comments a prominent journalist in a recent article in one of the Stockholm papers. "There was a time," says the same writer, "when we were considered the most hospitable people in the world and in the very best society the hospitality was something extraordinary, even so much so that it was commented upon favorably by all foreigners. How different now. If you care to get real hospitality and eat at a real good table you will have to turn to the middle class of society. They are having a better and more social time now than they did before, for they are maintaining the good old Swedish customs, both at the table and at their social gatherings generally. The upper crust of society, that is, the nobility and some of the professional men, has grown continental in its manner of living and eating, and this is an untimely sign for us Swedes of the old school."

The movement to restrict the attendance of children at the moving picture theaters is gaining ground every day. Recently the school boards of the elementary schools, as well as the co-educational colleges of Sdertelje, prohibited the attendance of their students except when accompanied by parents or guardians. This action is taken because the shows are considered harmful to young people whose character and morals are as yet in process of formation.

King Gustaf has offered an international athletic prize to the coming winner of the fifty-yard dash at the Olympic games which are to be held in Stockholm next summer and the czar of Russia has offered a similar prize for the winner in the hundred-yard dash. Much interest is being evinced in the Olympian games all over the country and the executive committee is hard at work making the necessary preparations for the big event.

King Gustaf and Queen Victoria were the guests of King Emmanuel of Italy at Rome for three days last week. The purport of their visit to Rome was to be present at the fiftieth royal anniversary. They were greatly feted in Rome and a number of functions and demonstrations were given in their honor. Sweden was one of the first countries in the world to recognize the new kingdom, which was founded in 1861.

Franz von Reichenau, the newly appointed German ambassador to Stockholm, arrived April 10 to assume his duties. William Cooper, formerly vice consul in Archangel, has been appointed to the same position at Teheran and T. I. Soderlund has been appointed vice consul in St. Petersburg.

Sweden consumed 1,500 pounds of gold and 14,000 pounds of silver for industrial purposes in 1910. The gold deposits at the Riksbank are $12,500,000. Sweden has coined a total of about $23,000,000 in gold coins and about $9,000,000 in subsidiary silver coins.

Anders Zorn, the renowned Swedish portrait artist, who is at present in the United States, has been named foreign representative of the French Academy of Arts to succeed Fritz von Uhde.

Stockholm's population has increased by 2,626 during the last year. The present population of the city is 331,307.

NORWAY.

The Moscow Vjedomosti, one of the leading newspapers of Russia, recently contained an editorial which attracted general attention in Norway. The paper first mentioned the Russian proposition to extend its territorial limits, and the dissatisfaction which this proposition caused in the interested circles in England and Norway, "the fishermen of whose countries are the main marauders along the coasts of Russia." Next the paper argues that each country must have a right to fix its own territorial limits, England making the limit twenty miles at Ceylon and Norway making it ten geographical miles at one point. The Vjedomosti finally devotes considerable space to the attitude on this matter taken by Foreign Minister Irgens of Norway at a meeting of the storthing. He says that the two countries were on the most friendly terms, and the paper was in hopes that Irgens expressed the true sentiments of the Norwegian government.

A new bill for a vaccination law has been introduced into the storthing. This law will make vaccination compulsory. The specifications are that every child must be vaccinated before it is four years old and must be revaccinated before it is fourteen. Parents are made responsible for the vaccination of their children. The present vaccination law is very old, dating from the first part of last century. This law does not make vaccination directly compulsory, but specifies that no person can be confirmed or married unless a vaccination certificate is presented. Neither can pupils be admitted to the schools, other than the common schools, unless they are vaccinated.

The estimate of this year's emigration from Norway is 13,000. Last year there were 18,000 persons who emigrated to foreign countries. Naturally enough most of these went to the United States. There were 4,000 Norwegians who emigrated to Canada. The cause given for the falling off in emigration is due to the fact that there are better times now in Norway than there has been for a number of years. If the good times continue emigration will have a decided setback and this would certainly be a good thing for Norway, which has during the past few years been sapped of her youngest citizens at an alarming rate.

Norwegian bank accounts have been increasing at a gratifying rate recently and the following figures show that the country is on a solid financial basis: In 1905 the total bank deposits were 675,600,000 kroner; in 1906, 743,100,000 kroner; in 1907, 802,800,000 kroner; in 1908, 842,800,000 kroner; in 1909, 905,700,000 kroner. The record for the year 1910 is not known. But it is estimated that the amount will pass the billion kroner mark in the course of the present year.

Little Crown Prince Olaf had a mild attack of the measles lately. He did not seem to mind the experience much and was only sulking because he was compelled to stay in the house and keep warm.

The national customs receipts for the month of March amounted to 3,465,000 crowns. They were only 3,002,000 crowns during the same period last year.

DENMARK.

In the year 1833 two students of the University of Denmark were sitting together and talking as to how they might be of help to some of their poorer comrades. They decided to start a society with that aim in view and they called it "Philadelphia." Three years afterwards another student joined the society. The three young men later became quite prominent. One was Provost E. Glahn, the others being Rev. J. Rogind and Dr. G. Winther. The society has in these years of its existence distributed 400,000 crowns among needy, worthy students. It will soon celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary.

The czar of Russia will, in the early part of next month, start on an extensive European tour and plans to visit Stockholm, Christiania and Copenhagen also. In the days of old King Christian, Nicholas, who then was on a visit to Denmark, declared after engaging in a quarrel with the old king that he would never visit Denmark again. It appears that he has changed his mind.

It is reported on good authority that the Danish government is about to adopt some very stringent methods in the near future whereby to put a stop to the Mormon propaganda in the country at present. Mormon missionaries have been and are operating all over the country and have been winning many converts and are also inducing people to emigrate to Utah.

The number of females in the city of Copenhagen on Feb. 1, 1911, was 252,212. The number of males was only 209,749. It will thus be seen that the capital of Denmark would be under the control of the women if they had the same rights as the men.

An international congress for the protection of animals will be held in Copenhagen in August. The king of Denmark has promised to be the protector of the congress and Minister of Justice Bulow to be its honorary president.

King Gustaf will make a brief visit to King Frederick on his return trip from Rome within a few days. These two monarchs have occasion to meet quite often.

MARION S. NORELIUS.

TO TAKE EFFECT ON JULY 1

Existing Railroad Rates in Minnesota to Be Advanced.

Three cents a mile will be the regular passenger rate in Minnesota on and after the 1st of July next. Existing interstate passenger rates, based on the present 2-cent rate in Minnesota, will likewise be advanced. Just how far the change will extend has not been determined, but it will affect a wide territory, putting things back to practically where they were four years ago.

The order to put back the old passenger rates has been issued by some of the Minnesota roads. It is expected that all the roads in the state will give similar instructions in a few days.

The merchandise rates, also involved in the Minnesota rate cases, are similarly affected. They will be restored to the old level.

IN FIT OF JEALOUS ANGER

North St. Paul Man Wounds Wife and Himself.

Suffering from three wounds inflicted by her former husband in a fit of jealous anger at her home in North St. Paul, Mrs. Martha Guinn, forty-one years old, the intended victim, lies at the city hospital at St. Paul with a good chance of recovery. In a cell in the surgical ward below lies her assailant, James Arthur Guinn, thirty-seven years old, with self-inflicted injuries that probably will be fatal.

Back of the shooting affray lies a tangled skein of domestic troubles, through which runs the mother's love for her little boy, Arthur, for whose sake she returned to her former husband, only to live unhappily, it is said.

LOCKS HIMSELF IN VAULT

Clerk Then Takes Poison in Old Capitol at St. Paul.

Despondent over some piece of misfortune, possibly a love affair, Herbert Spencer of St. Paul, about twenty-five years old, a helper in the United States food and drug inspection laboratory in the old capitol, committed suicide by taking poison in the vault of the laboratory some time between Tuesday night and Thursday morning, after plugging the bolts of the door from the inside so that an expert had to be called when Mr. Mitchell, suspecting harm had come to the young man, found that the doors would not open, although the combination was properly set.

TOWN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Destructive Fire in Lumber Yards at South Stillwater, Minn.

Spontaneous combustion is blamed for a $175,000 fire which started in the Kaiser box factory in South Stillwater. The high wind blowing toward the river saved the town. The fire spread rapidly through the yards of the box company, which contained 10,000,000 feet of lumber, all of which was destroyed.

The local fire department and hundreds of volunteer fire fighters proved inadequate to stop the headway of the flames and a hurry up call was sent in to the St. Paul department, which responded with one engine and a full company of men.

INDIAN CHIEF OJIBWA DEAD

Noted Chippewa Succumbs at White Earth.

Ojibwa, one of the last surviving chiefs of the Chippewa Indians and one of the oldest members on the White Earth reservation, is dead, aged eighty-four years.

Ojibwa is survived by five daughters and two sons, among them being Peter Parker, who served as a private in Company D, First Minnesota, in the Civil war. The old chief was early converted to the Roman Catholic faith and zealously followed the teachings of its creed until his death.

FATAL TROLLEY ACCIDENT

One Man Killed and Two Injured at Minneapolis.

One man was killed and two probably fatally injured when an interurban car ran down a gang of track laborers at Minneapolis.

George Goblack was killed instantly, while Mike Sadoh and Mike Sodao were hurried to the city hospital, the former with a fractured skull and the latter with internal injuries and a fractured right leg.

INDIAN LAND THROWN OPEN

Thirty-Two Thousand Acres to Be Settled on at Once.

Nearly 32,000 acres of land have been opened for settlement in the Bow String and Boy river country.

This includes all ceded lands on which the timber had been cut and removed; 12,000 acres in the Leech Lake reservation and nearly 20,000 in the Winnebigoshish reserve.

Perished in Forest Fire.

The charred remains of Kitto Mikalla, a bachelor farmer, who resided alone in the Mud Hen district near Eveleth, was found in the burned building on his place. A forest fire swept over his place and it is presumed that he died fighting it. Mikalla was forty-seven years of age and was well to do.

FOREIGN NEWS.

General Porfirio Diaz has issued a manifesto to the people of Mexico declaring his intention to resign the presidency as soon as peace is restored. In this manner the president virtually has acceded to the demands of Francisco I. Madero, Jr., that he make announcement of such intention. As to when peace is actually restored General Diaz reserves the right to be judge. It will be, in the words of the manifesto, "when his conscience tells him that he will not leave his country in anarchy."

After the application of closure clause 2 of the parliament bill, which is the most important section of the English government's measure for the curtailment of the powers of the house of lords was carried in the house of commons, 299 to 195. Later clause 3 of the bill, providing that "any certificate of the speaker of the house of commons given under this act shall be conclusive for all purposes, and shall not be questioned in any court of law," was carried, after a closure, 255 to 132.

Shaded from the sun's rays by a cottonwood grove at the foot of the barren hill over which the insurrecto army not long ago had threatened to make its way into the city of Juarez, Mex., Francisco I. Madero, Jr., the revolutionist leader, clasped hands with Judge Francisco Carbajal, official peace envoy of the Mexican government, thus inaugurating the formal peace negotiations between the warring factions of the republic.

The arrival of Captain Bremond's column has not changed the situation at Fez, Morocco, and the loose investment of the capital continues. The rebel horsemen, who are beyond the reach of the artillery, have cut off the food supplies. The sultan's troops are worn out with the constant skirmishing and watchfulness.

The insurrection at Canton, China, is spreading rapidly through the countryside. The rebels have taken three important towns in the West River district, Samshui, Wetchow and Woochow, all of which they looted. Murder and pillage is reported from all parts of the district.

The capture of the important Pacific coast town of Topolobampo, in the state of Sinaloa, Mex., by rebels is reported. This port is but a short distance from the cities of Fuerte and San Blas, recently taken by the insurrectos.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Within two hours after the trial of John F. Deitz, charged with the murder of Oscar Harp, a deputy sheriff, had opened at Hayward, Wis., the case had progressed so rapidly that a jury was obtained. The case was cleared of preliminaries in a few minutes and then the actual work began, with three of Wisconsin's well known criminal lawyers on one side and John Deitz acting as leading counsel for himself, his wife and son Leslie, who are charged jointly with him.

The state has closed its case against John F. Deitz, Mrs. Deitz and Leslie, on trial at Hayward, Wis., charged with the murder of Oscar Harp, a deputy sheriff. Fred Thorbahn, the chief of the deputies, was the last witness called for the state and his story corroborated the testimony given by the deputies who preceded him.

The government has accepted $1,180,000 in compromise of the suits against Duveen Bros., the New York art firm accused of customs frauds. The settlement in the Duveen case involves the largest sum collected in any of the customs cases with the exception of the sugar frauds.

Two Italians shot and killed each other in a pistol duel at Chicago following a quarrel over a woman. Salvatore La Morta, twenty-three years old, was instantly killed, while his assailant died on the way to the hospital.

A Kansas hen has lately laid an egg whose two circumferences were 8⅛ by 6⅝ inches. This is some egg. Can any of our readers beat it?

The total production of corn in the United States in 1840 was 377,402,000 bushels, or considerably less than last year's crop in the single state of Illinois.

An Ohio resident recommends a teaspoonful of sand once a day as a sure cure for dyspepsia. Whatever the merits of this cure, there seem to be no strings to it, but it is cheap, and the supply is unlimited.

It is not too late to sow a piece of rape for the brood sows and growing pigs. It will be one of the most profitable tracts on the farm, and if the pigs are not turned on to it too soon it will furnish forage all summer long.

The mosquito pest about the premises may be considerably reduced by keeping a wire screen over the rain barrels, if there are any on the place, and by pouring kerosene on the surface of stagnant pools or ponds in pasture or wood lot.

While instruction not to plant until danger of frost is over in the case of beans and some other tender plants is correct, a limited quantity of such seed may be sown as a speculation. If it is not cut down by the frost one is that much ahead, while if it is the loss is slight.

Many a man who has been leading an active physical life and doing much manual labor gets into the same condition on going to town and quitting work that the horse does that all of a sudden is allowed to loaf on full feed—both are likely to have azoturia, which is merely another name for a system badly overloaded with albuminous matter.

Some investigators who have been making a study of a homely conservation problem in the state of Missouri estimate that $10,000,000 is lost to the farms of the state annually through the careless handling of farm manures. This is based on the value of $3 per ton which is placed on fresh manure and a value of $2 per ton or less which it is estimated manure as usually handled is worth.

For the benefit of the uninitiated it is only fair to say that the poultry business can hardly be classed as an inexpensive, easy, no worry, get-rich-quick occupation. Rather it requires brains, persistence, patience, courage and some other staying qualities. The novice should take it upon a small scale. For those not having experience in the business farmers' bulletin No. 287 on "Poultry Management" will be found instructive and helpful.

Contrary to a practice that has been in vogue for a long time, the best medical authorities now recommend shutting up instead of killing a dog that has bitten persons or other animals and is thought to have the rabies. If such dog really is mad the disease will develop rapidly and in the course of ten or twelve days cause its death. If madness does develop, persons bitten by it should be given the Pasteur treatment at once, while if it does not there is no danger whatever.

The national pure food law adopted in 1906 has done wonders in putting a stop to the dishonest as well as harmful adulteration of food products, drugs, etc. Another law needed equally bad and which would be of incalculable value to the agricultural interests of the country would be a federal pure seed law which would not only prevent the transportation of adulterated or otherwise worthless seeds from one state to another, but their importation of such seeds from foreign countries. Agriculture is so important an interest and its effects so farreaching that congress ought to see its way clear to do this much in its behalf.

The apple, the most popular of cultivated fruits, has a history that traces back into the far distant past. It is said that carbonized apples from 5,000 to 7,000 years old have been found in the mud of the stone age, while pieces apparently cut as for drying have been found beneath the ruins of the lake dwellers. Apples were cultivated by the ancient Romans and were introduced into Britain before the conquest by the Romans and by the third century had spread over the entire island. Apple seeds were brought to New England in 1629, and an orchard of considerable area was set out in Rhode Island in 1635. The many varieties of apples in the country at the present time have been developed from the trees first set in New England.

WHAT DETERMINES THE PRICE?

The proposal to admit Canadian wheat free, under the terms of the reciprocity treaty has led to the statement of some rather interesting theories as to wheat movements and prices. On the one hand we have those of a rather practical turn of mind who contend that the admission into the United States duty free of Canadian wheat will in just the proportion that this bears to the total amount of wheat produced at home reduce the price thereon. On the other hand, we have the view of the economist and experienced wheat trader who contends the price of wheat at the big markets in the United States is not determined by home production and consumption in the larger sense at all, but by price levels prevailing on the London and Liverpool markets, which are the wheat clearing houses of the world. The wherefore of the above lies, so it is claimed, in the fact that wheat prices in the United States are determined by the price which our surplus or export wheat fetches on the foreign markets. It follows from the above, if true, that if, say, 250,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat were diverted to points in the United States instead of going to English markets the supply at the latter points would be in that proportion lessened. This would mean, if the theory holds water, that the price got for our increased volume of export wheat would be increased as a result, so that in the end the price average would be the same as if the Canadian product were shipped directly to Europe. It would seem to be merely a matter of two ways of getting around the same stump.

A MANIFOLD RETURN.

While roses will give a manifold return in beauty, fragrance and all around satisfaction planted in almost any kind of soil, they thrive best in one which contains a good per cent of clay. If the soil about the house does not contain clay a wagon load can usually be got at no great distance. This should be mixed with the loam soil, and if thoroughly rotted manure, leaf mold or decomposed sod can be had so much the better. The roses should be set in the bed two or three inches deeper than they stood in the pot, should be sprinkled daily—sprayed with water under pressure, if possible—sprinkled with flower of sulphur for mildew, with road dust in the morning for slugs and with tobacco tea for spiders and lice. The best blossoms will be produced on the most rapidly growing wood, and this is secured by rather heavy pruning. This applies especially to teas like the American Beauty, but in a less degree to all hardy bush and climbing roses.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The United States geological survey, which is making a topographical map of the state in co-operation with the state drainage commission, has just completed a map of the section around Barrett. This map represents by far the most complete survey ever made of that section of the state. It shows so clearly every physical feature of the country covered that the character of any part of it, as well as the shapes of the hills and valleys, can be seen at a glance.

It is understood that Lieutenant Governor Gordon will name Senators A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota, G. H. Sullivan of Stillwater, Albert Schaller of Hastings, J. P. Boyle of Eveleth and Manley Fosseen of Minneapolis as the committee further to investigate workingmen's compensation. A resolution instructing him to appoint a committee of five to investigate and report to the next legislature was adopted by the senate during the closing days.

Mrs. Ole G. Othus of Renville has been committed to the state insane asylum at St. Peter following a trip to that institution, during which she saw her husband, who has been confined in the institution for several months. It is believed that the shock of seeing her husband in the asylum and the sights of the hospital unnerved the woman and caused her to lose her reason.

At the hearing in the Fergus Falls city election contest case Judge Nye found that license had won. The recount shows that license men have one majority of all the votes cast. The original returns showed a tie, as blank votes were counted same as if cast against license.

The movement of ore is beginning to get under way for the summer at Hibbing, both over the Missabe and the Great Northern roads. The roads are sending out seven trains a day at the present time.

Mayor James C. Haynes has issued an order to the chief of police prohibiting the use of slot machines in Minneapolis and ordering the police chief to confiscate all slot machines.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

After suffering for thirty hours Rasmus Hatedal of Averill, one of the oldest farmers in point of residence in Clay county, is dead at Moorhead. Hatedal hurriedly saddled a horse on his farm with the intention of going out to round up cattle. The horse began to pitch and buck, finally throwing itself into the air and turning over backward, pinning the rider to the ground. The pommel of the heavy stock of the saddle was driven into the abdomen of the rider, who lay on the ground in an unconscious condition for some time after the accident until found by neighbors.

O. U. Caddegan, known also as John Moore, and John Armstrong, was arrested at Los Angeles, Cal., under advices from Chief of Police Mealy of Minneapolis. The man is accused of swindling H. F. Chaffee of Amenia, N. D., out of $25,000 in Minneapolis in October, 1909.

Ralph Lane, aged thirty-five years, was cremated in the Itain hotel, which burned to the ground at Ball Club, Itasca county. Every one else got out. In the excitement he was not missed until too late to rescue him.

Joseph Sauro, on trial at St. Paul charged with having slain his wife Dec. 6, 1910, was found guilty of murder in the second degree. The verdict carries with it life imprisonment.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Professor G. W. B. Smalley is dead at Rochester, death being due to Brights disease, with which he had suffered for a year. Professor Smalley was known all over Southern Minnesota as the blind music teacher, having given instructions on the piano in a number of cities.

Edward Rowles, a well known resident of Belle Creek, Goodhue county, died suddenly at his farm home. Death was due to heart disease. Rowles was a prominent Democrat and for years held the office of town clerk of Belle Creek as well as other township appointments.

Joseph Lemm, aged seventy-five, is dead at his home in Luxemberg, Stearns county. He was the father of twenty-one children, of whom eighteen survive him.

Mrs. Mary Eliza Hall, one of Minnesota's pioneer residents, is dead at St. Paul, aged ninety-eight.

FOREIGN NEWS.

General Carlos F. Morales, former president of Santo Domingo; Mauricio Jiminez, former vice president of the same republic, and General Zenon Toribio, formerly an officer in the Dominican army, are under arrest at San Juan, Porto Rico, charged with violating section 13 of the United States statutes, having to do with acts of hostility against a government with which the United States is at peace.

The determination of the Canadian government to ratify reciprocity was emphasized in parliament by the prime minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who declared that he could not go to England to represent Canada at the imperial conference or to the coronation of King George in June, but would remain here to press the agreement if the opposition persisted in obstructing its ratification.

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS

Speaker Clark does not agree with Senator Root that congress is likely to adjourn by June 1. At the White House, where he said he had indulged in "neighborhood gossip" with Mr. Taft, Clark declared that nobody in the world knew how long congress would be in session, but he was certain it would be later than June 1.

Governor Woodrow Wilson has left New Jersey for a month's trip in the West. He will visit W. J. Bryan in Lincoln, Neb., and will take in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., the Twin Cities and other cities before returning on May 27.

Reciprocity with Canada must be adopted now or never and must stand or fall by its own terms. So declared President Taft in an address at the fourth annual banquet of the American Newspaper Publishers' association in New York city.

Clarence Darrow, the Chicago attorney who figured prominently in the defense of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, has been retained as chief counsel for John and James McNamara and Ortie McManigal, the alleged dynamiters.

According to Detective W. J. Burns, Ortie McManigal has been promised no immunity nor leniency for his confession of ten dynamite outrages, in which he implicated the McNamara brothers.

Efficiency, which is being made the watchword of many large industrial enterprises, might be adopted by the tiller of the soil with equal profit.

Great care should be exercised in looking after the health of all dairy cows, but especially those that supply milk for the babies and little folk, who, if in frail health, are especially susceptible to tuberculosis.

It is a commentary on our present day civilization that the most sacred rite and institution we have—that of marriage—often furnishes the occasion for a type of vandalism and horseplay that would shame a Fiji islander or a Patagonian.

A wise mother we know has prevented her little child from forming the candy habit by never allowing it to eat candy and so to acquire a taste for it. The necessary sweets are provided in other ways, and the child is encouraged to eat fruit, which is equally appetizing and much more wholesome.

Hair balls, sometimes reaching a diameter of two or three inches, are now and then found in the stomachs of cattle. They are usually covered with a shell-like crust or coat and are without doubt the gradual accumulation of hair licked from their bodies by animals at the time of the spring shedding.

A good idea of the size of the country is often obtained from reports covering the operation of a big railroad system for a year. The annual report of the Pennsylvania railway, recently published, shows that on the 4,004 miles of road belonging to the system there were hauled in 1910 441,010,033 tons of freight, while during the same interval there were carried 108,604,348 passengers.

There seems to be a disposition on the part of the railroads in the central western states, where the two cent fare laws were adopted, to let the rate stand, for since the new rate became operative it has been found that passenger traffic has been enough larger to more than offset the loss resulting from the reduction. If practicable in the sparsely settled western states it would seem as if conditions were such as to justify the rate in many an eastern state.

The world would probably be just as well off if a half or more of the dogs were put out of the way by some hurry up method, but now and then a valuable canine that one would really like to save gets a dose of poison. In such cases it is worth remembering that hot lard and milk will, if given at once, often induce vomiting, which will free the system of the drug. They also tend to act as an antidote for poisons having a corrosive effect. In the line of drug antidotes potassium bromide is excellent. It can be got at any drug store and may be given in a small quantity of water.

Brazil has a rival to our Niagara falls, called Iguassu, which is very similar in appearance to Niagara, having a horseshoe bend on one side. The falls cover a distance of about two miles, with a final leap of 213 feet. The depth at the foot of the falls is more than a hundred fathoms and is believed by the natives to be bottomless. During the rainy season the volume of water taking these wild leaps is much greater than that of Niagara, while Iguassu surpasses Niagara further in the fact that it stands in a primal wilderness, undisturbed and unmarred by commercialism.

There is no better material of which to build hen or hog house than the clay hollow block. Its use means that the structure will be both dry and warm.

President Taft is to be commended for refusing to pardon W. N. Jones, a rich business man of Portland, Ore., who was recently sentenced to serve four months in prison and pay a fine of $12,000 for the part he had in land frauds in the northwest.

A tablespoonful of spirits of camphor stirred in a gallon of water makes a very good solution with which to spray plants that are afflicted with the green lice. This spray fixes the lice and does not harm the foliage plants to which it is applied.

While other members of the animal kingdom may fail to multiply as nature intended, it is pretty safe to assume that the old frosted eared brindle tabby cat will some warm morning soon lead her bevy of kittens from some well protected and secluded spot. This kitten crop is one that is not reduced by frost, blight or drought.

Kansas legislators are to be commended for a piece of legislation lately passed, at once sensible and merciful, which makes it possible to use the idle convicts in the state penitentiaries in the building of a highway from Leavenworth to Kansas City, Kan. The taxpayers will get a return from the labor of the convicts, and the latter will be the better for the physical exercise and fresh air which they will get.

In contrast to the idea—all too prevalent—that one cannot make money raising stock on less than from 100 to 200 acres may be cited the experience of a Pennsylvania dominie who kept thirty head of stock on fifteen acres, growing all the roughage for them on this area, and who by prudent management was able to pay off a mortgage of $7,200 on the place in the course of seven years. To add to his troubles, the farm was badly run down at the time he bought it. While the account does not state, it is fair to assume that at least half of the stock kept consisted of dairy cows, by the keeping of which the building up of the fertility of the soil was an easy matter.

In all the territory where soft coal is relied upon chiefly as fuel for the kitchen stove it is the very bane of cleanly housewives, smearing their floors, soiling the wall paper, dirtying dishes and blackening wearing apparel. The chief fault with this kind of fuel is that under the conditions which usually prevail a complete combustion of the coal is not secured—that is, the smoke and soot are not consumed, but clog and retard the stove, the pipes and flues. While the trouble cannot be entirely done away, it can be materially improved by replenishing the stove more frequently and breaking the coal up into finer pieces. If at hand it will be found a great help to use either cobs or wood with the soft coal. In some localities it is possible to get coke from which the oily and soot producing elements have been largely removed. This makes a very hot fire and will have to be watched closely and renewed quite frequently.

It is only recently that the full value of rape as a pasture for growing pigs has come to be fully realized, and this only by the most progressive hog raisers. One acre of a good stand of rape will furnish pasture for from fifteen to twenty-five hogs, depending upon its rankness and thriftiness. The plant prefers a moist, cool soil, full of humus, and should be sown in the spring as soon as the danger of frost is over. If broadcasted, from six to eight pounds of seed should be used per acre. If drilled, as is sometimes done, in rows from twenty to thirty inches apart, from three to five pounds will answer. Excellent results are also secured by sowing about five pounds of seed on a part of the land to be devoted to oats and clover, the latter seed being put in after the rape. In this case the rape will germinate and grow slowly until the oats are cut, after which it will grow more rapidly, or the oats, clover and rape patch may be used as a pasture as soon as it gets six or seven inches high, no attempt being made to harvest the grain. Such pasture gives an excellent variety and together with corn and oil meal and such milk or buttermilk as is available makes possible very economical pork production. Rape is sometimes sown with satisfactory results as late as June 15, but it will not do well if the weather is dry during the weeks following.

ROAD A CERTAINTY

Extension of M. D. & W From International Falls to This City No Longer in Doubt.

A map recently gotten out by the state railway commission shows the proposed extension of the Minnesota, Dakota and Western railway from International Falls to this city. The road as mapped out will be built from Loman, which is a distance of some twenty miles west of International Falls, and to which place the M. D. & W. is now operating. The line, according to the map, runs in a westerly direction from Loman to the western portion of Beltrami county to, presumably, to avoid the "bogs" north of the lakes, and will strike in its path Grygla and Gormantown, entering this city from a north-easterly direction.

That the Soo is behind the movement there seems but little doubt as it is stated on good authority that the figures on which this line is based were furnished by the Soo Engineers who have traversed this territory several times in the past.

Postoffice is Not Bluffing.

Warren Register: The postoffice department is reported to have notified a Minneapolis farm publication that the privilege of the newspaper rate of postage has been withdrawn for the reason that by special investigation it was found that many persons were receiving the publication who had not paid for it. Many people seem to think that the order promulgated to the effect that the sending of a publication through the mails to persons without payment for the same is a violation of the laws, was a bluff or for special publications, but the fact that the department is getting around to the cases as fast as possible will have the effect of changing that opinion, and the time is not far distant when the smaller publications will have a chance to show postoffice inspectors that their list is a live one or be barred from the privileges that make it possible for them to exist. Newspapers established for political or advertising purposes should pay for the privilege of using the mails like any other private business venture.

Departs for Ashland.

Prof. A. J. Houle who has been the director of the local band the past year has resigned and will depart for Ashland, Wis., his former home the latter part of this week. Mr. Houle has received a flattering offer from an organization in that city to again assume the director-ship of a choir of about forty-five voices of which he had charge before he came here, and this with the other musical activities in which he may decide to engage later is an inducement which he is loth to turn down.

The Houle's have made a host of friends during their stay here who are deeply grieved at their decision to leave our midst and our best wishes go with them to their new home.

Mrs. Houle and Miss Jessamar departed the first of the week while Mr. Houle will remain until the latter part of the week.

A Light Damage.

H. M. Hicks was in the city last week while his building at Verndale was undergoing repairs after a light damage caused by fire the first of last week. That place was visited by the most destructive fire in its history last week in which many of the large business concerns were totally destroyed and for a time the whole village was in danger.

Boosts For Minnesota.

The Northern Minnesota Development association will hold its fourth convention in Duluth June 1 and 2, 1911 at which time plans will be perfected for carrying on a campaign of education to place before prospective homeseekers the advantages of our state, and also to further advertise our northern resources and requirements among our own people. Among the matters to discuss will be:

State development, development of state lands, conservation of soil fertility, land show in St. Paul, December, 1911, commission plan of state government, national corn show, Minneapolis, 1912, and other important matters.

Among the organizations who will send delegates are thirty-four Northern Minnesota County Development associations, the Wisconsin Advancement association, Upper Michigan Development association, Western Michigan Development bureau, and others.

A determined effort is now under way to show those seeking homes from other states that our own state holds inducements superior to others, which our close proximity to market indicates; the next five years hold great possibilities to those states that are up and doing: Minnesota is the banner western state and should be in the lead of this great land movement. Duluth is making great preparations to take care of all who will come. Those who attend will enjoy not only the business of the meeting, but from the social side an especially enjoyable time is anticipated.

Kreil—Freund.

The many friends of Mr. Franz F. Freund and Miss Talla Kreil were aggreeably surprised Monday evening to learn of their marriage. The wedding was a very quiet affair. The parties to the happy event, without advising any of their friends of their matrimonial intentions, went to the home of the officiating clergyman, Rev. L. T. Hughes, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Monday evening and were quietly married. However the secret was out by the time the bridal party had returned to the bride's home and the band boys, assisted by others making more noise and less music, gave them a rousing serenade.

Mr. and Mrs. Freund are living in Mr. Freund's house in the west part of town and are receiving the congratulations of their many friends.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Soo Line Replies.

In reply to an article published in the Karlstad Advocate some time ago, and reprinted in the News, regarding the necessity of a day-light train on the Soo Line the following reply has been received by Editor Nordan: "Mr. O. S. Nordan, Editor of Advocate, Karlstad, Minnesota. Dear Sir: Referring to your favor of April 19th, which has been given grave consideration by the executive. The earnings of the line north of Thief River Falls does not pay operating expenses with the present service, were it not for the through service. Conditions are such that no promise can be made for additional service this summer, but the matter will not be lost track of and at the earliest possible moment that business in sight will warrant additional service will be provided. Yours truly, W. R. Calloway, general passenger agent."

L. E. Bowie Leaves.

L. E. Bowie, who has made such a distinct hit by his skill in pounding the dust of the mahoganies (or in plain English, playing the piano) and as illustrated song singer at the Lyceum left last Saturday for Crookston where he has accepted a similar position at the Bijou theatre in that city. Mr. Bowie is among the top notchers in his profession and is bound to make good.

Miss Lulu Larson who was formerly employed at the Lyceum has been secured to fill his vacancy.

CHANGES HANDS

Lyceum Theatre, on LaBree Avenue, Changed Hands Last Saturday.

Roy L. Morgan, of Bagley, Becomes Owner Of The Property.

Last Saturday a deal was perfected whereby the Lyceum Theatre, on LaBree avenue, became the property of Roy L. Morgan, of Bagley, it passing out of the hands of Henry Eide who in company with Carl Angell and Ephran Thompson opened up the the theatre on third street some three years ago.

Mr. Morgan promises to the best of his ability to give the patrons of the house the best there is for the money and to keep up the good record and reputation that has been won for the house by its excellent management in the past.

Mr. Morgan will retain the help employed by the house, among them Hans Angell, who has won considerable notoriety by his skillful manipulation of the crank. Miss Lulu Larson will act as pianist and illustrated song singer.

Mr. Morgan has our wishes for success in his undertaking.

Band Officers Elected.

At the election held last Monday evening, the following officers were elected:

President—Joe Votova.
Vice Pres.—Oscar Evenson.
Secretary—Allen Lipscomb.
Treasurer—Ward Scharback.

The Country Creameries.

It is not for the best interests of the farmer, for the merchant to take advantage of the butter prices established by the creameries by paying a premium for dairy (or home churned) butter: The creameries throughout the country are struggling for existance due to the competition of the large central creameries, or the over zealous ambition to give its patrons at all times the highest price for their cream, and to place a premium on dairy butter not only invites the competition of home churning, but thereby possibly jeopardizes the life of your local creamery, the absence of which would make premium paying for dairy butter impossible, and bring us back once more to six to ten cent butter.

Farmers tributary to a creamery should think twice before churning their cream, and enter this competition of low priced butter and farmers living at a distance should join together and arrange either by exchanging services, or employment of some one for the delivery of their cream to the creamery.

Every farmer should join a creamery and stick to it and help build up the surest department of the farm.—Stephen Messenger.

A Big Attraction.

Quite a rush was experienced at the opening of the reservation land last Tuesday morning at the Crookston land office. About 100 men were in line when the office was opened at nine o'clock. The first man in the line was James Hurby, of Marie; No. 2 was John H. Rothstenll, of Plummer; No. 3, Nick Pahlon, of Red Lake Falls; No. 4, Ed Katlin, of Marie, and No. 5, Peter E. Olson, of Thief River Falls. There were four women in line, Alma M. Dahl, of Neptune, Minn., who was No. 27, Grace Pinkerton, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., No. 50; Mary Arndt and Sophia Hecken, of Highlanding.

RAILROADS TAKE ACTION

Attorney General Served With Notice of Move to Return to 3-Cent Fare.

Hearing on Petitons To Be Held In St. Paul Tomorrow.

Formal action was taken last week by five Minnesota railroads looking to restoration of the 3-cent passenger fare on July 1, the time fixed for it to go into effect on the three roads named in the railroad rate injunction cases. Notices were served on the attorney general and the state railroad commissioners by W. H. Grimshaw, United States marshall, that the Milwaukee, Rock Island, Great Western, Omaha, and North—Western roads have petitioned the federal circuit court for relief from the state rates which it has declared invalid in the case of the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Minneapolis & St. Louis.

Hearing on the petitions is fixed for tomorrow before the federal circuit court in St. Paul. The Soo has already been relieved from the state rates by stipulation. The commodity rates enjoined have never been in affect, but the 2 cent passenger fare has been in effect on all roads since May 1, 1907.

Work Almost Completed.

Register of Deeds E. L. Quist has about completed the task of transcribing the records. It has been a big job and occupied the time of Mr. Quist and his assistants for three months, though with the rectograph the work was accomplished in only a fraction of the time that would have taken to have copied the records in ordinary manner. The records for Pennington county fill seventy-two large volumes.

United Church Notices.

Services next Sunday A. M. in the Norwegian language. No services in the evening.

Universally Praised.

Mr. Joseph M. Weber's remarkable three-act play "The Climax," by Edward Locke, for which our local theatre management arranged a date a few days since, is one of the new offerings theatrically that has been praised by both the critics, the press and the public. Coming direct as it does from its New York run, we are indeed fortunate to secure this attraction.

Farmers' Elevator Co.

Notice is hereby given that the stockholders of the Farmers' Elevator Co will meet at the Auditorium at Thief River Falls, Minn., Monday, May 22, 1911, at 1 o'clock P. M. This meeting is called for the purpose of deciding on matters concerning the erection of the elevator, appointing a building committee, collecting subscription dues, and such other business as may be deemed necessary.

Base Ball Dope.

The local team played a double-header practice game at the fair grounds last Sunday afternoon and tramped off with the scalps of their opponents.

The first game which was with the commercial travelers was a one-sided affair and the locals were dizzy before they got thru scampering around the bases and when the dust cleared away held nine scores to their credit. The score at the end of the fifth inning, which was the length of both games, stood 9 to 2.

The clash with the "Outlaws", however, was not as easy a task as the one with the "drummers" and the result was a 4 to 3 score in favor of the locals. The "Outlaws" are composed of a fast bunch of players, and the contest as a whole was a close one, altho, the locals were minus four of their regular players.

The locals will play a return game with the Red Lake Falls team on the local diamond next Sunday afternoon. This promises to be a good contest as the down river aggregation is stronger this year than in many seasons passed and with the proper practice the locals will by that time be in fine shape to open the season's work. Everyone should turn out and show their appreciation of the national sport and boost for the home team.

The "Tigers" went down to St. Hilaire Sunday morning and in the afternoon played a game with the team in that city and was defeated by a 9 to 8 score. Reports from St. Hilaire are to the effect that this was the best game seen at that place for a long time, and, altho, the score ran high the game was a hard fought one. At the end of the ninth inning the game stood a tie, 8 to 8, and prospects were bright for a victory in favor of the locals, when Wickum, the twirler for the locals passed a man on balls which, by the aid of a single brought in the winning score for the St. Hilaire aggregation.

Chas. Nason, the veteran local star who is playing with the travelers this year, played second base with the Crookston aggregation in their game with the Grand Forks Pickets last Sunday. The Crookstonites won out by a score of 8 to 6.

Will Inspect Hostleries.

Bulletins are being issued by Alex W. Crozier, state hotel inspector, that on July 1 his deputies will start enforcing the law passed at the last session of the legislature relative to hotel equipment, fire escapes, sanitary measures and things of like kind.

"I have been sending out warning to all hotel keepers," Mr. Crozier said "that they must comply with the law." A copy of the recent act is enclosed with each letter so they may learn what its provisions are. I am giving plenty of time, I think, for all to prepare to observe it. Then there will be no excuse when the inspectors get out."

Mr. Crozier says a great lot of the hotels will have to be equipped with ropes for fire escape because other means are lacking.

Synod Church.

I. T. Aastad.

Services next Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m. and at 7:45 p. m.

The Ladies Aid meets Thursday, May 25th at 2.30 in the basement of the church entertained by Mrs. C. P. Hornseth and Mrs. Oscar Williams.

Sunday school every Sunday at 9.30.

What Hustling Has Done.

Manager Anderson says he has secured a contract from the management of the "Climax". The date will be announced later on. It will be a month or so at least. A little energy of this kind, if pursued, will bring to our town a higher standard of companies.

Chr. Halvorson, the piano tuner, will call on the receipt of your postal card.

LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVE FAILS

In regard to skin diseases medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid. WASH THE GERMS OUT. A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D. Prescription, penetrates to the disease germs and destroys it, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 25-cent trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

ARSENIC IS FOUND IN COFFEE

Alleged Attempted Poisoning at State Soldiers' Home to Be Investigated by Trustees.

Arsenic was in the coffee served to Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Davis, Dr. Heron and two others, when they dined in the cottage of the chief surgeon of the Soldiers' Home April 28, according to a report submitted to the board of trustees at its meeting at the home.

It is believed that, before the board adjourns, startling disclosures will be made, since it has been intimated that a special investigating committee has cognizance of how and by whom the deadly poison was put into the coffee.

On April 28 Dr. Davis, chief surgeon at the home, and four others, were dining in the surgeon's cottage. Coffee was brought in from the home hospital. Soon after they all became very ill. A sample of the coffee was sent to the state chemist, who discovered the presence of arsenic.

DOZEN BUILDINGS TORN DOWN

Terrific Wind Storm Strikes the Town of Felton.

A great funnel shaped cloud, bringing with it a terrific wind, bore down upon Felton, a small town north of Moorhead, tore down a dozen buildings, blew in every good sized window in the town and tore up trees in large numbers.

The only one hurt, as far as could be learned, was Andrew Peterson, a farmer living two and one-half miles west of Felton, who sustained serious injuries about the head. He was in his barn when it was overturned.

The buildings blown down were mostly machine sheds and barns. In addition to this damage the wind took the top off a box car and overturned several wagons, with teams hitched to them, causing much excitement.

RATE CASE APPEAL FILED

Attorney for State of Minnesota Asks for Early Hearing.

The appeal of the state of Minnesota from the decision of Judge Walter H. Sanborn of the United States circuit court on the cases involving the validity of the Minnesota commodity and passenger rates, was filed in the supreme court of the United States by Attorney General Edward E. Young for the state. With the appeal Mr. Young filed a petition to have those cases advanced for argument soon after the beginning of the new term in October. Hale Halden, representing the railroads concerned, concurred in the petition for a hearing at the earliest possible date.

NEW PROBE IS NECESSARY

Minnesota Attorney General Rules on Whittier Case.

Specific charges will have to be filed before the state board of control and a hearing be held before F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the state training school at Red Wing, can be removed from office.

This was decided in an opinion given by George T. Simpson, attorney general, in answer to questions asked him by the board of control.

"The duty of the board of control is to await the filing before it of specific charges by some person, who may be so advised, other than a member of the board of control," Mr Simpson says.

REAL ESTATE MAN ARRESTED

Head of Prominent Duluth Firm Must Face Serious Charge.

De Courcey Niles of Duluth, president of the firm of C. H. Graves & Co. of that city, real estate and loans, was arrested on a bench warrant and arraigned in the district court on an indictment for grand larceny in the first degree.

He is charged by the Maryland Casualty company of Baltimore with having appropriated to his own use $574 last July.

Child is Fatally Burned.

Burning kerosene which poured over the eighteen-months-old son of Mrs. Mollie Schreiber of St. Paul caused burns that resulted in the death of the child at the city hospital where it was taken after the accident. The mother was severely burned while attempting to save the child's life and the home, which also was menaced by the flames.

Meets Death in the Air.

When George H. Hallman of Mankato, lineman for the General Electric company of Minneapolis, went to Twenty-seventh street and Stevens avenue to repair a break in the lines he came in contact with a high voltage wire, which threw him across the crossarm, lifeless. The fire department was called to remove the body.

UNDER REORGANIZATION PLAN

Department of Dakota to Be Abolished July 1.

The department of Dakota, with headquarters at St. Paul, will be discontinued on July 1, according to a dispatch from Washington. This will be done incident to a plan of army reorganization to be put into effect at the instance of General Wood, chief of staff.

Orders now being prepared provide that the military service of the United States shall be composed of three continental divisions, the Eastern division, with headquarters at New York; the Central division, with headquarters at Chicago, and the Western division with headquarters at San Francisco.

This readjustment contemplates the discontinuance of the department of Colorado as well as the department of Dakota. The business now transacted in these two departments will be merged in the Western or Central division. Probably the department of Dakota is the smallest of the present military subdivisions, comprising Forts Snelling, Yellowstone, Lincoln, Missouri and Harrison.

SELLS ABOVE THE APPRAISAL

Nearly Four Thousand Acres of Land Realize About $40,000.

Almost four thousand acres of state land were sold at Grand Rapids at considerable above the appraised value. All the land offered in section 4, town 56, range 22, was sold at from $46 to $60 an acre. Other tracts sold at $20 to $35.

The land in section 4, town 56, range 22, was purchased by Joseph Selwood and others and is to be used as a site for an ore concentrating plant at Nashwauk by the International Harvester company, owner of the Crosby mine at Nashwauk.

Much of the land sold is to be used for agricultural purposes, men from Iowa, South Dakota and Wisconsin being among the buyers. The sales amounted to nearly $40,000.

PIONEER EDUCATOR IS DEAD

Dr. C. W. Hall at Minnesota University for Thirty Years.

Professor Dr. Christopher W. Hall, for thirty years connected with the University of Minnesota in varying capacities, is dead at his home in Minneapolis from an affliction of anaemia. Dr. Hall, who was sixty-six years old had been suffering from the disease for two years, having contracted it while attending a convention of the International Geological association in Chile, South America. For the past month he has been confined to his bed, where he has grown steadily weaker.

TO CLEAR LAND TITLES

Bill to Relieve Innocent Buyers on White Earth.

A bill "for the relief of innocent purchasers of land on the White Earth reservation," was introduced in the house by Representative Steenerson. It is designed to protect persons who bought lands at White Earth presumably from mixed bloods, who under authority of the Clapp law are authorized to alienate their holdings.

IOWAN SLAIN IN HOBO CAMP

Choked to Death by Alleged Robbers Near Sherburn, Minn.

A. Case, Estherville, Ia., was murdered in a hobo camp on the bank of a lake near Sherburn. He had been choked to death. The victim was sixty-six years old and is survived by a family. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive of the crime. Sheriff Ward has a dragnet out for the murderers, but there is no tangible clue.

Fire at Stillwater Prison.

Fire which broke out in the paint shop of the old prison at Stillwater destroyed much material that is used in the construction of farm machinery and damaged the floor and ceiling. The prison fire department, consisting of twenty convicts, assisted by the city department, put out the flames in ten minutes. The loss is $2,000.

Two Killed by Lightning.

Mrs. Andrew Larson, aged fifty-six, and her daughter Alva, aged nineteen, residing near Carver, were instantly killed by lightning while they were planting corn in a field. The husband and father was at work in the same field not far distant, but was uninjured. There was no rain and no other sign of electrical disturbance.

Business Portion Wiped Out.

The business portion of La Porte was wiped out by fire. Just how or where the fire originated is not positively known. Flames were first seen shooting out from the roof of Andrew Gohre's store and it is supposed the fire started in the store from mice eating matches. The total loss is estimated at about $25,000.

Nearly Wiped Out by Fire.

Lake Wilson, a town seventeen miles east of Pipestone, was nearly wiped out by fire. Seventeen business places were destroyed, including the Omaha station, two grain elevators, two implement houses, a bank, several general stores, two lumber yards, a hardware store, a hotel and the town hall.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The little bullet riddled city of Juarez is now the provisional capital of Mexico and Francisco I. Madero, Jr., provisional president, and his staff have taken complete possession after winning the bloodiest battle of the Mexican revolution. In a corner of the barracks which for two days he held against the terrific fire of the rebels sits General Juan J. Navarro, the federal commander, a captive, having surrendered with almost his entire garrison of several hundred men. A conservative estimate by physicians as well as by insurrecto leaders who surveyed the fighting puts the federal dead at nearly fifty and the rebel loss at about fifteen, with a total of nearly 250 wounded on both sides. On the American side of the line five have been killed and about seventeen wounded, many of them being innocently engaged at a distance from the river front.

Tijuana, Lower California, was captured by the insurrectos after a short, savage fight. The attack was a complete surprise to the federal forces. Confident that the flanking party of forty men sent out of Tijuana had forced the rebels to retire the defenders were resting in supposed security, when the assault came at daybreak. All but one or two of the flanking party are thought to have been killed or wounded.

Unless the federal reinforcements which are now hurrying to his relief arrive soon Colonel Pedro Ojeda, commanding the garrison of Hermosillo, consisting of about 200 men, must face a most critical situation. Only the most desperate resistance can prevent the capital of Sonora, and the largest city in Northwestern Mexico, from falling into the hands of the insurrectos.

The resignation and flight of President Estrada of Nicaragua are believed to portend another revolution. Vice President Adolfo Diaz is acting as president, but Minister of War General Luis Mena, differences with whom led to the sudden effacement of Estrada, is the likely successor of Estrada.

Mexico's provisional government became an established fact with the naming of a cabinet by Francisco I. Madero, Jr., provisional president, and with the establishment of a capital at the captured city of Juarez.

Two thousand insurrectos, part of the band operating in the districts south of Chihuahua, are reported to be marching on that city. Already the advance guards are encamped around the city.

TEACHING THE CALF TO DRINK.

It is amusing sometimes to see the somewhat lengthy dissertations on teaching the calf how to drink, as if it were a matter of considerable difficulty. There are a few simple precautions that make the matter relatively easy—at least the writer has found them so in his own experience. In the first place, the calf will learn to drink the more quickly if it hasn't acquired the habit of sucking. It is well to take the little chap away from the mammy after it has her udder cleaned out in good shape. In the case of inexperienced persons the job is aggravated by going at it wrong way to. It is well to be friendly with the hungry little bovine, and with this idea in view straddle its back, give it two fingers and when it has got a good grip on them gently lower the head into the pail, keeping the fingers far enough apart so that the milk will pull between them. Keep the little brute's nostrils above the milk line and when it is getting a good draft of milk withdraw the fingers. It will shortly want something to suck besides its tongue, and the fingers will have to be returned to the mouth, but gone at in this way it will not be long before the calf will drink in an entirely satisfactory way.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

"It is the judgment of the court and your sentence is that you, John Deitz, be punished by imprisonment for life at the state penitentiary at Waupun and that one day each year, namely, Oct. 8, you shall be kept in solitary confinement." The above sentence was imposed by Judge Reid at Hayward, Wis., on the defender of Cameron dam, convicted of the murder of Deputy Oscar Harp during the siege on the Deitz cabin last October. The jury, which was out sixteen hours, returned a verdict finding John Deitz guilty of murder in the first degree and finding Mrs. Deitz and Leslie Deitz not guilty. After Deitz' motion for a new trial had been made and denied Judge Reid asked him if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced. Deitz at once launched into a tirade against the lumber trust, raising his voice in uncontrollable madness.

COMPOUND CALLOUSES

Tells Splendid Cure for Them and All Foot Troubles.

A compound callous is the secondary stage when it grows inward and presses on the nerves, causing intense pain. Callouses never cure themselves but always get worse, sometimes irritating the whole nervous system. The following is a most effective and speedy cure "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide in a basin of hot water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give the desired results.) The soreness will disappear immediately and the callous can be easily peeled off. Repeat this for several nights. A little olive oil rubbed into skin is very beneficial."

This Calocide is a very remarkable preparation for all foot ailments. Bunions, corns and ingrowing nails get instant relief and are soon cured. Bad smelling and sore feet need but a few treatments. Calocide is no longer confined to doctors' use. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually enough to put the worst feet in fine condition. It will prove a blessing to persons who have been vainly trying ineffectual tablets and foot powders.

Bees often make fine honey in hollow trees in the woods in a wild state, but they surely need more care than merely "being let alone" if they are expected to give either pleasure or profit under the usual domestic conditions.

The scabby legged hen can be made more presentable if her legs are dipped in coal oil to the hocks and held there a few minutes. If decided improvement is not noticed the treatment should be repeated in the course of a week or ten days.

A Missouri farmer we read of the other day put a bright idea into execution. He wanted an open shed in the pasture, so he built a framework of poles giving a skeleton about 20 by 50 feet. Then when he thrashed his small grain he arranged the stack blower so as to shoot the straw on to the frame.

If the rainfall continues short it will be a part of wisdom to get the corn ground in shape with the use of the drag, this provided that the plow land is sufficiently mellow. This will drive a dust mulch and will enable the soil to retain much moisture that would be lost were the ground cut deeply with a disk.

There is probably no agency that will clean up a patch of brush land more quickly or more effectively than a flock of goats. Not only will they devour weeds and herbage, but will strip the leaves from brush and peel the bark from smooth barked trees. And while they are engaged in the job they give a fair interest return on the money invested in them by the gains they make, if young animals.

As high as $2,000 and $3,000 per acre has been paid for western fruit land, but these figures are modest compared with $5,000 per acre, the figure at which tobacco land is held on the Isle of Pines. This island is situated about thirty-five miles south of Cuba, in the Caribbean sea, and its fertile soil and balmy climate make it the finest tobacco raising section in the world. With the completion of the Panama canal it is expected that the island will become far better known.

Old Tantalus, Phrygia's mythical king, may have gazed on water which always eluded his thirsty lips and luscious fruits which hung just beyond his reach, but he was spared the vexation of seeing fat 1,500 pound steers go by his door en route to some central market to tickle the palate of some urban nabob when he was cocksure that the next day for dinner he must be content with a slice of steak from some old brindled female of many summers and a career replete with honors and offspring.

Some very useful inventions and discoveries trace their origin to very humble sources. To illustrate, a fellow of the name of Johnson, residence unimportant, some years ago noticed that the droppings of an old hen that roosted in the carriage shed loosened the varnish wherever they fell on parts of the buggy. This set him to thinking, and shortly he secured a patent for a varnish remover made of extract of hen manure mixed with a cheap grade of turpentine. This man is now living on the interest of his money and wears a silk hat and drives a $5,000 touring car.

A robin that the writer has been watching the past few days is building a nest in the crotch of an apple tree not more than three and a half feet from the ground. The tree is located at a point some distance from the house and in a spot much frequented by cats. We have decided to safeguard this nesting place by encircling the tree with a piece of wire netting to keep the cats from having access to the trunk. A year or so ago robins built in a plum tree not far from this apple tree and even closer to the ground, and both parent birds and little ones fell victims to prowling cats.

One of the most interesting of the migratory birds is the white throated sparrow, which in size and general appearance resembles the song sparrow. It may be distinguished from the latter, however, by the pronounced black and white striped cap which it wears and a white throat from which mark it takes its name. The song of this sparrow is a high pitched sweet and very clear whistle, which some one has interpreted "pea-bo-dy-bird," the last syllable or two being pitched a trifle lower than the rest. During their migration the white throated sparrows are often seen in flocks of a dozen or more. They build their nests on the ground on the border of woodland or swamp, and they are usually made of grass and leaves.

Experience of experiment station and orchard men covering several years proves very conclusively that a big majority—about 80 per cent—of the worms that enter apples do so at the blossom end. The codling moth lays its eggs in the calyx cup within a period of about ten days after the petals fall. It is during this interval that the tree should be given a thorough spraying with an arsenate of lead solution at the rate of about two pounds to fifty gallons of water, the object being to deposit a little of the poison in each one of these calyx cups. If one is spraying to check apple scab or other fungous pests with the bordeaux solution or summer lime sulphur mixture the arsenate may be added to the same volume of these. But whether applied in water or with them the liquid should be given frequent stirring to insure an even distribution of the poison.

Old wall paper may be removed by applying over it a thick coat of boiled flour paste with a small broom or wall paper brush. As soon as the moisture has time to soak in the paper can easily be removed in large strips.

While a dressing of soft or hard coal ashes may improve the texture of a stiff clay soil, they have no fertilizing value which would be a benefit to the soil. The place for them is in the road and feed sheds, not on the garden.

A reader of these notes asks what states ranked highest in corn production during 1910. The six leading states, with their production of corn in bushels, were the following: Illinois, 414,812,000; Iowa, 343,870,000; Missouri, 273,000,000; Nebraska, 200,400,000; Indiana, 201,216,000; Texas, 181,280,000.

As a result of a number of cases which have been thrashed out in court in several states the principle seems to be pretty well established that when a nurseryman purposely substitutes inferior fruit trees in place of the kind ordered the purchaser can recover damages equal to the loss sustained. This is a fact that both nurserymen and orchardists should remember.

A recent census of the girl students of Chicago university showed that but 2 per cent would confess that they intended to marry. That a woman does not always say what she means, and especially on the subject of matrimony, is indicated by the further fact that 40 per cent of these same college girls were at the time attending lectures on household management.

The agricultural department at Washington has recently issued a pamphlet making denial of a statement published a short time ago in California papers to the effect that the department had originated a new type of navel orange and had several thousand of the trees for sale. The department is experimenting along the line of new citrus fruits, but thus far has nothing to which it can give an unqualified indorsement for commercial purposes.

That birds are largely endowed with instinct is conceded, but it is stretching a point to say they are possessed of a reasoning power in the more exact sense of the term. In illustration of this fact, robins have been known to carry grass and mud to a sloping shelf or sill during a period of a week or ten days, when every piece deposited slipped off on the ground as soon as it was dropped. A creature possessed of a reasoning faculty would "tumble" in less time than this.

With eggs representing in the neighborhood of two-thirds of the total value of poultry products, which last year were put at $650,000,000, the campaign which has been undertaken by the agricultural department with a view to stopping the average loss of 10 per cent of all eggs between the nest and the consumer through spoiling has much to justify it. Satisfactory results can only be had through the co-operation of all poultry raisers along the line of providing better nesting places, more frequent gathering of eggs and keeping them in cooler places and more frequent marketing.

It seems still to be a mooted point whether birds like the robin, thrush and flicker are endowed with a special instinc—a sort of wireless telegraph apparatus—which enables them to keep tab on worms stirring just beneath the surface of the soil or whether it is entirely a matter of a remarkably acute sense of sight and hearing. Whatever the faculty, it's a sure thing that one of these pretty fellows will make a beeline of several feet, cock head to one side and in a jiffy yank a big fat worm from beneath the grass. However, the bird doesn't bother about the philosophy of the transaction so long as it gets its own breakfast and food for its young.

Looks and good sense are quite as often at variance in the horticultural as in the realm of fashion and social life. The average householder will carefully rake all the leaves and litter from the rose beds and beneath the other shrubs and hedges because the looks of the premises are thereby improved, and yet these very leaves, blown there by the wind, are nature's means of furnishing mulch to hold the moisture and a decaying humus to nourish the life of the growing shrubs. These ends are carried out perfectly in timber tracts unprofaned by rake or spade. Here forest tree and frail bush and plant receive the full benefit of nature's kindly ministries in their behalf.

The annual fiasco of free distribution of seeds by congressmen to their many constituents the country over has been pulled off within the past two or three weeks. If seeds of really new and valuable vegetables were sent out in this widespread distribution there would be just a little excuse for the practice, but when the same old stuff is sent out year after year, some varieties tracing their origin back as far as 1873, and with their germinating quality often poor, there would seem to be absolutely no argument in favor of the practice. Perhaps the belief is entertained by some gullible congressmen that the bestowal of these free seeds imposes a courtesy obligation which it is supposed will be canceled by political support. Whether abolished or not, this poor farce ought at least to be no longer perpetrated under the auspices of the department of agriculture, which is or ought to be worthy of better things.

CATTLE RAISING IN TENNESSEE.

A young man living at Manitowoc, Wis., who is a reader of these notes wrote recently inquiring as to the proposition of raising cattle in the Cumberland mountain district in Tennessee. He asks why it is that cattlemen have not turned to this section in the past, as there are large tracts of suitable land that can be got at a very reasonable price. He inquires what breed of cattle would do best, what would be the best way to get a start in a given breed and about the wisdom of making a deal with wealthy coal men in the section referred to, they to furnish range and he the cattle. Not having first hand knowledge of the section, the writer has made some inquiries about the Cumberland mountain district. It appears that for a number of years this section—in fact, the whole state of Tennessee—was under the ban of the cattle tick pest, which made successful cattle raising impossible. However, in 1906 the federal department of agriculture began co-operating with the state, and at the present writing all of the state but Hamilton county and a portion of Marion county has been removed from quarantine. The chief drawback with cattle raising in the section in question would therefore seem to be removed. For the range conditions mentioned there is little question that the Herefords would be the best breed to raise. In the matter of getting a start conditions would depend somewhat upon the scale on which our correspondent wishes to go into the business. But whether on a large or modest scale it would be wise to get a well bred sire or sires of strong beef characteristics and a few pure bred cows. The rest of the cows should be grades of pronounced beef type, preferably of the same breed. If our friend has had no previous experience in cattle raising we would suggest that he take the business up on a rather limited scale at first, increasing his operations as he gets experience and becomes better acquainted with the new conditions. This will, of course, mean smaller profits in case the venture is successful, yet smaller losses in case of a reverse. The wisdom of going into partnership with the owners of the tracts referred to would seem to depend almost entirely upon whether the right kind of terms can be secured and whether the landowners in question will tote fair. This factor could be learned by making inquiry of disinterested persons knowing them well. With cheap and abundant pasture, good markets and the cattle tick pest eliminated, it would seem as if the proposition ought to be a money maker. This takes for granted that our correspondent is a rustler and possesses good judgment. If he takes up the business we would much like to hear from him when he gets squared away.

WHAT DETERMINES THE PRICE?

The proposal to admit Canadian wheat free under the terms of the reciprocity treaty has led to the statement of some rather interesting theories as to wheat movements and prices. On the one hand we have those of a rather practical turn of mind who contend that the admission into the United States duty free of Canadian wheat will in just the proportion that this bears to the total amount of wheat produced at home reduce the price thereon. On the other hand, we have the view of the economist and experienced wheat trader who contends the price of wheat at the big markets in the United States is not determined by home production and consumption in the larger sense at all, but by price levels prevailing on the London and Liverpool markets, which are the wheat clearing houses of the world. The wherefore of the above lies, so it is claimed, in the fact that wheat prices in the United States are determined by the price which our surplus or export wheat fetches on the foreign markets. It follows from the above, if true, that if, say, 250,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat were diverted to points in the United States instead of going to English markets the supply at the latter points would be in that proportion lessened. This would mean, if the theory holds water, that the price got for our increased volume of export wheat would be increased as a result, so that in the end the price average would be the same as if the Canadian product were shipped directly to Europe. It would seem to be merely a matter of two ways of getting around the same stump.

A MANIFOLD RETURN.

While roses will give a manifold return in beauty, fragrance and all around satisfaction planted in almost any kind of soil, they thrive best in one which contains a good per cent of clay. If the soil about the house does not contain clay a wagon load can usually be got at no great distance. This should be mixed with the loam soil, and if thoroughly rotted manure, leaf mold or decomposed sod can be had so much the better. The roses should be set in the bed two or three inches deeper than they stood in the pot, should be sprinkled daily—sprayed with water under pressure, if possible—sprinkled with flower of sulphur for mildew, with road dust in the morning for slugs and with tobacco tea for spiders and lice. The best blossoms will be produced on the most rapidly growing wood, and this is secured by rather heavy pruning. This applies especially to teas like the American Beauty, but in a less degree to all hardy bush and climbing roses.

TO TAKE EFFECT ON JULY 1

Existing Railroad Rates in Minnesota to Be Advanced.

Three cents a mile will be the regular passenger rate in Minnesota on and after the 1st of July next. Existing interstate passenger rates, based on the present 2-cent rate in Minnesota, will likewise be advanced. Just how far the change will extend has not been determined, but it will affect a wide territory, putting things back to practically where they were four years ago.

The order to put back the old passenger rates has been issued by some of the Minnesota roads. It is expected that all the roads in the state will give similar instructions in a few days.

The merchandise rates, also involved in the Minnesota rate cases, are similarly affected. They will be restored to the old level.

IN FIT OF JEALOUS ANGER

North St. Paul Man Wounds Wife and Himself.

Suffering from three wounds inflicted by her former husband in a fit of jealous anger at her home in North St. Paul, Mrs. Martha Guinn, forty-one years old, the intended victim, lies at the city hospital at St. Paul with a good chance of recovery. In a cell in the surgical ward below lies her assailant, James Arthur Guinn, thirty-seven years old, with self-inflicted injuries that probably will be fatal.

Back of the shooting affray lies a tangled skein of domestic troubles, through which runs the mother's love for her little boy, Arthur, for whose sake she returned to her former husband, only to live unhappily, it is said.

LOCKS HIMSELF IN VAULT

Clerk Then Takes Poison in Old Capitol at St. Paul.

Despondent over some piece of misfortune, possibly a love affair, Herbert Spencer of St. Paul, about twenty-five years old, a helper in the United States food and drug inspection laboratory in the old capitol, committed suicide by taking poison in the vault of the laboratory some time between Tuesday night and Thursday morning, after plugging the bolts of the door from the inside so that an expert had to be called when Mr. Mitchell, suspecting harm had come to the young man, found that the doors would not open, although the combination was properly set.

TOWN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Destructive Fire in Lumber Yards at South Stillwater, Minn.

Spontaneous combustion is blamed for a $175,000 fire which started in the Kaiser box factory in South Stillwater. The high wind blowing toward the river saved the town. The fire spread rapidly through the yards of the box company, which contained 10,000,000 feet of lumber, all of which was destroyed.

The local fire department and hundreds of volunteer fire fighters proved inadequate to stop the headway of the flames and a hurry up call was sent in to the St. Paul department, which responded with one engine and a full company of men.

INDIAN CHIEF OJIBWA DEAD

Noted Chippewa Succumbs at White Earth.

Ojibwa, one of the last surviving chiefs of the Chippewa Indians and one of the oldest members on the White Earth reservation, is dead, aged eighty-four years.

Ojibwa is survived by five daughters and two sons, among them being Peter Parker, who served as a private in Company D, First Minnesota, in the Civil war. The old chief was early converted to the Roman Catholic faith and zealously followed the teachings of its creed until his death.

FATAL TROLLEY ACCIDENT

One Man Killed and Two Injured at Minneapolis.

One man was killed and two probably fatally injured, when an interurban car ran down a gang of track laborers at Minneapolis.

George Gobiack was killed instantly, while Mike Sadoh and Mike Sodao were hurried to the city hospital, the former with a fractured skull and the latter with internal injuries and a fractured right leg.

INDIAN LAND THROWN OPEN

Thirty-Two Thousand Acres to Be Settled on at Once.

Nearly 32,000 acres of land have been opened for settlement in the Bow String and Boy river country.

This includes all ceded lands on which the timber had been cut and removed; 12,000 acres in the Leech Lake reservation and nearly 20,000 in the Winnebigoshish reserve.

Perished in Forest Fire.

The charred remains of Kitto Mikalla, a bachelor farmer, who resided alone in the Mud Hen district near Eveleth, was found in the burned building on his place. A forest fire swept over his place and it is presumed that he died fighting it. Mikalla was forty-seven years of age and was well to do.

Entered at the postoffice at Thief River Falls, Minn., as second class matter.

That the Red Wing Training School affair and the demand of the removal of Superintendent Whittier is a political game, conducted by a number of down and out politicians becomes more evident every day. The fact that Mr. Whittier has the best interests of the boys under him at heart was shown when he refused to call the hundred or more boys who are now occupying positions of trust and responsibility and who have served their "time" at this institution under his supervision, and owe to him what they are today, because he would not make public their past to save himself.

Mr. S. W. Leavitt a former member of the board of control in a letter to the St. Paul Dispatch says:

"I was a member of the board of control during most of the time covered by the investigation. I noted in many investigations of complaints made personally and through the daily press, and know of my own knowledge that no such state of affairs existed there during the eight years of my service as is claimed by the report of the investigating committee."

Even if the men under arrest charged with complicity in the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building should not be guilty, and we do not accuse them of being so, we do believe that labor leaders and others who are proclaiming these men innocent of the crime for which they are under arrest and that they are victims of a drastic capitalistic conspiracy to "assassinate" unionism, are using unfair and unwise tactics. If any organization supports or defends men under these circumstances, then that organization must indorse their acts and abide by the consequences in the great verdict of public sentiment. It is not for organized labor to pass judgement on these men but their case will be dealt with in court before a fair and impartial jury. It is needless to say that many crimes have been committed all over the country and were carried out for the purpose of intimidating non-union labor and it should be to the interest of these organizations to see that the law takes its course with such suspects and have their innocence or guilt proved before a fair and impartial tribunal rather than to befriend them in their time of trial. Unionism has accomplished a great and needy work which has hardly more than begun, but it is easy to prophesy that this work will never be completed if it undertakes to sympathize with all the crimes that are committed in its name.

Standard Oil Dissolved.

By a decision of the supreme court of the United States, handed down last Monday the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey was declared to be a trust in violation of the Federal laws, and was ordered dissolved.

The decision is in affirmation of the decree issued by the lower court, which was fought by the Standard Oil company.

There were modifications of that decree, but Chief Justice White, who read the opinion, declared that they were very slight indeed.

The decision declares that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is a conspiracy and monoply in restraint of trade.

Contract Is Let.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held last Monday afternoon bids for remodeling the court house were opened and the contract was awarded to F. S. Doege, of this city Mr. Doege's bid for the work was $6,150; this and the one of Ed Krohn were the only bids received. Mr. Krohn's bid was $6,100.

AN OLD AND WELL TRIED REMEDY.

DEAR SIR: As most well dressed men are wearing Collegian Clothes, it is more than likely YOU are thoroughly familiar with this popular make of men's apparel. However, we are sending this letter to inform you of the new Spring styles received by us during the past few days. Of course if you have never worn Collegian Clothes, you cannot appreciate them as compared with other makes; but ask any man who knows, and his praises will be for this make. We are showing so many styles that a description would be impossible, but the writer would like to have you drop into the store, when in this vicinity, and let us show you what is fashionable for present wear. You'll be surprised at the prices, too. As to fit, we guarantee every suit bought in this store. We employ only the most expert tailors.

Very respectfully,

LANGSETH MERC. CO.

Effected an Organization.

The joint meeting of the business colleges of this city, and of Grand Forks, Thief River Falls and Fargo, held in this city last Saturday, proved a very successful one. There were a number of delegates from each of the schools and a pleasant day was spent.

The colleges have all decided to work together and help each other in making the schools better, and to make the students more proficient in their work. An association was organized, called the Northwestern Commercial School association, with the following officers:

President—F. L. Watkins, Fargo, N. D.

Vice President—Geo. Thacker, of Grand Forks.

Secretary—J. C. Sathre, Crookston.

Treasurer — Mrs. J. P. Hughes, Crookston.

Executive Committee—H. H. Aaker, Fargo; S. O. Mithun, Crookston; and Oscar A. Naplin, of Thief River Falls.

A delicious dinner was served the guests and an automobile ride had been planned, but on account of the roads could not be taken. The next meeting will be held in Grand Forks next May. —Crookston Times.

On His Initial Trip.

F. R. Wirry, formerly buttermaker and manager for the Crookston creamery, was in the city the first of the week representing J. D. Stout & Co., of New York as butter solicitor, this being his first trip for that concern, having just recently received his appointment. Mr. Wirry will have as his territory all of Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

Had a Bad Accident.

While operating a circular saw at the manual training department at the high school yesterday morning, Wilbor Rice, a senior at the high school, had an accident which resulted in his losing one of his fingers. While adjusting a board to the saw, he got his left hand too close to the blade, which was going full speed, and the result was that his fore finger was severed from his hand and his thumb and middle finger also injured, but it is thought these will be saved.

MEETING TOMORROW NIGHT.

The local Commercial Club meets tomorrow night Friday, May 19, at the club room in the Auditorium building commencing at 8 o'clock sharp. All members are requested to pe present.

White Seal Beer

"It's the Malt." "It's the Hops."

When one's vitality is at low ebb, the doctor says "drink beer."

Your old time family doctor used this prescription frequently and it is still more commonly used by the modern physician.

For two reasons:

First, because the strength giving properties of beer are now more generally recognized by the medical profession than ever before. Second, because the bottling of beer at the brewery renders it much more convenient to use than in the old days of the cumbersome cellar cask.

WHITE SEAL BEER contains barley malt, hops and a tinge of alcohol. The barley is a food, the hops a tonic and the trifle of alcohol an aid to digestion. It is a great combination.

Notice to the Public In Regard to Real Estate Tax Payment

The 1910 Real Estate tax is payable this year at Red Lake Falls, and at Thief River Falls before June 1st. 1911.

At Red Lake Falls the townships or village levy, the school district and state levy is payable together with all special assessments such as are payable to the old county of Red Lake for this year only. All back taxes are also payable to the old county of Red Lake. The Pennington county tax is for county purposes only, 5 mills for county revenue, 2 mills for road and bridge, and 1 mill for bond and interest. A penalty of 10 per cent. will be added to the tax on June 1st. This applies at both places, and the paying of one tax will not save penalty at the other place. If one half of the real estate is paid before June 1st the remaining one half will run to Oct. 31 without penalty. Tax must be for more than one dollar to take advantage of one half payments

Government Hearings.

The evidence in the government case against the homestead of Helen Wilson was taken before U. S. Commissioner Wm. Michelet last Monday afternoon. Special agent L. K. Dillen had charge of the work for the government and Edward T. Hage, of Crookston, acted as stenographer. The hearing in the case of Ole O. Bjorge, deceased, was held last Tuesday and that of Ole T. Flateland yesterday. This afternoon the case of Ole Larde will be heard.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR FEEDING STEERS.

The past winter saw the first sack of cottonseed meal shipped into the section in which the writer lives. It costs laid down $34.50 per ton, which is about a dollar less than the price of linseed oil meal, and this notwithstanding the fact that the chemical analysis shows that the former feed contains nearly 10 per cent more protein than the latter. This makes a cheap and excellent source of protein, while numerous experiments which have been made show that, given in a proper ration with corn, about one to ten, feeding animals do exceptionally well on it. The feeder who is trying this cottonseed meal for the first time is also feeding with it equal parts of alfalfa, which is a prepared feed made of ground alfalfa leaves and stems and molasses. This contains a trifle less than 20 per cent of protein and costs about $5 per ton laid down. Notwithstanding the high price at which they are sold, this use of these protein concentrates makes possible a more economical ration than if corn should be used exclusively.

ADJUST MATTERS

Joint Meeting of County Commissioners Held at Red Lake Falls Monday.

Adjust Matters Between Pennington and Red Lake Counties.

After their regular meeting held here last Monday afternoon the county commissioners left on the afternoon train for Red Lake Falls where they met in joint session with the county dads of Red Lake county that evening and perfected a settlement of affairs between the two counties.

The meeting was harmonious in every respect and the work done proved most desirable and satisfactory to both counties.

This ends the long drawn out and hard fought litigation which resulted in the creation of the new county and has erased any existing differences and everything settled up in a most satisfactory manner for both counties.

It is a fact conceded by all who have ever looked into the interior of a dirty and foul smelling cream separator that while it is a labor saving device its use by any farmer or dairyman who will not take the time and pains to keep it clean should be strongly discouraged. If not kept so, it is one of the foulest things imaginable and a cause of germ laden cream and low quality butter.

In a recent institute which the writer attended the question was raised by one farmer present whether if the Babcock test and weighing of the milk yield of cows were generally introduced there would not be an overproduction of butter. There seems to be very little likelihood of it, for if the test were universally applied close to a third of all the cows in the country would be put out of commission—the star boarders that are making 130 pounds of butter or less and are kept at a loss.

Fruit growers in some sections of the west where smudging has to be resorted to as a safeguard against spring frosts have provided themselves with alarms which are operated automatically by thermometers which set them going when the mercury reaches the danger line. Any one who has hiked out in a shiver on a frosty night every half hour between 10 p. m. and 3 a. m. to consult that old thermometer would quite likely not have to be argued into getting one of these newfangled alarms. They save sleep and nerve force.

There is probably no other single feature connected with the care of the cow during and for several weeks following the time when she brings forth her calf that will do so much to keep her udder in a normal and healthy condition as to see to it that she always has a dry, well bedded place on which to lie at night or in rest times during the day. Investigation into the subject by veterinarians shows that a majority of cases of milk fever are due to carelessness on this one point, through allowing the new milk cow to lie down in cold and damp stables or outdoor places.

Western fruit growers are much interested in a recent decision of the interstate commerce commission, which is that western shippers shall receive the use of refrigerator cars whenever asked without additional cost, it being the opinion of the commissioners that the charges made by the railroads for precooling facilities were unreasonable and unjust. This will undoubtedly save western shippers of perishable fruits thousands of dollars, but just how the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe roads are going to find it remunerative to operate their huge precooling plants, costing more than half a million each, is not so apparent.

Both the quality and quantity of the fruit from the average home garden strawberry bed could be greatly improved were the number of plants allowed to set for bearing reduced by half or more. This would give the plants remaining more room, more light, more fertility to draw on and would thus greatly increase their thriftiness and bearing capacity. Some of the best yields of strawberries on record have been made by beds in which the plants were set closely in the original bed, but allowed to send out no runners whatever, being cultivated according to the hill system, as it is usually known. It is too late now to help beds that are ready to bear, but the bed set this spring for fruiting next year can be so handled as to prevent this crowding and stunting of the plants, while beds that are bearing their first crop this season can be so thinned after the bed is renovated as to bring about the right conditions for next season. If the row system is to be followed in the new bed no more new plants should be allowed to take root than will comfortably fill the row, each plant being allowed a space of seven or eight inches square.

SCHOOL NOTES

The records of the Senior Class of 1911, covering a period of four years of study, have been averaged and the result gives the honor of valedictorian to Olga Aos and that of salutatorian to Wilbur Rice.

Hon. Charles E. Elmquist, one of the state railway commissioners of Minnesota, will deliver the commencement address at the Auditorium on the evening of Friday, June 2. Mr. Elmquist is a favorable speaker and a popular state official as well. The class day exercises will take place in the same building on the preceding evening. These events, of course, will be free to the public.

Some of those connected with the local schools attended the eighth grade graduation exercises at the Copp school last Friday evening.

An examination in entrance English to the state university will be held next Saturday at the Lincoln. This is a state examination and must be taken by all students who purpose entering the university next fall.

The banners, class pins, and other articles which the senior class ordinarly procures for graduation have all been secured from or through local dealers.

The normal students have completed their practice teaching, with the exception of a few who are assisting in the kindergarten rooms which are badly crowded.

Nearly all the classes are engaged in review work this week preparatory to the final examinations. The state examinations will occur this year during the last week of school and all the high school and grammar grade students will write on them. In former years these examinations have taken place the week following the close of school and only those students have written on them who needed the certificates for university entrance or for application of a teacher's certificate.

Wilbur Rice, while at work in the manual training department on Wednesday, was unfortunate enough to bring his left hand into contact with a small circular saw, with the result that he suffered a badly lacerated thumb. No students except the seniors are ever permitted to use this saw and even then under proper restrictions and rarely without the direct supervision and assistance of the instructor, but in spite of these precautions the distressing accident occurred.

BY
F. E. TRIGG
CENTRAL POINT
ROGUE RIVER VALLEY
OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

It is generally conceded that if field beans are planted after the 10th of June the crop will show little or no damage from the weevil.

"Bell the cats and poison the rats" is a slogan that might with profit be carried into execution by every householder, gardener and farmer.

The small boy is interested in things on the well managed farm and a certain amount of manual labor, but he is excusable if his interest wanes a bit on circus day.

Milo maize is an excellent feed for poultry, but, like corn, needs clover, alfalfa or bran to make it a satisfactory egg ration. Maize and wheat, equal parts, with range on an alfalfa pasture should be excellent for egg production.

The more closely poultry is confined the greater the care that should be taken to see that they work and scratch for a good share of their grain ration. Given free range, they get needed exercise; closely confined, they should be provided with it.

If some careful tests which have been made are trustworthy, the benefit derived from an application of quantities of salt to a bed of asparagus is a matter of imagination. However, the same cannot be said of well rotted manure or suitable commercial fertilizers.

Not so very long ago the practice was quite generally followed of feeding little chicks about so much wet cornmeal mush, which in too many cases turned into a sour and most unsavory mess. Now it is conceded that they are better off if they have no moist food at all, needed liquids being taken entirely in the shape of water and milk.

In turning the dairy cow on to pasture it is well to keep in mind the fact that while the new grass is juicy and sweet it has little body and a low per cent of food nutrients. For this reason the grass ration should be supplemented, for a time at least, with silage and clover or alfalfa and some grain. In the case of heavy milkers it is well to feed some grain throughout the pasture season.

An egg sucking dog can be cured of the habit by giving the offender an egg doped with ipecac. This is done by making a small hole in one end, removing a part of the white and putting in the place of it half a teaspoonful of the powdered drug. This should be mixed with contents of the egg by means of a small stick or wire, the egg wiped off, hole pasted over with a bit of muslin and left where the "sucker" can get at it.

The gracious companionship of a beautiful Easter lily has revealed an interesting fact in connection with its blossoming habit. We have noticed that of the eight or ten blossoms on this two stalk plant those provided with anthers (polen pods) are uniformly more vigorous and longer lived than those blossoms having the filaments only. The same principle seems also to hold in the case of some other plants and to domestic animals under certain conditions.

The department of agriculture has sent out notice of the importation within the past few months of 370,000 pounds of Chilean clover seed, all of which contains seed of dodder in such quantity that 450 dodder seeds will be scattered to each square rod of the 40,000 acres on which the seed will be sowed. The seed in question has been distributed in the southern part of the clover belt, where favorable conditions will make the dodder very destructive to the clover plants. The seed is said to be plump and fine looking and about 50 per cent larger in size than ordinary clover seed.

That the Panama canal is going to have a vital bearing on transcontinental and world transportation problems, besides proving a feather in Uncle Sam's cap as a doer of big things, is nicely shown in a movement which has already been put afoot looking to the making of Portland, Ore., the great shipping point of the fruits grown in the Pacific northwest. At this point ocean freighters are to be loaded with the fine boxed fruits for southern and Atlantic coast points and for the big markets of England, France and Germany. The water route from Portland to New York via Cape Horn is now approximately 15,200 miles. By the short cut through the Panama canal it will be but 4,220 miles. It goes without saying that when this ocean route is opened transcontinental roads will lower rates at all competitive points.

SHOULD PLAY SAFE.

A reader of these notes living at Princeton, Ind., writes making inquiry as to the suitability of a certain western valley lately opened up for fruit growing and asking if this particular valley was included in a reference which recently appeared in these columns, suggesting that it would be well for the postoffice department to round up the large company of real estate swindlers who are separating unsuspecting people from hundreds of thousands of their hard earned dollars. Yes; some of these same sharpers are already at work in the valley referred to, and it would be well for intending purchasers to use due caution. As has been stated repeatedly in these notes, there are several things that buyers of fruit land in a new country should do. First, find out from the horticultural experts at the state agricultural college whether a given valley or section in such state is adapted to the raising of the fruits which real estate agents claim it is; secondly, if in a dry country, find out what the rainfall is from the nearest government weather station and whether if needed water for irrigation can be had at that season of the year when most needed—July and August; thirdly, whether the district is subject to frosts during blossom time; fourthly, whether the soil is sufficiently deep and suited to fruit growing, and, lastly, whether the men backing a given orchard promotion proposition are honest men who expect to continue residents of the locality or are downright knaves who will light out for greener pastures when they have extracted from the confiding buyer his hard earned coin. Many a reader will say to himself, "Oh, this is too much bother, and, besides, if we take the time to look up all of these points the land is likely to advance in value so fast that we will be heavy losers as a result." In reply to such a statement the writer would still urge the prospective buyer to use the greatest caution on all of the points mentioned, for it's a whole lot cheaper to spend a few dollars in car fare, board and livery bills than to tie up a property which may be worth little or nothing and which could not be sold later for love or money. It is so easy to fall a victim of the land and dollar lust, to let eagerness run away with judgment and greed outvoice good sense. Because of this we caution our readers who may be thinking of investing in fruit land in a new country to keep their eyes open and play safe.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

When a dairyman runs afoul of contagious abortion he's up against a bacterial snag of the stiffest kind. This means that the stables and other quarters where such cows have been kept must be thoroughly cleaned, sprayed with a 1 to 1,000 solution of corrosive sublimate and whitewashed. In the course of a week or ten days the quarters should be given another spraying with the corrosive sublimate. All suspected cows should be separated from the well ones, and those that have lost their calves should be washed out daily with a 1 per cent solution of creolin or lysol, the treatment being continued until all discharges stop. Pregnant cows should be given a tablespoonful of sodium hyposulphite daily in the form of a drench. If cows abort in pasture or feed lot the fetus and all accompanying matter should be burned or buried deep and the spot heavily limed and the cow immediately disinfected, as above indicated. Bulls that have been in an aborting herd should not be allowed with healthy cows, but should be disinfected by the same method prescribed for the cows.

21,000 BUSHELS OF BUGS.

One of the most thorough bird students of New England has recently compiled some statistics that will be intensely interesting to bird lovers and should cause many who have been indifferent to the insect problem and deaf to arguments in favor of bird protection pause and ponder. By carefully estimating the number of birds found in several areas in the Bay State he concludes that there are not less than five insect eating birds per acre. This means that on the 8,000 square miles of area Massachusetts has a bird population of 25,600,000. On the assumption that each bird consumes on an average of 100 insects daily—and this is conservative—it means that the combined force of birds consumes the huge total of 2,560,000,000 insects daily. Assuming, as this authority does, that 120,000 insects will fill a bushel measure, the daily ration of this company of birds is 21,000 bushels! This for Massachusetts. What would the figures be for the country as a whole?

THE PROFIT IN SPRAYING.

The Nebraska experiment station has answered quite effectively the question, "Does it pay to spray?" In experiments which have been conducted in different localities in the state during the past five years. A bulletin recently issued containing a summary of these experiments shows that the average net gain per acre as a result of spraying trees was $64.55 after deducting the cost of spraying. It was found that sprayed trees yielded 220 bushels per acre of marketable fruit and fifty five bushels of culls and windfalls, while unsprayed trees produced per acre ninety bushels of marketable fruit and eighty five bushels of culls and windfalls.

WELL RECEIVED EVERYWHERE

Professor Svante Arrhenius, Noted Swedish Scientist, Now Touring the United States—Norwegians Desire American Squadron to Visit That Country—Race for South Pole Attracting Attention in Scandinavia.

SWEDEN.

Professor Svante Arrhenius, the Swedish chemist and scientist, is well received wherever he appears in this country. After giving a series of lectures at Lowell Institute in Boston, Mass., he started west and has given lectures in Rock Island, Ill., and Chicago. He also appeared at the University of Minnesota, where he delivered a most interesting lecture before the student body. He was later given a banquet at the Odin club in Minneapolis. In all learned circles in the world the name of Arrhenius looms high and he today ranks foremost as one of the world's greatest chemists. He was born in Uppland, Sweden, in 1859. After taking his college degree he became a doctor of philosophy in 1884 and was engaged as teacher of chemistry and physics at the Stockholm university. He is now general director of the department of physics and chemistry at the Noble Institute in Stockholm. In 1903 he was awarded the Nobel prize for chemistry. He has written a comprehensive work entitled "The Origin of the Worlds," which has been translated into a number of languages and which has attracted a great deal of attention among scientists the world over. Professor Arrhenius has for some time ardently combatted the theory that the planet Mars is inhabited. He believes that Mars is an immense desert and therefore not habitable. His visit to this country is attracting considerable attention and he has been particularly well received by his countrymen here.

Swedish servant girls do not ask for little here below. This is particularly true of the servant girls in Stockholm, who all seem to be in clover and able almost to dictate their own terms. Says a Swedish writer: "If a girl advertises for a family place in Stockholm she may be sure to have from thirty to forty offers and if she gives her telephone number anxious housewives will stand on tiptoe listening to the terms dictated by the girl. Among the ordinary terms may be mentioned: From $5 to $7 a month in cash (that by the way means 28 crowns a month), much time off during the week, a summer vacation, and no evening work. Many girls are willing to work only for families of two persons. If they are told there are children in the family they very often answer that they do not figure on such positions."

Scandinavian, especially Swedish students of song lore, are greatly interested in the Swedish troubadour, Torkel Scholander, who is making a tour through the cities of the Northwest, giving a program of Scandinavian, German, French and English ballads and lyrics and accompanying himself on that strange little instrument known as the lute. Herr Scholander belongs to a family distinguished in Sweden for its development of national cultural ideals and to his father belongs much of the credit for reviving the art of singing the songs of the lute, as was the custom in days gone by. The singer has been flatteringly commented upon in all the cities which he has visited and in Chicago he made a decided hit some time ago.

Augustana College at Rock Island, Ill., Gustavus college at St. Peter, Minn., and Bethany college at Lindsborg, Kan., which are the three largest Swedish-American colleges in this country, will all hold their commencement exercises within a few weeks. Special programs will be rendered and prominent national speakers will deliver addresses.

During the vacancy caused by the removal of Dr. L. A. Johnston to St. Paul, Minn., the First Swedish church in Moline, Ill., is being served by Rev. Henry O. Lindeblad, who was pastor of that congregation thirty-two years ago and who is now working in the interests of the Porto Rico mission among the Augustana Lutheran churches in this country.

The 300th anniversary of the printing of the King James version of the English Bible was celebrated at a special service in the College chapel at Augustana college in Rock Island, Ill., recently. Addresses were delivered by Drs. Youngert, Bartholomew and Blomgren.

Engineer Brer Orton, employed by the Swedish government for the past year in studying mines and mining in the United States, is making a tour of the Western states at present.

The Lutheran Augustana synod will meet in Duluth this year.

NORWAY.

It is proposed that three ships of the American squadron visit Bergen on its trip to Europe. The Kristiania Verdens Gang makes some curious comments on this plan. Why not visit Kristiania? Such a visit would be a token of the good feelings existing between the two countries. Then the paper proceeds to give the following explanation: The competitive struggle seems to be dragging Norway into the swirl of international political calculations and in case of naval war between the two powers the waters off Bergen are very apt to be the scene of the decisive clash between the two navies. "The North American navy," says the paper, "numbers among its officers the greatest of the naval strategists of our day, Admiral Mahon, and this explains why Bergen is preferred to Kristiania. The numerous officers of the battleships shall have a chance to make a preliminary study of the future theater of war, which Germany is plowing through with her best ships and men."

The Daily News of London states that King Haakon and Queen Maud desire that their son Olaf, the present crown prince of Norway, should be educated at a college in England, but the suggestion has already met with a vigorous protest on the part of Norwegian ministers and statesmen, who contend that the crown prince is naturally to be educated in Norway. They contend that it will not do to allow a future king of Norway to be educated in a foreign country and it is natural that they have the people with them in their contention. However, the king and queen will decide the matter at their next visit to England, when the little crown prince will accompany them.

Ole Bull's second wife, the late Madame Sara Bull, left a decidedly peculiar will in Boston, where she made her home. She, in the first place, expressed the wish that her ashes should be sent to the native city of her distinguished husband, which is Bergen, and where now rest his remains. Her will has occasioned much comment in Norway and the relatives of Ole Bull are very much displeased over it all. The Bull children of the first marriage have entered a most decided protest and have made an appeal to the city authorities of Bergen to have the wishes of the second wife expressed in her will entirely ignored.

Five Christiania students intend to make the trip to the Normandy celebration in Rouen, France, in an old fashioned, but rather large rowboat, which was used in the time of the Vikings. The boat will be known as the "Viking ship" and when it arrives at Havre, France, the students will take in a few more passengers. Professor Yngvar Nielsen has been taking up a subscription list for the students so that they can secure the necessary equipment for the long and perhaps hazardous journey.

During the latter part of this month King Haakon and Queen Maud will pay a visit to the royal court at St. Petersburg, where they will be the guests of the czar and czarina. The Russian czar, accompanied by the czarina, will pay a return visit to King Haakon and Queen Maud in Christiania on or about June 20. The Norwegians are not, according to recent advices from Christiania, very enthusiastic about the czar's visit.

In the French city of Rouen there will, in the near future, be celebrated the 1,000th anniversary of the duchy of Normandy. Scandinavians of course have an abiding interest in historic old Normandy, for the Scandinavian race 1,000 years ago played a significant role in the formation of that historic little duchy.

DENMARK.

The race between the Antarctic expeditions under Captain Scott and Captain Roald Amundsen for the South pole is attracting much attention in Copenhagen and is the subject of much comment in the press of Scandinavia. Dr. Rensch, president of the Norwegian Geographical society, speaking with regard to Amundsen's chances, states that he can surmount the difficulties of reaching the pole if he is able to get his dogs safely over the equator and its torrid heat. This is the main point; but he must also start under the same conditions as those found by the expeditions under Sir Ernest Shakleton and Captain Scott. Professor Mohn, a great polar expert, agrees with Dr. Nansen that it will certainly be impossible to reach the South pole from Cape Adare and that Amundsen has made a mistake in not going by some other route than that followed by the British Antarctic expedition.

The American-Scandinavian Foundation was made the residuary recently of Nils Poulsen, president of the Heckla iron works and reputed to be many times a millionaire, in his will filed in New York city. Mr. Poulsen's housekeeper, Nicolene Christensen, was left $50,000 and his furniture, books, manuscripts and art works, and his stenographer, Annie Brush, was given $20,000. His $300,000 mansion in Brooklyn is bequeathed to William Dickman, who is named as one of the executors of the will.

It is said that the Danish labor organizations sent millions of their savings to Swedish banks before the lock out because they thought that under the circumstances it might be safer to keep the money in that country.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state highway commission has divided Minnesota into forty districts and appointed twelve district highway engineers in accordance with the R. C. Dunn bill passed by the recent legislature. It is planned to have an engineer in each district by Aug. 1. From two to four counties are included in each division. Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties are left out of the district arrangement, the law providing that if a county has a highway engineer or other competent supervision of highways, a district engineer need not be appointed.

St. Paul has formally barred married women and widows as teachers in its public schools. This policy was virtually enforced for years by the St. Paul school board. The rule reads: "No married lady or widow shall be eligible to be appointed a regular teacher in the St. Paul schools; provided, a widow who has formerly served as teacher in the city schools shall be deemed eligible to reappointment by meeting otherwise the eligibility rules.

Members of the Minnesota State Holstein-Friesian association will attend the second May meeting of the association at Owatonna, Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20. Officers have arranged for a comprehensive program of papers by leading dairy authorities of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and New York, and about 250 are expected to attend the convention, some to come from neighboring states.

George Ralph, state drainage engineer, returned to St. Paul from a ten-days' trip over Northern Minnesota, visiting Roseau, Kittson and Marshall counties, where the state has begun the operation of twenty dredges, which, when in full blast, are expected to excavate 40,000 yards each in a month. This work will mean an expenditure by the state of at least $80,000 a month.

With a sensational catalogue of allegations, Homer C. Carey, a traveling man of Stillwater, brought suit in the Ramsey county district court against William Kaiser, a wealthy lumberman of the same place, for $50,000, alleging the alienation of his wife's affections. All three principals in the case are well known in Stillwater, where they have lived for several years.

The Commercial club of Bemidji has adopted resolutions condemning the printing in many of the large city papers of lurid, false and libelous reports of alleged forest fires in Northern Minnesota and has sent copies of the same to every commercial club in the northern portion of the state.

A soldier's monument will be dedicated on the courthouse grounds at Marshall on Memorial day. It is said to be one of the finest monuments in the state and will cost $5,000. Governor Eberhart will make the dedicatory and memorial oration.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Active steps for the trial of 800 alleged Indian land fraud cases will be taken May 23 in the United States district court at Fergus Falls, when a master in chancery probably will be appointed to take the testimony. This work will last all summer or longer and some of the cases will be ready for submission to the district court next fall.

The body of Mrs. William Jacche of Minneapolis, who had been ill for years, was found in a cistern under the kitchen of her home. Mr. Jacche told the coroner that his wife had been ill and despondent for a long time. She was a sufferer from rheumatism.

Driven into insanity through grief over the death of her child Mrs. Effie Haney, twenty-eight years old, of Duluth, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank Stanley, at East Providence, R. I.

The cave-in of a trench in which thirty men were working at Minneapolis caused the death of Alexander Glass, a laborer. The concerted efforts of his fellow employes to save the man proved vain.

Ole Johnson, residing with his parents six miles from Rushford, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. He was about thirty years old and had been in poor health.

A fire which started from a bolt of lightning burned the homes of Peter Olsen, M. Linberg and Mike Iverson at Duluth. For a time the blaze threatened a large portion of the hill side.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Mary C. Hintliff, wife of Gershom Hintliff and a territorial pioneer, is dead at Minneapolis, aged seventy-five years. She had been a resident of Minneapolis for forty years and of the state for fifty-six years.

Mrs. R. A. Rice, eighty-two years old, is dead at Minneapolis. She was the widow of Daniel Rice, a member of Company K, Second Minnesota cavalry.

William Thompson, one of St. Paul's oldest settlers, is dead, aged eighty six. Mr. Thompson arrived at St. Paul direct from Ireland in April, 1851.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Simonson and Laura Simonson, his wife as mortgagors to Peter Kiene of Dubuque, Iowa as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southeast quarter of section twelve, township one hundred fifty-four, north, range forty five, west of the fifth principal meridian and containing one hundred sixty acres according to government survey; now situated in Pennington county, Minnesota.

Which said mortgage bears date April 23, 1907 and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county, on April 26th, 1907 at 11:30 A. M. in Book 10 of Mortgages at page 406, and

Whereas the said Peter Kiene by an instrument in writing dated May 1, 1907 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on May 14, 1907 in Book 32 of Mortgages at page 521, assigned said mortgage to Louis Kupferschmidt, and

Whereas in proceedings duly had for that purpose pursuant to the laws of the state of Minnesota, the land described in said mortgage and herein above described became a part of a new county organized on or about November 26, 1910 and known and called Pennington County, and

Whereas the said Louis Kupferschmidt by an instrument in writing dated May 2, 1911 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Pennington County on the 10th day of May, 1911 in Book 9 of mortgages at page 111 duly reassigned said mortgage to said Peter Kiene who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest the sum of nine hundred one dollars and fifty eight cents and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained and the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction for cash by the sheriff of the county of Pennington in the state of Minnesota at the front door of the Auditorium Building in the city of Thief River Falls, in said Pennington county on Saturday June 24, 1911 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof including an attorney's fee of fifty dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication May 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 10th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of Mortgages on page 470. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 26th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of Mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 10th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz: The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

BY
F. E. TRIGG
CENTRAL POINT
ROGUE RIVER VALLEY
OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

It is generally conceded that if field beans are planted after the 10th of June the crop will show little or no damage from the weevil.

"Bell the cats and poison the rats" is a slogan that might with profit be carried into execution by every householder, gardener and farmer.

The small boy is interested in things on the well managed farm and a certain amount of manual labor, but he is excusable if his interest wanes a bit on circus day.

Milo maize is an excellent feed for poultry, but, like corn, needs clover, alfalfa or bran to make it a satisfactory egg ration. Maize and wheat, equal parts, with range on an alfalfa pasture should be excellent for egg production.

The more closely poultry is confined the greater the care that should be taken to see that they work and scratch for a good share of their grain ration. Given free range, they get needed exercise; closely confined, they should be provided with it.

If some careful tests which have been made are trustworthy, the benefit derived from an application of quantities of salt to a bed of asparagus is a matter of imagination. However, the same cannot be said of well rotted manure or suitable commercial fertilizers.

Not so very long ago the practice was quite generally followed of feeding little chicks about so much wet cornmeal mush, which in too many cases turned into a sour and most unsavory mess. Now it is conceded that they are better off if they have no moist food at all, needed liquids being taken entirely in the shape of water and milk.

In turning the dairy cow on to pasture it is well to keep in mind the fact that while the new grass is juicy and sweet it has little body and a low per cent of food nutrients. For this reason the grass ration should be supplemented, for a time at least, with silage and clover or alfalfa and some grain. In the case of heavy milkers it is well to feed some grain throughout the pasture season.

An egg sucking dog can be cured of the habit by giving the offender an egg doped with ipecac. This is done by making a small hole in one end, removing a part of the white and putting in the place of it half a teaspoonful of the powdered drug. This should be mixed with contents of the egg by means of a small stick or wire, the egg wiped off, hole pasted over with a bit of muslin and left where the "sucker" can get at it.

The gracious companionship of a beautiful Easter lily has revealed an interesting fact in connection with its blossoming habit. We have noticed that of the eight or ten blossoms on this two stalk plant those provided with anthers (polen pods) are uniformly more vigorous and longer lived than those blossoms having the filaments only. The same principle seems also to hold in the case of some other plants and to domestic animals under certain conditions.

The department of agriculture has sent out notice of the importation within the past few months of 370,000 pounds of Chilean clover seed, all of which contains seed of dodder in such quantity that 450 dodder seeds will be scattered to each square rod of the 46,000 acres on which the seed will be sowed. The seed in question has been distributed in the southern part of the clover belt, where favorable conditions will make the dodder very destructive to the clover plants. The seed is said to be plump and fine looking and about 50 per cent larger in size than ordinary clover seed.

That the Panama canal is going to have a vital bearing on transcontinental and world transportation problems, besides proving a feather in Uncle Sam's cap as a doer of big things, is nicely shown in a movement which has already been put afoot looking to the making of Portland, Ore., the great shipping point of the fruits grown in the Pacific northwest. At this point ocean freighters are to be loaded with the fine boxed fruits for southern and Atlantic coast points and for the big markets of England, France and Germany. The water route from Portland to New York via Cape Horn is now approximately 15,200 miles. By the short cut through the Panama canal it will be but 4,220 miles. It goes without saying that when this ocean route is opened transcontinental roads will lower rates at all competitive points.

SHOULD PLAY SAFE.

A reader of these notes living at Princeton, Ind., writes making inquiry as to the suitability of a certain western valley lately opened up for fruit growing and asking if this particular valley was included in a reference which recently appeared in these columns, suggesting that it would be well for the postoffice department to round up the large company of real estate swindlers who are separating unsuspecting people from hundreds of thousands of their hard earned dollars. Yes; some of these same sharpers are already at work in the valley referred to, and it would be well for intending purchasers to use due caution. As has been stated repeatedly in these notes, there are several things that buyers of fruit land in a new country should do. First, find out from the horticultural experts at the state agricultural college whether a given valley or section in such state is adapted to the raising of the fruits which real estate agents claim it is; secondly, if in a dry country, find out what the rainfall is from the nearest government weather station and whether if needed water for irrigation can be had at that season of the year when most needed—July and August; thirdly, whether the district is subject to frosts during blossom time; fourthly, whether the soil is sufficiently deep and suited to fruit growing, and, lastly, whether the men backing a given orchard promotion proposition are honest men who expect to continue residents of the locality or are downright knaves who will light out for greener pastures when they have extracted from the confiding buyer his hard earned coin. Many a reader will say to himself, "Oh, this is too much bother, and, besides, if we take the time to look up all of these points the land is likely to advance in value so fast that we will be heavy losers as a result." In reply to such a statement the writer would still urge the prospective buyer to use the greatest caution on all of the points mentioned, for it's a whole lot cheaper to spend a few dollars in car fare, board and livery bills than to tie up a property which may be worth little or nothing and which could not be sold later for love or money. It is so easy to fall a victim of the land and dollar lust, to let eagerness run away with judgment and greed outvoice good sense. Because of this we caution our readers who may be thinking of investing in fruit land in a new country to keep their eyes open and play safe.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

When a dairyman runs afoul of contagious abortion he's up against a bacterial snag of the stiffest kind. This means that the stables and other quarters where such cows have been kept must be thoroughly cleaned, sprayed with a 1 to 1,000 solution of corrosive sublimate and whitewashed. In the course of a week or ten days the quarters should be given another spraying with the corrosive sublimate. All suspected cows should be separated from the well ones, and those that have lost their calves should be washed out daily with a 1 per cent solution of creolin or lysol, the treatment being continued untill all discharges stop. Pregnant cows should be given a tablespoonful of sodium hyposulphite daily in the form of a drench. If cows abort in pasture or feed lot the fetus and all accompanying matter should be burned or buried deep and the spot heavily limed and the cow immediately disinfected, as above indicated. Bulls that have been in an aborting herd should not be allowed with healthy cows, but should be disinfected by the same method prescribed for the cows.

21,000 BUSHELS OF BUGS.

One of the most thorough bird students of New England has recently compiled some statistics that will be intensely interesting to bird lovers and should cause many who have been indifferent to the insect problem and deaf to arguments in favor of bird protection pause and ponder. By carefully estimating the number of birds found in several areas in the Bay State he concludes that there are not less than five insect eating birds per acre. This means that on the 8,000 square miles of area Massachusetts has a bird population of 25,600,000. On the assumption that each bird consumes on an average of 100 insects daily—and this is conservative—it means that the combined force of birds consumes the huge total of 2,500,000,000 insects daily. Assuming, as this authority does, that 120,000 insects will fill a bushel measure, the daily ration of this company of birds is 21,000 bushels! This for Massachusetts. What would the figures be for the country as a whole?

THE PROFIT IN SPRAYING.

The Nebraska experiment station has answered quite effectively the question, "Does it pay to spray?" in experiments which have been conducted in different localities in the state during the past five years. A bulletin recently issued containing a summary of these experiments shows that the average net gain per acre as a result of spraying trees was $64.25 after deducting the cost of spraying. It was found that sprayed trees yielded 220 bushels per acre of marketable fruit and fifty-five bushels of culls and windf[illegible], while unsprayed trees produced per acre ninety bushels of marketable fruit and eighty five bushels of culls and windfalls.

Professor Svante Arrhenius, the Swedish chemist and scientist, is well received wherever he appears in this country. After giving a series of lectures at Lowell Institute in Boston, Mass., he started west and has given lectures in Rock Island, Ill., and Chicago. He also appeared at the University of Minnesota, where he delivered a most interesting lecture before the student body. He was later given a banquet at the Odin club in Minneapolis. In all learned circles in the world the name of Arrhenius looms high and he today ranks foremost as one of the world's greatest chemists. He was born in Uppland, Sweden, in 1859. After taking his college degree he became a doctor of philosophy in 1884 and was engaged as teacher of chemistry and physics at the Stockholm university. He is now general director of the department of physics and chemistry at the Noble Institute in Stockholm. In 1903 he was awarded the Nobel prize for chemistry. He has written a comprehensive work entitled "The Origin of the Worlds," which has been translated into a number of languages and which has attracted a great deal of attention among scientists the world over. Professor Arrhenius has for some time ardently combatted the theory that the planet Mars is inhabited. He believes that Mars is an immense desert and therefore not habitable. His visit to this country is attracting considerable attention and he has been particularly well received by his countrymen here.

It is proposed that three ships of the American squadron visit Bergen on its trip to Europe. The Kristiania Verdens Gang makes some curious comments on this plan. Why not visit Kristiania? Such a visit would be a token of the good feelings existing between the two countries. Then the paper proceeds to give the following explanation: The competitive struggle seems to be dragging Norway into the swirl of international political calculations and in case of naval war between the two powers the waters off Bergen are very apt to be the scene of the decisive clash between the two navies. "The North American navy," says the paper, "numbers among its officers the greatest of the naval strategists of our day, Admiral Mahon, and this explains why Bergen is preferred to Kristiania. The numerous officers of the battleships shall have a chance to make a preliminary study of the future theater of war, which Germany is plowing through with her best ships and men."

The Daily News of London states that King Haakon and Queen Maud desire that their son Olaf, the present crown prince of Norway, should be educated at a college in England, but the suggestion has already met with a vigorous protest on the part of Norwegian ministers and statesmen, who contend that the crown prince is naturally to be educated in Norway. They contend that it will not do to allow a future king of Norway to be educated in a foreign country and it is natural that they have the people with them in their contention. However, the king and queen will decide the matter at their next visit to England, when the little crown prince will accompany them.

Ole Bull's second wife, the late Madame Sara Bull, left a decidedly peculiar will in Boston, where she made her home. She, in the first place, expressed the wish that her ashes should be sent to the native city of her distinguished husband, which is Bergen, and where now rest his remains. Her will has occasioned much comment in Norway and the relatives of Ole Bull are very much displeased over it all. The Bull children of the first marriage have entered a most decided protest and have made an appeal to the city authorities of Bergen to have the wishes of the second wife expressed in her will entirely ignored.

Five Christiania students intend to make the trip to the Normandy celebration in Rouen, France, in an old fashioned, but rather large rowboat, which was used in the time of the Vikings. The boat will be known as the "Viking ship" and when it arrives at Havre, France, the students will take in a few more passengers. Professor Yngvar Nielsen has been taking up a subscription list for the students so that they can secure the necessary equipment for the long and perhaps hazardous journey.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state highway commission has divided Minnesota into forty districts and appointed twelve district highway engineers in accordance with the R. C. Dunn bill passed by the recent legislature. It is planned to have an engineer in each district by Aug. 1. From two to four counties are included in each division. Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties are left out of the district arrangement, the law providing that if a county has a highway engineer or other competent supervision of highways, a district engineer need not be appointed.

St. Paul has formally barred married women and widows as teachers in its public schools. This policy was virtually enforced for years by the St. Paul school board. The rule reads: "No married lady or widow shall be eligible to be appointed a regular teacher in the St. Paul schools; provided, a widow who has formerly served as teacher in the city schools shall be deemed eligible to reappointment by meeting otherwise the eligibility rules.

Members of the Minnesota State Holstein-Friesian association will attend the second May meeting of the association at Owatonna, Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20. Officers have arranged for a comprehensive program of papers by leading dairy authorities of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and New York, and about 250 are expected to attend the convention, some to come from neighboring states.

George Ralph, state drainage engineer, returned to St. Paul from a ten-days' trip over Northern Minnesota, visiting Roseau, Kittson and Marshall counties, where the state has begun the operation of twenty dredges, which, when in full blast, are expected to excavate 40,000 yards each in a month. This work will mean an expenditure by the state of at least $80,000 a month.

With a sensational catalogue of allegations, Homer C. Carey, a traveling man of Stillwater, brought suit in the Ramsey county district court against William Kaiser, a wealthy lumberman of the same place, for $50,000, alleging the alienation of his wife's affections. All three principals in the case are well known in Stillwater, where they have lived for several years.

The Commercial club of Bemidji has adopted resolutions condemning the printing in many of the large city papers of lurid, false and libelous reports of alleged forest fires in Northern Minnesota and has sent copies of the same to every commercial club in the northern portion of the state.

A soldier's monument will be dedicated on the courthouse grounds at Marshall on Memorial day. It is said to be one of the finest monuments in the state and will cost $5,000. Governor Eberhart will make the dedicatory and memorial oration.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Active steps for the trial of 800 alleged Indian land fraud cases will be taken May 23 in the United States district court at Fergus Falls, when a master in chancery probably will be appointed to take the testimony. This work will last all summer or longer and some of the cases will be ready for submission to the district court next fall.

The body of Mrs. William Jacche of Minneapolis, who had been ill for years, was found in a cistern under the kitchen of her home. Mr. Jacche told the coroner that his wife had been ill and despondent for a long time. She was a sufferer from rheumatism.

Driven into insanity through grief over the death of her child Mrs. Effie Haney, twenty-eight years old, of Duluth, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank Stanley, at East Providence, R. I.

The cave-in of a trench in which thirty men were working at Minneapolis caused the death of Alexander Glass, a laborer. The concerted efforts of his fellow employes to save the man proved vain.

Ole Johnson, residing with his parents six miles from Rushford, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. He was about thirty years old and had been in poor health.

A fire which started from a bolt of lightning burned the homes of Peter Olson, M. Linberg and Mike Iverson at Duluth. For a time the blaze threatened a large portion of the hill side.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Mary C. Bintliff, wife of Gershom Bintliff and a territorial pioneer, is dead at Minneapolis, aged seventy five years. She had been a resident of Minneapolis for forty years and of the state for fifty-six years.

Mrs R. A. Rice, eighty-two years old, is dead at Minneapolis. She was the widow of Daniel Rice, a member of Company K, Second Minnesota cavalry.

William Thompson, one of St. Paul's oldest settlers, is dead, aged eighty six. Mr. Thompson arrived at St. Paul direct from Ireland in April, 1851.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication May 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 28th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 7 of Mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:
The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue; to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN
BY F. E. TRIGG
CENTRAL POINT ROGUE RIVER VALLEY OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

It is generally conceded that if field beans are planted after the 10th of June the crop will show little or no damage from the weevil.

"Bell the cats and poison the rats" is a slogan that might with profit be carried into execution by every householder, gardener and farmer.

The small boy is interested in things on the well managed farm and a certain amount of manual labor, but he is excusable if his interest wanes a bit on circus day.

Milo maize is an excellent feed for poultry, but, like corn, needs clover, alfalfa or bran to make it a satisfactory egg ration. Maize and wheat, equal parts, with range on an alfalfa pasture should be excellent for egg production.

The more closely poultry is confined the greater the care that should be taken to see that they work and scratch for a good share of their grain ration. Given free range, they get needed exercise; closely confined, they should be provided with it.

If some careful tests which have been made are trustworthy, the benefit derived from an application of quantities of salt to a bed of asparagus is a matter of imagination. However, the same cannot be said of well rotted manure or suitable commercial fertilizers.

Not so very long ago the practice was quite generally followed of feeding little chicks about so much wet cornmeal mush, which in too many cases turned into a sour and most unsavory mess. Now it is conceded that they are better off if they have no moist food at all, needed liquids being taken entirely in the shape of water and milk.

In turning the dairy cow on to pasture it is well to keep in mind the fact that while the new grass is juicy and sweet it has little body and a low per cent of food nutrients. For this reason the grass ration should be supplemented, for a time at least, with silage and clover or alfalfa and some grain. In the case of heavy milkers it is well to feed some grain throughout the pasture season.

An egg sucking dog can be cured of the habit by giving the offender an egg doped with ipecac. This is done by making a small hole in one end, removing a part of the white and putting in the place of it half a teaspoonful of the powdered drug. This should be mixed with contents of the egg by means of a small stick or wire, the egg wiped off, hole pasted over with a bit of muslin and left where the "sucker" can get at it.

The gracious companionship of a beautiful Easter lily has revealed an interesting fact in connection with its blossoming habit. We have noticed that of the eight or ten blossoms on this two stalk plant those provided with anthers (polen pods) are uniformly more vigorous and longer lived than those blossoms having the filaments only. The same principle seems also to hold in the case of some other plants and to domestic animals under certain conditions.

The department of agriculture has sent out notice of the importation within the past few months of 370,000 pounds of Chilean clover seed, all of which contains seed of dodder in such quantity that 450 dodder seeds will be scattered to each square rod of the 46,000 acres on which the seed will be sowed. The seed in question has been distributed in the southern part of the clover belt, where favorable conditions will make the dodder very destructive to the clover plants. The seed is said to be plump and fine looking and about 50 per cent larger in size than ordinary clover seed.

That the Panama canal is going to have a vital bearing on transcontinental and world transportation problems, besides proving a feather in Uncle Sam's cap as a doer of big things, is nicely shown in a movement which has already been put afoot looking to the making of Portland, Ore., the great shipping point of the fruits grown in the Pacific northwest. At this point ocean freighters are to be loaded with the fine boxed fruits for southern and Atlantic coast points and for the big markets of England, France and Germany. The water route from Portland to New York via Cape Horn is now approximately 13,200 miles. By the short cut through the Panama canal it will be but 4,220 miles. It goes without saying that when this ocean route is opened transcontinental roads will lower rates at all competitive points.

SHOULD PLAY SAFE.

A reader of these notes living at Princeton, Ind., writes making inquiry as to the suitability of a certain western valley lately opened up for fruit growing and asking if this particular valley was included in a reference which recently appeared in these columns, suggesting that it would be well for the postoffice department to round up the large company of real estate swindlers who are separating unsuspecting people from hundreds of thousands of their hard earned dollars. Yes; some of these same sharpers are already at work in the valley referred to, and it would be well for intending purchasers to use due caution. As has been stated repeatedly in these notes, there are several things that buyers of fruit land in a new country should do. First, find out from the horticultural experts at the state agricultural college whether a given valley or section in such state is adapted to the raising of the fruits which real estate agents claim it is; secondly, if in a dry country, find out what the rainfall is from the nearest government weather station and whether if needed water for irrigation can be had at that season of the year when most needed—July and August; thirdly, whether the district is subject to frosts during blossom time; fourthly, whether the soil is sufficiently deep and suited to fruit growing, and, lastly, whether the men backing a given orchard promotion proposition are honest men who expect to continue residents of the locality or are downright knaves who will light out for greener pastures when they have extracted from the confiding buyer his hard earned coin. Many a reader will say to himself, "Oh, this is too much bother, and, besides, if we take the time to look up all of these points the land is likely to advance in value so fast that we will be heavy losers as a result." In reply to such a statement the writer would still urge the prospective buyer to use the greatest caution on all of the points mentioned, for it's a whole lot cheaper to spend a few dollars in car fare, board and livery bills than to tie up a property which may be worth little or nothing and which could not be sold later for love or money. It is so easy to fall a victim of the land and dollar lust, to let eagerness run away with judgment and greed outvoice good sense. Because of this we caution our readers who may be thinking of investing in fruit land in a new country to keep their eyes open and play safe.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

When a dairyman runs afoul of contagious abortion he's up against a bacterial snag of the stiffest kind. This means that the stables and other quarters where such cows have been kept must be thoroughly cleaned, sprayed with a 1 to 1,000 solution of corrosive sublimate and whitewashed. In the course of a week or ten days the quarters should be given another spraying with the corrosive sublimate. All suspected cows should be separated from the well ones, and those that have lost their calves should be washed out daily with a 1 per cent solution of creolin or lysol, the treatment being continued untill all discharges stop. Pregnant cows should be given a tablespoonful of sodium hyposulphite daily in the form of a drench. If cows abort in pasture or feed lot the fetus and all accompanying matter should be burned or buried deep and the spot heavily limed and the cow immediately disinfected, as above indicated. Bulls that have been in an aborting herd should not be allowed with healthy cows, but should be disinfected by the same method prescribed for the cows.

21,000 BUSHELS OF BUGS.

One of the most thorough bird students of New England has recently compiled some statistics that will be intensely interesting to bird lovers and should cause many who have been indifferent to the insect problem and deaf to arguments in favor of bird protection pause and ponder. By carefully estimating the number of birds found in several areas in the Bay State he concludes that there are not less than five insect eating birds per acre. This means that on the 8,000 square miles of area Massachusetts has a bird population of 25,600,000. On the assumption that each bird consumes on an average of 100 insects daily—and this is conservative—it means that the combined force of birds consumes the huge total of 2,500,000,000 insects daily. Assuming, as this authority does, that 120,000 insects will fill a bushel measure, the daily ration of this company of birds is 21,000 bushels! This for Massachusetts. What would the figures be for the country as a whole?

THE PROFIT IN SPRAYING.

The Nebraska experiment station has answered quite effectively the question, "Does it pay to spray?" in experiments which have been conducted in different localities in the state during the past five years. A bulletin recently issued containing a summary of these experiments shows that the average net gain per acre as a result of spraying trees was $64.25 after deducting the cost of spraying. It was found that sprayed trees yielded 220 bushels per acre of marketable fruit and fifty-five bushels of culls and windfalls, while unsprayed trees produced per acre ninety bushels of marketable fruit and eighty five bushels of culls and windfalls.

WELL RECEIVED EVERYWHERE

Professor Svante Arrhenius, Noted Swedish Scientist, Now Touring the United States—Norwegians Desire American Squadron to Visit That Country—Race for South Pole Attracting Attention In Scandinavia.

SWEDEN.

Professor Svante Arrhenius, the Swedish chemist and scientist, is well received wherever he appears in this country. After giving a series of lectures at Lowell Institute in Boston, Mass., he started west and has given lectures in Rock Island, Ill., and Chicago. He also appeared at the University of Minnesota, where he delivered a most interesting lecture before the student body. He was later given a banquet at the Odin club in Minneapolis. In all learned circles in the world the name of Arrhenius looms high and he today ranks foremost as one of the world's greatest chemists. He was born in Uppland, Sweden, in 1859. After taking his college degree he became a doctor of philosophy in 1884 and was engaged as teacher of chemistry and physics at the Stockholm university. He is now general director of the department of physics and chemistry at the Nobel Institute in Stockholm. In 1903 he was awarded the Nobel prize for chemistry. He has written a comprehensive work entitled "The Origin of the Worlds," which has been translated into a number of languages and which has attracted a great deal of attention among scientists the world over. Professor Arrhenius has for some time ardently combatted the theory that the planet Mars is inhabited. He believes that Mars is an immense desert and therefore not habitable. His visit to this country is attracting considerable attention and he has been particularly well received by his countrymen here.

Swedish servant girls do not ask for little here below. This is particularly true of the servant girls in Stockholm, who all seem to be in clover and able almost to dictate their own terms. Says a Swedish writer: "If a girl advertises for a family place in Stockholm she may be sure to have from thirty to forty offers and if she gives her telephone number anxious housewives will stand on tiptoe listening to the terms dictated by the girl. Among the ordinary terms may be mentioned: From $5 to $7 a month in cash (that by the way means 28 crowns a month), much time off during the week, a summer vacation, and no evening work. Many girls are willing to work only for families of two persons. If they are told there are children in the family they very often answer that they do not figure on such positions."

Scandinavian, especially Swedish students of song lore, are greatly interested in the Swedish troubadour, Torkel Scholander, who is making a tour through the cities of the Northwest, giving a program of Scandinavian, German, French and English ballads and lyrics and accompanying himself on that strange little instrument known as the lute. Herr Scholander belongs to a family distinguished in Sweden for its development of national cultural ideals and to his father belongs much of the credit for reviving the art of singing the songs of the lute, as was the custom in days gone by. The singer has been flatteringly commented upon in all the cities which he has visited and in Chicago he made a decided hit some time ago.

Augustana College at Rock Island, Ill., Gustavus college at St. Peter, Minn., and Bethany college at Lindsborg, Kan., which are the three largest Swedish-American colleges in this country, will all hold their commencement exercises within a few weeks. Special programs will be rendered and prominent national speakers will deliver addresses.

During the vacancy caused by the removal of Dr. L. A. Johnston to St. Paul, Minn., the First Swedish church in Moline, Ill., is being served by Rev. Henry O. Lindeblad, who was pastor of that congregation thirty-two years ago and who is now working in the interests of the Porto Rico mission among the Augustana Lutheran churches in this country.

The 300th anniversary of the printing of the King James version of the English Bible was celebrated at a special service in the College chapel at Augustana college in Rock Island, Ill., recently. Addresses were delivered by Drs. Youngert, Bartholomew and Blomgren.

Engineer Dror Orton, employed by the Swedish government for the past year in studying mines and mining in the United States, is making a tour of the Western states at present.

The Lutheran Augustana synod will meet in Duluth this year.

NORWAY.

It is proposed that three ships of the American squadron visit Bergen on its trip to Europe. The Kristiania Verdens Gang makes some curious comments on this plan. Why not visit Kristiania? Such a visit would be a token of the good feelings existing between the two countries. Then the paper proceeds to give the following explanation: The competitive struggle seems to be dragging Norway into the swirl of international political calculations and in case of naval war between the two powers the waters off Bergen are very apt to be the scene of the decisive clash between the two navies. "The North American navy," says the paper, "numbers among its officers the greatest of the naval strategists of our day, Admiral Mahon, and this explains why Bergen is preferred to Kristiania. The numerous officers of the battleships shall have a chance to make a preliminary study of the future theater of war, which Germany is plowing through with her best ships and men."

The Daily News of London states that King Haakon and Queen Maud desire that their son Olaf, the present crown prince of Norway, should be educated at a college in England, but the suggestion has already met with a vigorous protest on the part of Norwegian ministers and statesmen, who contend that the crown prince is naturally to be educated in Norway. They contend that it will not do to allow a future king of Norway to be educated in a foreign country and it is natural that they have the people with them in their contention. However, the king and queen will decide the matter at their next visit to England, when the little crown prince will accompany them.

Ole Bull's second wife, the late Madame Sara Bull, left a decidedly peculiar will in Boston, where she made her home. She, in the first place, expressed the wish that her ashes should be sent to the native city of her distinguished husband, which is Bergen, and where now rest his remains. Her will has occasioned much comment in Norway and the relatives of Ole Bull are very much displeased over it all. The Bull children of the first marriage have entered a most decided protest and have made an appeal to the city authorities of Bergen to have the wishes of the second wife expressed in her will entirely ignored.

Five Christiania students intend to make the trip to the Normandy celebration in Rouen, France, in an old fashioned, but rather large rowboat, which was used in the time of the Vikings. The boat will be known as the "Viking ship" and when it arrives at Havre, France, the students will take in a few more passengers. Professor Yngvar Nielsen has been taking up a subscription list for the students so that they can secure the necessary equipment for the long and perhaps hazardous journey.

During the latter part of this month King Haakon and Queen Maud will pay a visit to the royal court at St. Petersburg, where they will be the guests of the czar and czarina. The Russian czar, accompanied by the czarina, will pay a return visit to King Haakon and Queen Maud in Christiania on or about June 20. The Norwegians are not, according to recent advices from Christiania, very enthusiastic about the czar's visit.

In the French city of Rouen there will, in the near future, be celebrated the 1,000th anniversary of the duchy of Normandy. Scandinavians of course have an abiding interest in historic old Normandy, for the Scandinavian race 1,000 years ago played a significant role in the formation of that historic little duchy.

DENMARK.

The race between the Antarctic expeditions under Captain Scott and Captain Roald Amundsen for the South pole is attracting much attention in Copenhagen and is the subject of much comment in the press of Scandinavia. Dr. Rensch, president of the Norwegian Geographical society, speaking with regard to Amundsen's chances, states that he can surmount the difficulties of reaching the pole if he is able to get his dogs safely over the equator and its torrid heat. This is the main point; but he must also start under the same conditions as those found by the expeditions under Sir Ernest Shakleton and Captain Scott. Professor Mohn, a great polar expert, agrees with Dr. Nansen that it will certainly be impossible to reach the South pole from Cape Adare and that Amundsen has made a mistake in not going by some other route than that followed by the British Antarctic expedition.

The American-Scandinavian Foundation was made the residuary recently of Nils Poulsen, president of the Heckla iron works and reputed to be many times a millionaire, in his will filed in New York city. Mr. Poulsen's housekeeper, Nicolene Christensen, was left $30,000 and his furniture, books, manuscripts and art works, and his stenographer, Annie Brush, was given $20,000. His $100,000 mansion in Brooklyn is bequeathed to William Dickman, who is named as one of the executors of the will.

It is said that the Danish labor organizations sent millions of their savings to Swedish banks before the lockout because they thought that under the circumstances it might be safer to keep the money in that country.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state highway commission has divided Minnesota into forty districts and appointed twelve district highway engineers in accordance with the R. C. Dunn bill passed by the recent legislature. It is planned to have an engineer in each district by Aug. 1. From two to four counties are included in each division. Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties are left out of the district arrangement, the law providing that if a county has a highway engineer or other competent supervision of highways, a district engineer need not be appointed.

St. Paul has formally barred married women and widows as teachers in its public schools. This policy was virtually enforced for years by the St. Paul school board. The rule reads: "No married lady or widow shall be eligible to be appointed a regular teacher in the St. Paul schools; provided, a widow who has formerly served as teacher in the city schools shall be deemed eligible to reappointment by meeting otherwise the eligibility rules."

Members of the Minnesota State Holstein-Friesian association will attend the second May meeting of the association at Owatonna, Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20. Officers have arranged for a comprehensive program of papers by leading dairy authorities of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and New York, and about 250 are expected to attend the convention, some to come from neighboring states.

George Ralph, state drainage engineer, returned to St. Paul from a ten-days' trip over Northern Minnesota, visiting Roseau, Kittson and Marshall counties, where the state has begun the operation of twenty dredges, which, when in full blast, are expected to excavate 40,000 yards each in a month. This work will mean an expenditure by the state of at least $80,000 a month.

With a sensational catalogue of allegations, Homer C. Carey, a traveling man of Stillwater, brought suit in the Ramsey county district court against William Kaiser, a wealthy lumberman of the same place, for $50,000, alleging the alienation of his wife's affections. All three principals in the case are well known in Stillwater, where they have lived for several years.

The Commercial club of Bemidji has adopted resolutions condemning the printing in many of the large city papers of lurid, false and libelous reports of alleged forest fires in Northern Minnesota and has sent copies of the same to every commercial club in the northern portion of the state.

A soldier's monument will be dedicated on the courthouse grounds at Marshall on Memorial day. It is said to be one of the finest monuments in the state and will cost $5,000. Governor Eberhart will make the dedicatory and memorial oration.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Active steps for the trial of 800 alleged Indian land fraud cases will be taken May 23 in the United States district court at Fergus Falls, when a master in chancery probably will be appointed to take the testimony. This work will last all summer or longer and some of the cases will be ready for submission to the district court next fall.

The body of Mrs. William Jacche of Minneapolis, who had been ill for years, was found in a cistern under the kitchen of her home. Mr. Jacche told the coroner that his wife had been ill and despondent for a long time. She was a sufferer from rheumatism.

Driven into insanity through grief over the death of her child Mrs. Effie Haney, twenty-eight years old, of Duluth, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank Stanley, at East Providence, R. I.

The cave-in of a trench in which thirty men were working at Minneapolis caused the death of Alexander Glass, a laborer. The concerted efforts of his fellow employes to save the man proved vain.

Ole Johnson, residing with his parents six miles from Rushford, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. He was about thirty years old and had been in poor health.

A fire which started from a bolt of lightning burned the homes of Peter Olson, M. Linberg and Mike Iverson at Duluth. For a time the blaze threatened a large portion of the hillside.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Mary C. Bintliff, wife of Gershom Bintliff and a territorial pioneer, is dead at Minneapolis, aged seventy five years. She had been a resident of Minneapolis for forty years and of the state for fifty-six years.

Mrs. R. A. Rice, eighty-two years old, is dead at Minneapolis. She was the widow of Daniel Rice, a member of Company K, Second Minnesota cavalry.

William Thompson, one of St. Paul's oldest settlers, is dead, aged eighty six. Mr. Thompson arrived at St. Paul direct from Ireland in April, 1851.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Simonson and Laura Simonson, his wife as mortgagors to Peter Kiene of Dubuque, Iowa as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southeast quarter of section twelve, township one hundred fifty-four, north, range forty five, west of the fifth principal meridian and containing one hundred sixty acres according to government survey; now situated in Pennington county, Minnesota.

Which said mortgage bears date April 23, 1907 and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county, on April 26th, 1907 at 11:30 A. M. in Book 10 of Mortgages at page 406, and

Whereas the said Peter Kiene by an instrument in writing dated May 1, 1907 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on May 14, 1907 in Book 32 of Mortgages at page 521, assigned said mortgage to Louis Kupferschmidt, and

Whereas in proceedings duly had for that purpose pursuant to the laws of the state of Minnesota, the land described in said mortgage and herein above described became a part of a new county organized on or about November 26, 1910 and known and called Pennington County, and

Whereas the said Louis Kupferschmidt by an instrument in writing dated May 2, 1911 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Pennington County on the 10th day of May, 1911 in Book 9 of mortgages at page 111 duly reassigned said mortgage to said Peter Kiene who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest the sum of nine hundred one dollars and fifty eight cents and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained and the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction for cash by the sheriff of the county of Pennington in the state of Minnesota at the front door of the Auditorium Building in the city of Thief River Falls, in said Pennington county on Saturday June 24, 1911 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof including an attorney's fee of fifty dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Dated May 11, 1911:

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 26th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

CASH ROAD TAX IS KILLED

Minnesota Senate Votes Down Bill Abolishing Labor Option.

The senate killed the Peterson house bill requiring payment of road taxes in cash and abolishing the highway labor taxes in towns and the office of overseer of highways and providing for the appointment of an inspector of highways.

The senate spent another afternoon discussing the statewide primary bill, amended it so that its friends hardly recognized it and then ordered it reprinted as amended and placed it on the calendar to be voted on.

Apology, inclusive and complete, was made to the speaker of the house of representatives by F. L. Klemer. Mr. Klemer is the member from Rice county who electrified the house and started things by casually remarking that the house committees had been packed in favor of the special interests.

A pistol and knife duel took place at St. Paul between a number Italians. Gito Guancostoro and another man were wounded. One was shot in the neck and the other was stabbed close to the heart and cut about shoulders. The injured men are in the city hospital.

Nic Nitti and another Italian, who declines to give his name, are under arrest. Nitti had a revolver with five empty cartridges in it when the police got him. It is said at the hospital that neither of the wounded men will die.

FORM MINNESOTA SOCIETY FOR PEACE

Prominent Men Address Gathering at St. Paul.

The Minnesota State Peace society was organized at the old capitol at St. Paul for the purpose of a popular campaign of education to develop a strong public sentiment in favor of world peace, the settlement of disputes by arbitration or judicial process and the establishment of a simple, effective agency through which the people of Minnesota at any time can voice their sentiments in favor of peace.

Governor Eberhart presided at the mass meeting. Those who addressed the gathering were the governor, Louis Betz, Edward L. Hunt of New York, who is promoting the peace movement; Dr. Cyrus Northrop, Professor George W. Davis, J. A. O. Preuss, F. C. Hoffman, J. W. Olsen and Rabbi Rypins. All expressed in eloquent terms their ideas of amenity and concord among nations. A constitution was drafted, which eliminates the scheme of annual dues. Several hundred persons became charter members of the organization.

The following officers were elected: Honorary president, Governor Eberhart; active president, Cyrus Northrop; vice presidents, Archbishop Ireland and Mrs. C. G. Higbee; secretaries, J. S. McLain and Miss Ella Patterson.

FLAMES FANNED BY GALE

Spectacular Blaze In Residence District of Minneapolis.

Fire set by school children playing around a bonfire threatened the entire lower part of the Park avenue residence district at Minneapolis, destroyed a small lumber yard and damaged sixteen houses and barns in a spectacular blaze fanned by a high south wind to the extent of about $30,000.

The fire zone extended five blocks and Fire Chief Charles Ringer was forced to send in a 3-11 alarm, bringing out all available fire fighting apparatus, and for a time it seemed as though St. Paul would have to be appealed to.

Burned to Death In Box Car.

A farmhand who has been working in the vicinity of Morton recently was burned to death in a box car. He had been drinking heavily for several days and crawled into the car to sleep. The only clew to his identification was a peculiar pocket knife in the ruins of the fire. He went by the name of Doyle and hailed from New Jersey. The man was about thirty years old.

Makes Attack on Jailer.

Martin O'Malley, who last October was sentenced to be hanged for the poisoning of his two stepchildren and who is confined in the Le Sueur county jail, tried to kill his night watch. He hurled a cuspidor at the keeper, Thomas Mouldry, but it hit the door and was broken.

Minnesota Legislator Dead.

Mill City Gambler Ends Life.

R. L. Scott, familiarly known as "Scotty," a gambler, is dead at Minneapolis, a suicide. He attempted his life Thursday by shooting, and it was believed for a time he would survive.

Bees often make fine honey in hollow trees in the woods in a wild state, but they surely need more care than merely "being let alone" if they are expected to give either pleasure or profit under the usual domestic conditions.

The scabby legged hen can be made more presentable if her legs are dipped in coal oil to the hocks and held there a few minutes. If decided improvement is not noticed the treatment should be repeated in the course of a week or ten days.

A Missouri farmer we read of the other day put a bright idea into execution. He wanted an open shed in the pasture, so he built a framework of poles giving a skeleton about 20 by 50 feet. Then when he thrashed his small grain he arranged the stack blower so as to shoot the straw on to the frame.

If the rainfall continues short it will be a part of wisdom to get the corn ground in shape with the use of the drag, this provided that the plow land is sufficiently mellow. This will drive a dust mulch and will enable the soil to retain much moisture that would be lost were the ground cut deeply with a disk.

There is probably no agency that will clean up a patch of brush land more quickly or more effectively than a flock of goats. Not only will they devour weeds and herbage, but will strip the leaves from brush and peel the bark from smooth barked trees. And while they are engaged in the job they give a fair interest return on the money invested in them by the gains they make, if young animals.

As high as $2,000 and $3,000 per acre has been paid for western fruit land, but these figures are modest compared with $5,000 per acre, the figure at which tobacco land is held on the Isle of Pines. This island is situated about thirty-five miles south of Cuba, in the Caribbean sea, and its fertile soil and balmy climate make it the finest tobacco raising section in the world. With the completion of the Panama canal it is expected that the island will become far better known.

Old Tantalus, Phrygia's mythical king, may have gazed on water which always eluded his thirsty lips and luscious fruits which hung just beyond his reach, but he was spared the vexation of seeing fat 1,500 pound steers go by his door en route to some central market to tickle the palate of some urban nabob when he was cocksure that the next day for dinner he must be content with a slice of steak from some old brindled female of many summers and a career replete with honors and offspring.

Some very useful inventions and discoveries trace their origin to very humble sources. To illustrate, a fellow of the name of Johnson, residence unimportant, some years ago noticed that the droppings of an old hen that roosted in the carriage shed loosened the varnish wherever they fell on parts of the buggy. This set him to thinking, and shortly he secured a patent for a varnish remover made of extract of hen manure mixed with a cheap grade of turpentine. This man is now living on the interest of his money and wears a silk hat and drives a $5,000 touring car.

A robin that the writer has been watching the past few days is building a nest in the crotch of an apple tree not more than three and a half feet from the ground. The tree is located at a point some distance from the house and in a spot much frequented by cats. We have decided to safeguard this nesting place by encircling the tree with a piece of wire netting to keep the cats from having access to the trunk. A year or so ago robins built in a plum tree not far from this apple tree—and even closer to the ground, and both parent birds and little ones fell victims to prowling cats.

One of the most interesting of the migratory birds is the white throated sparrow, which in size and general appearance resembles the song sparrow. It may be distinguished from the latter, however, by the pronounced black and white striped cap which it wears and a white throat from which mark it takes its name. The song of this sparrow is a high pitched sweet and very clear whistle, which some one has interpreted "pea-bo-dy-bird," the last syllable or two being pitched a trifle lower than the rest. During their migration the white throated sparrows are often seen in flocks of a dozen or more. They build their nests on the ground on the border of woodland or swamp, and they are usually made of grass and leaves.

Experience of experiment station and orchard men covering several years proves very conclusively that a big majority—about 80 per cent—of the worms that enter apples do so at the blossom end. The codling moth lays its eggs in the calyx cup within a period of about ten days after the petals fall. It is during this interval that the tree should be given a thorough spraying with an arsenate of lead solution at the rate of about two pounds to fifty gallons of water, the object being to deposit a little of the poison in each one of these calyx cups. If one is spraying to check apple scab or other fungous pests with the bordeaux solution or summer lime sulphur mixture the arsenate may be added to the same volume of these. But whether applied in water or with them the liquid should be given frequent stirring to insure an even distribution of the poison.

It is not too late to sow a piece of rape for the brood sows and growing pigs. It will be one of the most profitable tracts on the farm, and if the pigs are not turned on to it too soon it will furnish forage all summer long.

The mosquito pest about the premises may be considerably reduced by keeping a wire screen over the rain barrels, if there are any on the place, and by pouring kerosene on the surface of stagnant pools or ponds in pasture or wood lot.

While instruction not to plant until danger of frost is over in the case of beans and some other tender plants is correct, a limited quantity of such seed may be sown as a speculation. If it is not cut down by the frost one is that much ahead, while if it is the loss is slight.

Many a man who has been leading an active physical life and doing much manual labor gets into the same condition on going to town and quitting work that the horse does that all of a sudden is allowed to loaf on full feed—both are likely to have azoturia, which is merely another name for a system badly overloaded with albuminous matter.

Some investigators who have been making a study of a homely conservation problem in the state of Missouri estimate that $10,000,000 is lost to the farms of the state annually through the careless handling of farm manures. This is based on the value of $3 per ton which is placed on fresh manure and a value of $2 per ton or less which it is estimated manure as usually handled is worth.

For the benefit of the uninitiated it is only fair to say that the poultry business can hardly be classed as an inexpensive, easy, no worry, get-rich-quick occupation. Rather it requires brains, persistence, patience, courage and some other staying qualities. The novice should take it upon a small scale. For those not having experience in the business farmers' bulletin No. 287 on "Poultry Management" will be found instructive and helpful.

Contrary to a practice that has been in vogue for a long time, the best medical authorities now recommend shutting up instead of killing a dog that has bitten persons or other animals and is thought to have the rabies. If such dog really is mad the disease will develop rapidly and in the course of ten or twelve days cause its death. If madness does develop, persons bitten by it should be given the Pasteur treatment at once, while if it does not there is no danger whatever.

The national pure food law adopted in 1906 has done wonders in putting a stop to the dishonest as well as harmful adulteration of food products, drugs, etc. Another law needed equally bad and which would be of incalculable value to the agricultural interests of the country would be a federal pure seed law which would not only prevent the transportation of adulterated or otherwise worthless seeds from one state to another, but their importation of such seeds from foreign countries. Agriculture is so important an interest and its effects so farreaching that congress ought to see its way clear to do this much in its behalf.

The apple, the most popular of cultivated fruits, has a history that traces back into the far distant past. It is said that carbonized apples from 5,000 to 7,000 years old have been found in the mud of the stone age, while pieces apparently cut as for drying have been found beneath the ruins of the lake dwellers. Apples were cultivated by the ancient Romans and were introduced into Britain before the conquest by the Romans and by the third century had spread over the entire island. Apple seeds were brought to New England in 1629, and an orchard of considerable area was set out in Rhode Island in 1636. The many varieties of apples in the country at the present time have been developed from the trees first set in New England.

COPENHAGEN SNUFF

GUARANTEE OF QUALITY AND PURITY

Copenhagen Snuff is made of the best, old, rich, high-flavored leaf tobacco, to which is added only such ingredients as are component parts of natural leaf tobacco and absolutely pure flavoring extracts. THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

GOT THEIR SCALPS

Locals Defeated Red Lake Falls Bunch on Local Diamond Sunday.

Will Try Conclusions With Fast Crookston Team Week From Sunday.

The local base ball aggregation won the first game played on the home grounds when they defeated the Red Lake Falls bunch of base ball tossers last Sunday afternoon by a score of 6 to 2. The game which started out with considerable slackness tightened up towards the last and was a pretty close fought battle.

The down river bunch started out with a whoop to capture the game and brought in a score in the first half of the second inning but the tide soon turned when the locals brought in two in the same inning, which cinched the game.

Hoss, on the firing line, for the locals pitched an excellent game, and made the batsmen bite on his twisters with wonderful regularity.

Earl Dolan made his debut behind the bat for the locals and showed that he was capable of holding down the position.

John Jaranson, one of the old timers of the old school of base ball also donned the uniform and did some excellent work in the outfield.

The game was free from any tangle and was a clean-cut one all thru.

Negotiations for a game with the fast Crookston aggregation to be played a week from Sunday are under way.

The following is the summary of the game:

The "Tigers" went down to Red Lake Falls Sunday morning where they played a game with the second team of that city and were defeated by a score of 2 to 7 in a ten inning game.

This is the second game this season that the "Tigers" have played and altho they have been unfortunate in being defeated they are a remarkably fast bunch and will undoubtedly make a good record before the season is over.

The battle with the down river aggregation was a close one despite the fact that quite a number of scores were made and the winning score was brought in on an error only after two men were put out.

Negotiations are under way for a game with the travelers next Sunday morning and a return game with the Red Lake Falls team will be played on the local diamond Decoration Day, the game to be called about 5:30.

The following is the line-up and the score by innings:

Tigers—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10

The local high school base ball team defeated the Crookston high in a game on the local diamond last Saturday afternoon by a score of 10 to 9. The day which was cold and windy was far from a satisfactory one for a game and the attendance was very light. Both teams, barring a few errors, played good ball and the game as a whole was quite an interesting contest. The following is the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
T. R. F.	5	2	0	0	2	1	0	0	x	10

Judicious Advertising Pays.

Advertising seems to be an art yet to be discovered by some people. That is, the principal part of it. A constant stream of water from one or more fire engines will soon extinguish or get under control a very stubborn fire, while a few buckets of water, dashed on here and there, have little or no effect. The modern fire department is practical, and has outgrown the bucket system; and so with modern advertising-plenty of it, used in a practical, common sense and judicious manner pays.

If you want to catch a certain kind of fish, you use a certain kind of bait; not all fish bite at all kinds of bait. Not all people respond to every advertisement. The newspaper is a medium indispensable to the majority of advertisers, because of its wide and repeating circulation. As a promoter of trade and profit, newspaper advertising is no longer an open question; that is, when done in a practical and intelligent manner, and pays because of its effectiveness and cheapness.

Advertise judiciously in the News, Mr. Business Man, and you will reach a class of readers who are buyers and who believe in patronizing home merchants.

Goes On Sad Mission.

In response to a telegram conveying the sad intelligence of the death of the aged father which occurred Monday morning at his home at Arcadia, Wis., Joe and Fred Nicolai left that evening for their old home to be in attendance at the funeral. Mr. Nicolai was at the time of his demise some 80 years old.

Entertain For Jerry McCarty.

Invitations are out for a stag dinner to be given in honor of Jerry McCarty, whose approaching marriage has been announced, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Torrison on Knight avenue N. tomorrow evening.

Ditch Bonds Sold.

Ditch bonds to the amount of $150,000 were sold by the county last week to the Security Trust Company of St. Paul. The rate of interest is 5 per cent. per annum and will run serially from 6 to 20 years before maturity.

A Good Lawn.

There is nothing that adds to the beauty of the home, more than a good blue grass lawn. I say blue grass; for it does not matter what you seed a lawn to; it will get down to blue grass in a short time. The most essential thing is to get the ground well leveled off before seeding; for it will never become level after seeded down. The leveling is best done with a length of railroad iron, drawing it back and forth until all the low spots are filled and the rail touches the ground along its whole length. If you cannot get a railroad rail, a timber will do the work. In seeding, use at the rate of one bushel of blue grass seed to the acre; but it takes two years to get a good sod of blue grass alone. It is a good plan to sow two quarts of timothy seed with the blue grass, the blue grass will run out the timothy within a year or two. To keep the lawn in good growing condition, it should have a good coat of fertilizer applied in the fall; not disfiguring your lawn with a lot of course stable manure, but using fine rotted manure, or still better, pulverized sheep manure about 500 lbs. to the acre. After sowing the seed, do not rake in but cover all over with one inch of well rotted manure. That will not bake and become crusted, in case of hard rains, as the dirt would. The young plants will come up readily through the covering and it will insure a good stand and a fine lawn.—A. Brackett, Excelsior, Minn.

"Dad" Sabin Was Here.

J. C. Sabin, more commonly known as "Dad" Sabin among his many old time friends, who about a year ago made this territory for Griggs, Cooper & Co., of St. Paul and since then has been located in the house, was in the city last Friday on his trip over his old territory and introduced Nat Harris who will make this territory for the firm in the future. "Dad" is one of the most widely known men in this section and his visit is always an enjoyable one. A chat with "Dad" is a sure cure for the "blues".

Must Be Paid Before June 1st.

In order to avoid the usual penalty everyone will have to pay their real estate taxes before June 1st, otherwise the extra 10 per cent. will be affixed thereto. Now is the time to square up with the treasurer and not wait until the last days as otherwise a rush will be experienced. The treasurer would deem it a great favor if this matter is attended to immediately and not delayed until the last day. Part of these taxes, however, will be paid to Red Lake county.

Charms Audience.

"The Climax" is the one really great dramatic offering of the decade. It is a play women will rave over, has nothing gaudy, has nothing glaring, nothing of frippery or gush, but a story that stirs emotion and sympathy and is of real gold all the way through. The stage is better off having such plays, and the auditor much better having seen it.

Irvine Drew Big Crowd.

Alexander Irvine, the eminent Socialist lecturer, gave an address in the Auditorium last Thursday and was greeted by a large audience. In addition to the large attendance of local people, big crowds came on the train in the afternoon and evening to hear one of the Party's most able speakers.

"Tigers" to Dance.

The "Tigers" Thief River Falls's fast second base ball team will give a dance in the Auditorium next Tuesday evening, May 30th. Good music will be had and anyone who wishes to have a good time should not fail to attend. Tickets are now being sold.

Opens Shooting Gallery.

Lewis Olson has opened up a shooting gallery in a tent on the vacant lot between the Pool Hall and the Ten Cent Store on LaBree avenue.

Washington News Items.

The Clapp amendment for the first time made the competency of an Indian to convey land depend upon the question of blood, so that a mixed-blood could convey his land whether competent or incompetent and a full-blood could not.

Naturally every Indian on White Earth who wanted to dispose of his land and they nearly always do, claimed he was a mixed blood, and was ready to make affidavit to the fact if there was any ready cash in sight. Out of some forty five hundred Indians, ninety per cent sold their allotments on the pretext that they were mixed-bloods.

Now, many of them no doubt sold for less than their property was worth, and in some few cases fraud was practiced. Something near one thousand suits have been begun to set aside an equal number of conveyances, and the only ground alleged in these cases is that the Indian was a full-blood. No fraud or imposition is alleged in any case. The result of this litigation, if successful, will be a judgment in each case that the land still belongs to the Indian grantor, notwithstanding he may have received full value for it, and that he claimed he was a mixed blood, and that the purchaser believed he was competent to convey the land.

Such is a result is abhorent to justice and instead of advancing the Indian in civilization will teach him rascality and prepare him for a career as a swindler.

This bill is designed to grant relief to innocent purchasers who dealt with the Indians' honestly believing that he was what he claimed to be, a mixed-blood, and creates a new defense in this class of suits, to be set up by way of a supplemental pleading, that the Indian sold his land under pretense that he was a mixed blood, and received a valuable consideration therefor which he retains, and authorizes the court to find the fair value of the land at the time of sale and if it is more than the Indian was paid, the defendant may pay the difference into court, and thereupon judgment confirming the sale shall be entered.

It also applies the same principle to Indians who are on the roll as full bloods, who have sold their land to innocent purchasers who are in actual possession, where no suit has been brought, and authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to confirm land sales in such cases where the Indian has received a fair value for his property, or if not, confirm it when the difference between such value and the amount already paid, is paid over for the use of the Indian.

Business On the Increase.

One of the busiest places in town these days is the Nicolai cigar factory which has just recently been opened in the building across the street from the First State Bank, the change from the building just this side of the iron bridge to the present large quarters were made necessary by the increasing business.

In addition to its former help the factory now employs Will Casper Tenny Asselind, Will Campbell and Jim Asselind, and with this number to turn out in time the fast incoming orders.

Two of the best "smokes" on the market is the latest of Fred's products and these have, during the brief time they have been out enjoyed an unusually good sale.

The Best of the Season.

That's what "The Climax" is, and it's a play you will feel all the better for having seen. The company is perfection and the incidental and interpolated music are a treat to all music lovers, more especially "The Song of The Soul," which is sung by the character Adeline Von Hagen. Take the News' advice and see "The Climax."

SPLENDID ATTRACTION

Home Talent Minstrel Show Given Last Friday Night Was a Hummer.

Met With A Fair Sized Audience Given For Benefit of Band.

The home talent minstrel show participated in by about eighteen local "cullud gemmen" and led by Will Follet, of Pine City, at the Auditorium last Friday night was a fine attraction and was greeted by a large audience.

Will Follet who had charge of the work of getting up the show has had lots of experience at this kind of work and the production was without a doubt the best of its kind ever seen here. As a merit producer Mr. Follet has few equals, and with the assistance of Will Swaddling and the local stars, managed to keep the audience in a fit of laughter most of the time.

Messrs. Follet and Swaddling are old friends of Prof. J. H. Hay and it was by the request of him that these gentlemen were secured to take part in the program.

In addition to the darkey gags, songs and specialties several well rendered vocal and instrumental solos and duets were a part of the program.

Popular Young People Wed.

The Crookston Times of last Thursday contains the item printed below which will be important news to the many friends in this city and vicinity of the young couple:

"Miss Millie Doherty has chosen Wednesday, May thirty-first, as the date for her marriage to Mr. Jerry McCarty of Thief River Falls, and will leave on Friday for Adams, N. D., to make preparations for the wedding, which will occur at the home of her mother there. This morning she went to Thief River Falls, where she is spending the day with friends, and making arrangements for the new home in a cozy little flat which Mr. McCarty has rented for the summer. Miss Doherty has made her home here for something more than a year, during which time she has been employed as a musician at the Lyceum theater, and has made for herself a wide circle of friends, whose good wishes for her future happiness go with her and who rejoice that she is to return to Minnesota after her marriage and to make her home in a neighboring city, permitting of frequent visits to friends here. Mr. McCarty is a popular conductor on the Soo running out of Thief River Falls, and has many friends there who will be happy to welcome his charming and clever bride to their circle.

Fittingly Observed.

Seventeenth of May, Norway's independence day, was fittingly celebrated in this city last Wednesday. In the afternoon and evening a fine program was rendered in the Auditorium under the auspices of the Sons of Norway to which there was a large attendance. Anton Sannes, the Norwegian humorist, was secured as a feature of the program and took part in the entertainment, and as a merit producer he has few equals.

Speeches and songs appropriate unto the day made up the entertainment, after which a dance was given in the Antlers Club rooms.

Entertain For Mrs. Hoag.

Mesdames Shaw, Melgaard, Penney and Dobner entertained a company of ladies at the home of Mrs. Melgaard Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Hoag. The afternoon was spent at cards and everyone present had a most enjoyable time. Mrs. Hoag and children expect to leave for Iowa next week where they will visit relatives before leaving for their new home in California.

MINNESOTA WINS TAX CASE

Supreme Court Decides Against United States Express Company.

Judgment in favor of the state of Minnesota was rendered in the state supreme court in the suit brought by Attorney General George T. Simpson to collect $9,719.66 disputed taxes from the United States Express company. Taxes were claimed on earnings from business originating in one place in the state crossing the state line and ending at another place in the state and also on money order business originating in the state. All this is held by the supreme court to be taxable, except that portion of the mileage outside the state.

The case will be appealed to the supreme court of the United States on the issue of interference with interstate commerce.

Killed Under Car Wheels.

Chris Hanson, twenty-five years of age, a driver for Gaudolfo Fairnell, a St. Paul ice cream manufacturer, was struck and instantly killed by an eastbound Snelling-Minnehaha street car at West Seventh street and Otto avenue. Hanson's horse became unmanageable when a steam roller frightened it and dashed in front of the car, which struck the wagon broadside, throwing Hanson beneath the wreckage.

Death Due to Storm.

Eggert Nagle, sixty-nine years of age, a pioneer florist of Minneapolis, was killed by a Selby-Lake car during a severe storm which visited the Mill City. He attempted to cross the tracks. His vision obscured by the wind and rain he did not see an automobile approaching until it was almost upon him. He was struck while attempting to cross ahead of the car to escape the automobile.

COMPOUND CALLOUSES

Tells Splendid Cure for Them and All Foot Troubles.

A compound callous is the secondary stage when it grows inward and presses on the nerves, causing intense pain. Callouses never cure themselves but always get worse, sometimes irritating the whole nervous system. The following is a most effective and speedy cure "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide in a basin of hot water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give the desired results.) The soreness will disappear immediately and the callous can be easily peeled off. Repeat this for several nights. A little olive oil rubbed into skin is very beneficial."

This Calocide is a very remarkable preparation for all foot ailments. Bunions, corns and ingrowing nails get instant relief and are soon cured. Bad smelling and sore feet need but a few treatments. Calocide is no longer confined to doctors' use. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually enough to put the worst feet in fine condition. It will prove a blessing to persons who have been vainly trying ineffectual tablets and foot powders.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TANK FALLS NINE STORIES

Attempted Murder and Suicide at Minneapolis Draws Away Men Working in Danger Zone.

Charles Anderson, a policeman of Minneapolis, was shot through the abdomen and probably mortally wounded when James Russell, a negro, fired three shots at the officer and then committed suicide by shooting himself through the head.

Crashing nine stories to the street, plunging through the top of a freight shed, wrecking one freight car filled with agricultural implements, damaging two more and sending hundreds of gallons of water through the windows of adjoining buildings, the big 100,000 gallon tank on the roof of the new building of the Great Northern Implement company toppled over and created an almost unparalleled scene of spectacular debris.

Almost by a miracle eighteen men escaped injury and perhaps death. Some were working on the tank itself; others were at work under the freight canopy. The shooting of Patrolman Anderson by a negro across the street attracted their attention. All the men ran out from the freight shed and those on the tank climbed down to see the excitement.

GAINS BY ARMY CHANGE

Fort Snelling to Be Made Larger Military Post.

July 1 steps will be taken by the war department, it is reported, looking to the development of Fort Snelling into one of the biggest military posts in the United States. Snelling will then become a brigade headquarters and as such will be enlarged along lines now under consideration by General Wood, chief of staff, and by Representative Stevens of St. Paul, who, as a member of the house committee on military affairs, has kept in close touch for years with the general and department officers of the army service. The enlargement of Snelling and the location there of the headquarters of the department of the Lakes will be a good thing for the Twin Cities commercially.

ONE DEAD; ANOTHER DYING

Locomotive Boiler on the St. Paul Road Blows Up.

U. P. Carroll, engineer, and H. Anderson, fireman, of a locomotive on the St. Paul road, both residents of Minneapolis, were blown from the cab of the engine when the boiler of the locomotive blew up three miles west of Lake City. Carroll was instantly killed and Anderson was probably fatally injured.

Anderson was blown into a field a distance of 100 feet and Carroll was thrown against a fence at the edge of the right of way. Both men were terribly scalded.

The engine was hauling a train of seventy-five freight cars. The cause of the explosion is supposed to have been a defect in the boiler. The train was westbound from the Mill City.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

John Lind, former governor of Minnesota and now president of the board of regents of the University of Minnesota, one of the most prominent figures in Minnesota Democracy, underwent a serious operation for abdominal trouble at the Swedish hospital at Minneapolis. He is reported as resting easily and is expected to recover rapidly.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson has issued warrants for $16,466.50 in payment of wolf bounties for the last four months on 2,523 full grown wolves at $7.50 each, and on 548 cubs at $3. Beltrami county received the largest sum, $1,924.50, for 264 full grown and fourteen cub wolves. No wolf bounties were paid in Hennepin or Ramsey counties.

Mgr. Archbishop Diomede Falconio, apostolic delegate to the United States, who has been prominently mentioned as one of the next cardinals to be appointed, will be in St. Paul late in June, where he will spend a short time with Archbishop Ireland.

With the completion of the new $300,000 mother house of the Sisters of Notre Dame at Mankato about 250 of the sisters now located at Milwaukee will be transferred immediately to that city. The buildings will cover a space of more than an acre.

The state has received $65,882.50 as an inheritance tax from the estate of Levi M. Stewart, the "hermit" who lived in a cottage on Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis. This is the second largest inheritance tax ever paid the state.

John J. Boobar of St. Cloud, for eleven years librarian of the house of representatives at Washington, has resigned that position to take effect June 15. Mr. Boobar will engage in business in Washington.

Bears are again beginning to frequent the farm yards in the vicinity of Duluth, and bear stories are being brought to that city almost every day by farmers and settlers.

The University of Minnesota track team won an overwhelming victory from Iowa in their annual meet at Iowa field, the Gophers scoring 91 points to 31 for Iowa.

Detectives will be employed to investigate the poisoning mystery at the state Soldiers home.

Mrs. Dorothea Sshwable, eighty-seven years old, a resident of St. Paul since 1856, is dead.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, a farmer living nine miles east of Madelia, while attempting to throw off the running belt connecting a cream separator and gasoline engine, had her arms caught. Both were broken, the left arm in two places, while the right was only held by a small portion of the muscle.

Train No. 17 on the Great Northern road ran into a washout twenty-one miles from Duluth and the engine, baggage car and smoker were derailed. The baggage car and smoker caught fire and were destroyed. The passengers pushed back the three sleepers by hand and saved them.

The location of "Section Thirty" mine on the Vermillion range was saved from destruction by a forest fire only by hard work of the fire departments at Ely and Winton. Two miles of hose was laid to fight the fire from Fall Lake and Winton.

Donatro Ronzano, an employe of the Clyde iron works at Duluth, was caught by the coat in some machinery at the works and met a terrible death. He leaves a wife and child who arrived from Italy but ten days ago. He was twenty-five years old.

Lois Robbins, eleven years old, lies at the Minneapolis city hospital with a fractured skull, a fractured jaw and a broken nose as the result of being knocked down by Motorcycle Officer Frank Albricht, a member of the park police.

Dick Shoemacker, aged nineteen, confessed that he placed two piles of ties, struck by No. 6 Great Northern passenger train south of Beltrami recently, "just to see if the train would go off the track."

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Jacob D. Holtzermann, president of the board of charities and corrections of Minneapolis, is dead at Naples, Italy, where he was making a short stay with his mother, Mrs. Elise Holtzermann of Minneapolis.

Rudolph Weber, eighty-three years old, who had lived in Minneapolis since 1857 and was one of the best known among the pioneers of that city, is dead.

J. E. Smith, veteran of the Civil war and commander of the A. E. Welch post, G. A. R., is dead at Red Wing. He was seventy-five years old.

Jacob Ries, aged eighty-two, pioneer resident of Shakopee and president of the Rock Springs Table Water company, is dead of old age.

William P. Hays, for many years chief clerk of the old Windsor hotel at St. Paul, is dead at Great Falls, Mont.

James Archer, an old resident of Minneapolis, is dead, aged ninety years.

WHAT CURES ECZEMA?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch.

Because—D. D. D starts the cure at the foundation of the trouble.

Because—It cleanses, soothes and heals the skin.

Because—It enables Nature to repair the ravages of the disease.

Because—The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most serious cases show that D. D. D. is today recognized as the absolutely reliable Eczema cure.

Drop into our store today, just to talk over your case with us.

THE DULUTH HERALD

BEATS THE CENSUS THREE TO ONE

During the past ten years the population of Duluth increased 48 per cent., St. Paul 32 per cent., and Minneapolis 49 per cent. In the Same Period the Circulation of The Duluth Herald

INCREASED 150 PER CENT.

This marvelous expansion—so much greater than that of the surrounding territory—is due solely to the merits of The Herald.

The Herald has never used any kind of premium, contest, or price reduction to gain subscribers but prints each day the very best NEWSPAPER in the Northwest. Its editorial page is thoroughly independent and its news columns cover every feature of the world's daily history.

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS

William Jennings Bryan, discussing the "Influence of the Modern Newspaper" before the Contemporary club at Philadelphia, declared that the modern newspaper has lost prestige and influence, due in part to the devotion of too much space to crime and domestic infelicity.

Frank Gotch, champion wrestler, threw Henry Bahn, known as Sampson, the 260-pound German champion wrestler, so hard it caused a fracture of the German's skull. Physicians at the match declared Bahn was seriously hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bryan have announced the engagement of their daughter, Grace Dexter Bryan, to Richard Lewis Hargreaves, son of Mrs. A. E. Hargreaves of Lincoln. The marriage will take place early in June.

Mrs. Carrie Nation, the militant Kansas temperance worker, who is at a sanitarium at Leavenworth, Kan., is gradually growing weaker. Her condition, which is due to a general breakdown, is regarded as serious.

Mrs. William Jennings Bryan was robbed at a matinee theater performance in New York city of a seal handbag containing $75 and valuable souvenirs collected by herself and her husband in their travels.

"All the United States demands of Mexico is order, justice and independence," declared Theodore Roosevelt at a breakfast given in his honor by the Toltec club at El Paso, Tex.

Although United States Senator William J. Stone, ill with grippe at the home of his son in Kansas City, is still confined to his bed, his condition is very much improved.

The condition of Tom L. Johnson, former mayor of Cleveland, who suffered a relapse in his present illness several days ago, remains unchanged.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Two policemen were probably fatally injured, property valued at $150,000 was ruined and the entire city of Milwaukee was shaken when men supposed to be union ironworkers dynamited the steel coal hoist, just completed, at the yards of the Milwaukee Western Fuel company. There were two separate explosions, of such violence that windows in many parts of the West Side were broken. Policemen rushed to investigate and while they were near the wrecked crane a second explosion brought the iron work down about their heads.

Nine men were indicted by the federal grand jury at Washington charged with having defrauded the government out of 10,000 acres of Alaska coal lands valued at $10,000,000. The lands are in the Cook inlet precinct.

Yeggmen wrecked the Rushville banking building at Rushville, N. Y., blew the safe and secured approximately $4,000. The wife of the cashier, Mrs. W. Irving Jones, died as a result of the shock.

Two persons are dead and four others fatally injured as the result of a free for all drunken brawl in an Italian railroad laborers' camp at Hopewell, N. J.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Russia has sent an ultimatum to China, insisting on a closer adherence to the provisions of the treaty of 1881, which has been the subject of negotiations between the two countries for some weeks past. The Russian occupation corps is within a hundred miles of the frontier and marching on Kulja.

A sensation was caused in London financial circles by the suicide of R. F. Carnegie, manager of the Lombard street branch of Parr's bank, limited, who shot himself at his residence in that city. The affairs of the institution are said to be in perfect order.

If the writer ever had any doubt that birds know a good thing when they see it, it was dispelled last season when he noted the certainty with which they singled out the ripest and reddest cheeked peaches and devoured them completely, leaving nothing but the pit hanging to the limb. Other fruit in garden and on mountain slope was scarce at the time, and this doubtless accounts for the trespass of these feathered friends.

While it is a mighty fine thing for the farmer to have an automobile and all right for him to do so if he has the money in the bank with which to purchase the machine, it is a very questionable procedure for any fellow who has to increase his indebtedness to buy one. We have in mind a fellow who did just this thing, and in the end it meant that he lost the farm, as he couldn't get his money's worth out of the machine without using it, and he couldn't do this without neglecting the farm work.

One of the reasons why the dairy cows give the largest returns in milk yield in May and June is that the water they drink does not chill them to the bone. This condition can be reproduced in the winter by warming the drinking water with a tank heater by the use of cobs or other fuel instead of making the cow do the job, utilizing corn and other high priced feeds for the purpose. Every bit of heat which the cow has to furnish in the warming of ice cold water means that the energy and vitality which she can devote to milk production are reduced by just so much.

TO TAKE EFFECT ON JULY 1

Existing Railroad Rates in Minnesota to Be Advanced.

Three cents a mile will be the regular passenger rate in Minnesota on and after the 1st of July next. Existing interstate passenger rates, based on the present 2-cent rate in Minnesota, will likewise be advanced. Just how far the change will extend has not been determined, but it will affect a wide territory, putting things back to practically where they were four years ago.

The order to put back the old passenger rates has been issued by some of the Minnesota roads. It is expected that all the roads in the state will give similar instructions in a few days.

The merchandise rates, also involved in the Minnesota rate cases, are similarly affected. They will be restored to the old level.

IN FIT OF JEALOUS ANGER

North St. Paul Man Wounds Wife and Himself.

Suffering from three wounds inflicted by her former husband in a fit of jealous anger at her home in North St. Paul, Mrs. Martha Guinn, forty-one years old, the intended victim, lies at the city hospital at St. Paul with a good chance of recovery. In a cell in the surgical ward below lies her assailant, James Arthur Guinn, thirty-seven years old, with self-inflicted injuries that probably will be fatal.

Back of the shooting affray lies a tangled skein of domestic troubles, through which runs the mother's love for her little boy, Arthur, for whose sake she returned to her former husband, only to live unhappily, it is said.

LOCKS HIMSELF IN VAULT

Clerk Then Takes Poison in Old Capitol at St. Paul.

Despondent over some piece of misfortune, possibly a love affair, Herbert Spencer of St. Paul, about twenty-five years old, a helper in the United States food and drug inspection laboratory in the old capitol, committed suicide by taking poison in the vault of the laboratory some time between Tuesday night and Thursday morning, after plugging the bolts of the door from the inside so that an expert had to be called when Mr. Mitchell, suspecting harm had come to the young man, found that the doors would not open, although the combination was properly set.

TOWN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Destructive Fire in Lumber Yards at South Stillwater, Minn.

Spontaneous combustion is blamed for a $175,000 fire which started in the Kaiser box factory in South Stillwater. The high wind blowing toward the river saved the town. The fire spread rapidly through the yards of the box company, which contained 10,000,000 feet of lumber, all of which was destroyed.

The local fire department and hundreds of volunteer fire fighters proved inadequate to stop the headway of the flames and a hurry up call was sent in to the St. Paul department, which responded with one engine and a full company of men.

INDIAN CHIEF OJIBWA DEAD

Noted Chippewa Succumbs at White Earth.

Ojibwa, one of the last surviving chiefs of the Chippewa Indians and one of the oldest members on the White Earth reservation, is dead, aged eighty-four years.

Ojibwa is survived by five daughters and two sons, among them being Peter Parker, who served as a private in Company D, First Minnesota, in the Civil war. The old chief was early converted to the Roman Catholic faith and zealously followed the teachings of its creed until his death.

FATAL TROLLEY ACCIDENT

One Man Killed and Two Injured at Minneapolis.

One man was killed and two probably fatally injured when an interurban car ran down a gang of track laborers at Minneapolis.

George Goblack was killed instantly, while Mike Sadoh and Mike Sodao were hurried to the city hospital, the former with a fractured skull and the latter with internal injuries and a fractured right leg.

INDIAN LAND THROWN OPEN

Thirty-Two Thousand Acres to Be Settled on at Once.

Nearly 32,000 acres of land have been opened for settlement in the Bow String and Boy river country.

This includes all ceded lands on which the timber had been cut and removed: 12,000 acres in the Leech Lake reservation and nearly 20,000 in the Winnebigoshish reserve.

Perished in Forest Fire.

The charred remains of Kitto Mikalia, a bachelor farmer, who resided alone in the Mud Hen district near Eveleth, was found in the burned building on his place. A forest fire swept over his place and it is presumed that he died fighting it. Mikalia was forty-seven years of age and was well to do.

THE BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

While the lime-sulphur mixture is being used by many orchardists as a substitute for the bordeaux in the fighting of fungous diseases, the former is still the standby of the majority. For the benefit of those who have not used it we give the following brief directions for making: Dissolve five pounds of copper sulphate (blue vitriol) in a tobacco pail nearly full of water the evening before the solution is to be made. Next slake five pounds of fresh stone lime, using care to pour on sufficient water and to keep it stirred to prevent burning. This slaking of the lime may also be done the day before one intends to use the solution. When ready to mix dilute the bluestone solution to twenty-five gallons in a fifty gallon vinegar barrel; also dilute the lime as far as practicable in the receptacle in which it was slaked and pour slowly into the larger barrel containing the bluestone, stirring the while. If all of the lime is taken up by the first water applied, all right; if not, add more and stir thoroughly so all of the lime will be dissolved. Pour this into the big barrel and add enough more water to make fifty gallons. This gives what is called the 5-5-50 solution. Before using the mixture should be tested to see if there is an excess of lime by adding a few drops of prussiate of potash solution (a deadly poison) to a small quantity of the solution. If a chocolate colored precipitate is made it means the solution is acid and more lime should be added. A considerable excess of lime does no harm, and it is well to be on the safe side. The directions above given are for the preparation of a limited quantity of the solution for use in a hand spraying outfit, with a tank containing twenty to thirty gallons.

If a power outfit, with 150 or 200 gallon tank is used, a stock solution of the bluestone should be kept, made by suspending in a small tank or barrel containing two or three pails of water more bluestone crystals than will dissolve. This gives what is called a saturated solution, one gallon of which contains about three pounds of bluestone; hence to make fifty gallons of the mixture take one and two-third gallons of the bluestone solution and for 100 gallons of mixture three and one-third gallons, and so on. Likewise in the case of the lime a larger quantity will need to be slaked and may be kept covered with water between spraying intervals. In making up the larger quantities of the spray mixture the same rule should be followed in testing with the prussiate of potash to insure an excess of lime. In putting into the spray tank, whether large or small, the solution should be strained through a brass strainer or a couple of thicknesses of gunny sacking. The most effective spraying with the bordeaux is given just after the blossom stems separate, but before the individual buds open up. In treatments after this one commercial arsenate of lead may be added to the bordeaux solution at the rate of about two and a half pounds to fifty gallons of the solution. The spray will be most effective if applied with the heaviest pressure possible, while throughout the operation the solution should be kept thoroughly stirred in order to insure a uniform strength. In orchards which have never been sprayed the bordeaux should be applied three or four times at intervals of about three weeks.

TWO DAIRY HERDS.

In a cow census taken a short time ago in Tompkins county, N. Y., 103 dairy herds were tested with a view to ascertaining the performance of each cow from the standpoint of milk and butter fat production. The herds tested were average herds, and the findings probably apply to dairy herds in any other section of the country. The most profitable herd in the lot comprised nine mixed cows, which during the year produced an average of 6,817 pounds of milk, which sold for $92.02, while calves and other receipts came to $9.50. The feed for the year per cow cost $46.30, leaving a net profit of $55.22 per cow. The poorest herd in the lot comprised seven head of grade Durhams and grade Jerseys, which produced the paltry amount of 1,621 pounds of milk per annum. This brought $17.58, while the $4.28 from calves and other sources brought the total revenue up to $21.86. The bill of fare for these cows cost $44.30, making a net loss per cow of $22.44 for the year. The other 101 herds ranged between these two extremes—good, bad and indifferent. The demonstration proves quite conclusively that, while the man and the care have a great deal to do with gross and net returns in the dairy business, after all success or failure depends chiefly upon the cow—the milk making machine. In the two instances cited it is interesting to note that the cows which scored a net loss of $22.44 per head consumed a ration which cost but $1.91 per head less than those which returned a net profit of $55.22, yet gave less than one-

In all too many co-operative creameries the buttermaker is kept tied down too closely to scrubbing, cleaning and stoking work when this could be done just as well by much cheaper help and the buttermaker given this time to inquire more carefully into the stable and milk house conditions to be found on the farms of the several hundred patrons of the creamery. Owing to this shortsighted effort at economy there is little question that creameries of this type lose thousands of dollars annually, which they might just as well save in an improved butter quality by giving their buttermaker more help, thus enabling him to give them more of his service as a specialist.

WELL RECEIVED EVERYWHERE

Professor Svante Arrhenius, Noted Swedish Scientist, Now Touring the United States—Norwegians Desire American Squadron to Visit That Country—Race for South Pole Attracting Attention in Scandinavia.

SWEDEN.

Professor Svante Arrhenius, the Swedish chemist and scientist, is well received wherever he appears in this country. After giving a series of lectures at Lowell Institute in Boston Mass., he started west and has given lectures in Rock Island, Ill., and Chicago. He also appeared at the University of Minnesota, where he delivered a most interesting lecture before the student body. He was later given a banquet at the Odin club in Minneapolis. In all learned circles in the world the name of Arrhenius looms high and he today ranks foremost as one of the world's greatest chemists. He was born in Uppland, Sweden, in 1859. After taking his college degree he became a doctor of philosophy in 1884 and was engaged as teacher of chemistry and physics at the Stockholm university. He is now general director of the department of physics and chemistry at the Noble Institute in Stockholm. In 1903 he was awarded the Nobel prize for chemistry. He has written a comprehensive work entitled "The Origin of the Worlds," which has been translated into a number of languages and which has attracted a great deal of attention among scientists the world over. Professor Arrhenius has for some time ardently combatted the theory that the planet Mars is inhabited. He believes that Mars is an immense desert and therefore not habitable. His visit to this country is attracting considerable attention and he has been particularly well received by his countrymen here.

Swedish servant girls do not ask for little here below. This is particularly true of the servant girls in Stockholm, who all seem to be in clover and able almost to dictate their own terms. Says a Swedish writer: "If a girl advertises for a family place in Stockholm she may be sure to have from thirty to forty offers and if she gives her telephone number anxious housewives will stand on tiptoe listening to the terms dictated by the girl. Among the ordinary terms may be mentioned: From $5 to $7 a month in cash (that by the way means 28 crowns a month), much time off during the week, a summer vacation, and no evening work. Many girls are willing to work only for families of two persons. If they are told there are children in the family they very often answer that they do not figure on such positions."

Scandinavian, especially Swedish students of song lore, are greatly interested in the Swedish troubadour, Torkel Scholander, who is making a tour through the cities of the Northwest, giving a program of Scandinavian, German, French and English ballads and lyrics and accompanying himself on that strange little instrument known as the lute. Herr Scholander belongs to a family distinguished in Sweden for its development of national cultural ideals and to his father belongs much of the credit for reviving the art of singing the songs of the lute, as was the custom in days gone by. The singer has been flatteringly commented upon in all the cities which he has visited and in Chicago he made a decided hit some time ago.

Augustana College at Rock Island, Ill., Gustavus college at St. Peter, Minn., and Bethany college at Lindsborg, Kan., which are the three largest Swedish-American colleges in this country, will all hold their commencement exercises within a few weeks. Special programs will be rendered and prominent national speakers will deliver addresses.

During the vacancy caused by the removal of Dr. L. A. Johnston to St Paul, Minn., the First Swedish church in Moline, Ill., is being served by Rev. Henry O. Lindeblad, who was pastor of that congregation thirty-two years ago and who is now working in the interests of the Porto Rico mission among the Augustana Lutheran churches in this country.

The 300th anniversary of the printing of the King James version of the English Bible, was celebrated at a special service in the College chapel at Augustana college in Rock Island, Ill., recently. Addresses were delivered by Drs. Youngert, Bartholomew and Blomgren.

Engineer Bror Orton, employed by the Swedish government for the past year in studying mines and mining in the United States, is making a tour of the Western states at present.

Life on the Planet Mars.

Mars is inhabited by warm-blooded animals, according to the view of Professor Perrier, the celebrated French astronomer. The winter season on the flory planet, Professor Perrier says, is very cold and the summer very hot, and any forms of life there existent must be able to withstand great extremes of temperature. Mars, professor Perrier says, is the planet of mammals and birds. Owing to the lesser gravity, jumping and running animals would predominate. The difference in the seasons would produce quick-living creatures which complete their life in one season, such as butterflies, whose metamorphosis enables them to exist through different seasons.

On Mars flowering plants would grow in abundance, and Martian flora and fauna may resemble those of the temperate and polar regions of the earth. The greater length of the Martian year —668 days, with a proportionately longer summer—would favor living creatures and plants producing one generation to a summer. Professor Perrier imagines intense growth and reproduction, immensely tall grasses, huge fruits, gigantic insects.

Life being a greater struggle there, the writer is led to assume a high plane of intelligence in Martian insect life.

School Notes.

State Examinations begin Friday of this week and continue throughout next week. Necessarily, this prevents the continuance of the regular program in the high school and eighth grade.

Next Tuesday being Memorial Day and a legal holiday, there will be no session of school. Arrangements are being made for the observance of the occasion by the band committee and the school children will participate in the event.

Misses Ekholm and Porter will teach next year at Chehalis, Washington. The town is within seventeen miles of Windlock, where Miss Cipra will be located.

Earl R. Vandyke is the name of the gentleman who has been engaged to teach agriculture and allied subjects next year. He has had charge of similar work for two years at Iron River, Michigan, and was re-elected but prefers to teach in Minnesota.

The following is the program for the closing days of this school year: The baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Rev. Adolph B. Roseland of the United Lutheran Church at the Auditorium on the evening of Sunday, May 28th, services beginning at 8 p. m. The eighth grade graduation exercises will take place at the Lincoln assembly room Wednesday evening, May 31st. The class day program will be presented on Thursday evening at the Auditorium by the senior class, and commencement will occur at the same place on Friday evening following. Hon. Charles E. Elmquist, one of the state railway commissioners of Minnesota, will deliver the customary address. These exercises are free to the public and everybody is urgently requested to attend them all.

The monthly literary program, which is prepared in turn by the high school classes, will be presented at the high school next Friday evening at 8:30. A small charge of 10 cents admission will be asked. The program will be of a memorial nature. All old soldiers are invited and will be admitted free.

Some pupils will necessarily fail of promotion at the close of this school year. Various reasons may be assigned to account for these failures, but if regular attendance more than anything else prevents satisfactory progress. The report cards which the children will take home with them next week will give all particulars as to the school work for the year.

Careful inquiry at all colleges and normals in this and adjoining states where graduates of the local school are in attendance discloses the fact that not a single student is failing in his or her work this year. True, a few found the tasks difficult, but that was to be expected, but the success of the boys and girls is gratifying, particularly when it is known that many students were compelled to leave the state university this year because of failure to perform their work. Nearly all this delinquent list, which Registrar Pierce will supply on request, consists of graduates of the Minneapolis and St. Paul high schools. Every high school graduate of this or any other state high school is qualified to succeed at normal or college unless illness, homesickness or a "good time" intervenes to block study and progress.

Observance of Memorial Day.

Memorial Day will be observed in this city with the usual ceremonies appropriate unto the day and every effort is being made to have the observance of the day the most general and comprehensive in the history of this city.

The exercises will be held in the park at the west end of the iron bridge at 10 o'clock a. m. and from which place the procession headed by the Band and followed by the Militia, Fire Department, Old Soldiers in carriages, School Children and citizens will proceed in a body to the Greenwood cemetery where the usual ceremonies will be held.

The band, which will have charge of the services, will be led by Prof. H. G. Maxwell and appropriate music for the day has been arranged and will be rendered.

All places of business are requested by the mayor to be closed between the hours of 10 A. M. and 3 P. M.

The following are the old veterans of the Civil War who reside in the city and who will take part in the Memorial Day services:

BACK TO THE FARM.

The restless, eager boy may well reflect, when tempted to leave the often humdrum life of the farm for the city, with its salaried positions, its tinsel and glitter, on the step which has been decided on by W. C. Brown. There are so many men by the name of Brown that such a simple statement about him will not arouse much interest. Well, the Brown in question was born on a farm, grew tired of it, learned telegraphy, became an operator, then agent, assistant superintendent, and so on, until he became president of the New York Central, one of the greatest railroads in the land. But after a few years of the terrific grind and responsibility he is going back where he started from, to the farm, to enjoy a little quiet and peace and contentment before it is too late. He says that places of large salary—those at the top—are will-o'-the-wisps, elusive and disappointing and do not satisfy the longing of the one who covets them. He will soon retire to a fine farm he has and there devote his energy and brains to a scientific tilling of the soil and to raising the finest of blooded stock. It is a wholesome picture, and we need more men possessed of this man's judgment and the good sense to carry such a plan into execution.

If the field on which the stalks are standing is well supplied with humus —decaying vegetable matter—there is no particular reason for cutting them to pieces and plowing them under, as the mineral fertilizing elements—phosphorous and potash—will be left in the soil in the shape of ashes in case the stalks were burned. But the fact remains that the vast majority of soils are deficient in humus; hence it is better to cut the stalks to pieces and plow them under. When silos are installed on every farm, as they ought to be, this question of what to do with the stalks will take care of itself, as the bulk of them will be converted into ensilage, with nothing but six to eight inches of stubs left afield.

In a recent institute which the writer attended the question was raised by one farmer present whether if the Babcock test and weighing of the milk yield of cows were generally introduced there would not be an overproduction of butter. There seems to be very little likelihood of it, for if the test were universally applied close to a third of all the cows in the country would be put out of commission—the star boarders that are making 130 pounds of butter or less and are kept at a loss.

Fruit growers in some sections of the west where smudging has to be resorted to as a safeguard against spring frosts have provided themselves with alarms which are operated automatically by thermometers which set them going when the mercury reaches the danger line. Any one who has hiked out in a shiver on a frosty night every half hour between 10 p. m. and 3 a. m. to consult that old thermometer would quite likely not have to be argued into getting one of these newfangled alarms. They save sleep and nerve force.

Both the quality and quantity of the fruit from the average home garden strawberry bed could be greatly improved were the number of plants allowed to set for bearing reduced by half or more. This would give the plants remaining more room, more light, more fertility to draw on and would thus greatly increase their thriftiness and bearing capacity. Some of the best yields of strawberries on record have been made by beds in which the plants were set closely in the original bed, but allowed to send out no runners whatever, being cultivated according to the hill system, as it is usually known. It is too late now to help beds that are ready to bear, but the bed set this spring for fruiting next year can be so handled as to prevent this crowding and stunting of the plants, while beds that are bearing their first crop this season can be so thinned after the bed is renovated as to bring about the right conditions for next season. If the row system is to be followed in the new bed no more new plants should be allowed to take root than will comfortably fill the row, each plant being allowed a space of seven or eight inches square.

Drop Letters.

Beginning June 15, 1911, when City Delivery will be established, drop letters shall be mailed at the rate of two cents per ounce or a fraction thereof.

A drop letter is one addressed for delivery at the office at which it is posted. Such a letter is first class matter. There is no drop rate on any matter except letters.

The Baccalaureate Sermon.

The baccalaureate sermon for the high school seniors will be preached this year by Rev. Adolph B. Roseland of the United Lutheran church at the Auditorium on the evening of Sunday, May 28th, at 8 p. m. Everybody is extended a most cordial welcome to the services.

The Closing Exercises.

With the closing of the school year the customary exercises by the the various classes have been arranged and are as follows: The eighth grade graduation exercises will take place at Lincoln assembly room Wednesday evening, May 31st. The class day program will be presented on Thursday evening at the Auditorium by the senior class, and commencement will occur at the same place on Friday evening following.

Hon. Chas. E. Elmquist one of the state railway commissioners of Minnesota, will deliver the customary address. These exercises are free to the public and everybody is urgently requested to attend them all.

Likes the "Sunny South"

The writer is in receipt of a letter from Ed Rolfe who left here a short time ago for Florida where he went to look over a tract of land which he has purchased in that state. Mr. Rolfe states that he is well satisfied with his purchase and that it is, apparently, every bit as good as it was represented to be by the land company. Ed says the soil is very fertile down there and that all kinds of fruits imaginable thrive and bring bountious harvests.

Had a Painful Accident.

While driving out into the country Monday morning Ole Neeja had a very painful accident. Mr. Neeja was seated on a sack in the wagon and underneath this was a chain, one end of which was dangling by one side of the wagon. This in some manner got caught in the wheel, giving the sack on which Mr. Neeja was seated a sudden jar, throwing him headlong out of the wagon box with the result that he sustained a broken collar bone. While the injury is very painfull Mr. Neeja is getting along as well as could be expected.

Sash and Door Factory to Reopen.

The Pioneer Sash & Door Factory, which has been closed for the last couple of years, will be reopened during the course of the summer, and the work of getting things in readiness will be commenced soon.

A deal has been closed whereby the property passed into the hands of C. O. G. Johnson, of Moorhead; Mr. Ostby, Fargo; E. B. Charlson, Perley and J. P. Grotte, of Waubun.

Mr. Ostby, who has had many years' experience in this business and who at present owns a factory at Fargo, will have active management of the plant.

Pennington County Better Roads Federation.

A. M. Arpin, representing the Automobile Club; E. Sedlacek, the City Council; Daniel Shaw, the County Commissioners and A. H. Fasel, the Commercial Club, formed a few days ago a Good Roads Federation.

A. M. Arpin is President, Daniel Shaw Secretary and E. Sedlacek Treasurer.

This committee will strive to put the roads leading into the city in good shape and to keep them so. A great deal of grading and dragging has already been done and with co-operation and assistance of the townships and all interested, the work will be continued until it freezes. The committee is convinced that it is only by thorough and continuous work that permanent good can be reached.

County Treasurer Trovaton wishes to announce that his office will be open next Monday evening for the benefit of the tax payers who are unable to get around during the day.

Crookston Travelers Sunday.

The Crookston U. C. T. will arrive here next Sunday morning and in the afternoon will try conclusions with the local travelers. This game promises to be a fast one and everyone should turn out.

Closed for the Season.

Last Friday afternoon the Commercial Normal school closed its doors for the summer vacation, to be opened again on September 5th. The school this season has shown marked progress and has a large attendance. With favorable conditions this season the attendance will undoubtedly be doubled at the forthcoming school year. The same staff of teachers will be returned next year.

Big Bear Blocks Highway.

Roseau, Minn., May 23.—Herman Norquist, living north of this city, had a lively experience with a large bear Saturday. Bruin jumped into the road ahead of his team, and showed no inclination to move. Norquist left his wagon and rammed a pitchfork into the beast, with the result that it snatched it from him and broke it into pieces, and tore the garments off Norquist's body before he succeeded in getting upon his wagon again.

Rudolph Manthy has not sold his residence on the east side as stated in the News last week.

Sangerfest Approaching.

Reports coming in from the various choirs comprising the famous Red River Valley Scandinavian Singers' Association indicate that the "stevne" in Thief River Falls June 23, 24 and 25 is to set a new mark for the number of singers present and also a new standard for the quality of songs rendered. With a splendid, well trained chorus of 200 voices and an orchestra of 38 pieces, a world famous tenor soloist like Rolf Hammer, this "stevne" is certainly a thing that will be remembered in the annals of Thief River Falls. As an additional vocal soloist, the executive committee have been fortunate enough to secure Ingolf Grindeland, who is already known locally as a singer, who has during the past year made a great hit in Minneapolis, where he sings in one of the large churches. Another attraction will be J. Shefstad, of Crookston, who has been engaged as violin soloist. Mr. Shefstad is a Leipsic graduate, is well known locally and needs no further introduction. Besides these, Mrs. G. Halvorson and Mrs. O. F. Mellby, well known locally, will render vocal selections and will ably represent Thief River Falls at the "stevne."

State's Best Land Sale.

Roseau, Minn., May 23.—What is said to be the largest land sale ever held in any county in the state by state officials was held here yesterday when 16,900 acres of land in Roseau county were disposed of at an average price of $7 an acre.

Several years ago the lands could not have been sold for a third of the amount received, but drainage canals and state aid for the reclamation of the big swamps in this territory have opened the eyes of settlers.

Bidders were present from Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and North and South Dakota. Over 250 persons attended the sale.—Minneapolis Journal.

SETTING AN ORCHARD.

Doubtless quite a number of our readers will be setting an orchard for the first time this spring, and a few suggestions may be helpful. With a view to saving ground the novice often makes the mistake of setting the trees too close together. We have known of cases where they were set twice as thick in the row as intended ultimately, but the trouble with this is that a fellow seldom has the courage to cut out every other tree after it has grown several years and begun to bear. It is better to put the trees the right distance apart at first, putting the ground between to some annual crop, which can be cultivated. Twenty feet apart is about right for peaches, twenty-five for pears and from twenty-eight to forty for apples, depending upon the variety. For family use a selection of varieties, a couple of trees each, may be made so as to give fruit through as long a period as possible. For commercial purposes it is well to set but one or two standard varieties if the acreage is limited and not more than two or three if it is considerable. The trees should be a year old, with well developed fibrous roots, which should be pruned back carefully to a length of about eight or nine inches. The writer has found the easiest way to plant to first set three rows of sight stakes across the field, one at each edge and one through the middle, putting them tree distance apart, next setting similar rows across the field at right angles to these. With this preparation one can sight both ways for position in any part of the field and set a stake accurately without aid of string or measuring rod. With this method one should have the setting board—four feet long, five inches wide, peg notches an inch square cut in the center of each and a notch cut in from one side so as to give a space about an inch square at the exact center of the board. After setting the stake where the tree is to be slip on the board so stake is at center, set stakes in end notches, remove tree stake and board, dig hole, slip tree in, replace setting board and hold tree in place in middle notch while filling in the earth. The trees should be set five or six inches deeper than they stood in the nursery. Within a few days after the trees are set they should be pruned back to a uniform height, from eighteen to thirty inches, depending upon whether one wishes a low or high headed tree. However, the low headed, open topped tree is favored by the majority of the best orchardists.

There were some changes made in the game and fish laws by the last legislature. We would call attention to two quite important changes. First, it is now necessary for hunters to take out two licenses, one for small game and one for large game. The big game license must be procured three days before the opening of the season on November 7, and each hunter is entitled to one deer only. The other law requires that non-residents must have a license to fish with hook and line.

ORCHARD HEATING.

The question of heating orchards during frosty nights to prevent a destruction of the bloom has passed beyond the experimental stage, and this year every level headed orchardist who lives in a latitude that is likely to be visited by a spring frost when the trees are in bloom should make preparations at once to safeguard himself against frost damage. Where it can be procured at a price of from 4 to 6 cents per gallon crude petroleum will serve the purpose as well or better than any other material and has the advantage that, being in a covered pot, it is not rendered useless by a rain, as is quite often the case with wood or litter of several kinds. There are several good oil burners on the market, and those made without soldered joints are preferable. Experience has shown that about fifty burners should be used per acre and so set that the wind will blow the smoke and heat from them into the limbs of the trees. In a majority of cases the critical—coldest—time during a night in which frost occurs is between 3 and 6 a. m., and the burners should be held in readiness until the time mentioned. Frequently conditions prevailing in the early evening will indicate a frost later, but a change of wind may prevent it. Two or three thermometers of a good make should be stationed through the orchard so as to keep tab on the temperature. It is well to remember that both apple and peach blossoms in full bloom will stand from four to five degrees of frost without serious damage; hence if only two or three degrees of frost threaten it will not be necessary to make more than a smudge on the east side of the orchard just before sunup so as to prevent a too rapid thawing of the blossoms. Stumps, cordwood, brush and other litter have also been used with good results, fewer fires being required with materials making a larger blaze and giving more heat. In some of the orange growing sections of California orchards of from fifty to a hundred acres have been protected by driving through them in the early morning hours low wagons bearing fires so fed as to make dense smudges. Whatever method be followed in protecting the orchard from frost, preparations for heating or smudging should be made well in advance so that one will not be taken unawares. Instances are numerous where the money spent in orchard heating has been returned manifold in the crop return of a single season.

TRANSPLANTING SHADE TREES.

There are a few points to remember in the transplanting of shade trees that may be helpful to the readers of these notes if they have never had any experience along this line. In the first place, one will get a tree much sooner if he takes a sapling three inches in diameter at the ground than he will with smaller trees but a couple of years from the seed. After the selection of trees has been made the earth should be removed from the roots within a radius of two feet of the trunk and the lateral roots cut at this point. The tree may then be bent over and the downward growing roots cut so that they will be at least eighteen inches long. The roots should be kept shaded from the sun to prevent drying out while being carried to the place of planting. It is well to prune any torn or broken roots so as to give a clean healing surface. In setting the tree the hole should be dug so as to give plenty of room and the tree set a bit lower than it was in its native haunt. Before the removal from the wood lot where it grew the branches should be cut back so that they will be no longer than the roots. If the season should be very dry, the trees should be watered. Trees like the elm should be set not closer than thirty-five feet, and if one is looking a long time ahead forty or fifty feet is none too great a distance. With the hard maple, ash, hackberry, birch, thirty feet is about right. A plan followed by many is to set trees at one-half the desired distance and a few years later thin out. The chief defect with this plan is, however, that the thinning out process is likely to be postponed too long, resulting in a deforming of the trees that remain.

A REAL TIME SAVER.

Before the spring work on the farm begins in earnest it would be an excellent idea for the man of the house to make for his wife a fireless cooker. It will not only be a great saver of fuel, but will save energy and strength for the wife, especially when the heat of summer comes, by eliminating hours over a hot range, which to many women is one of the hardest and most exhausting features of their work. With the hay box, dinner can be started over the morning fire, put into the cooker and left there without further attention until time to serve the meal, when it can be taken up and enjoyed by the housekeeper without being herself half cooked and too tired to eat. The cooker has still another point in its favor, which alone ought to commend it. It is the fact that in cooking none of the flavor of the meat or vegetable can escape, as in ordinary boiling on the top of a stove; hence the dishes so cooked are especially savory. Oatmeal can be started the evening before and after a night in the cooker is hard to beat for breakfast. While the ordinary homemade cooker can be used only for things which are to be boiled or stewed, by the introduction of soapstones browning can be accomplished.

Six bodies were recovered from the Licking river at Saylorsville, Ky., following a cloudburst along its headwaters and it is believed other lives were lost. Twenty-six houses were washed away.

It is with hens as it is with hired men and dairy cows, "handsome is that handsome does." This statement is prompted by a glance at the picture of a celebrated Plymouth Rock hen that has a record of 230 eggs in a year. She was very short legged, comb twisted and ill shaped, tail feathers looking as if she had been the sport of a half grown puppy, and yet she delivered the goods—fifty-six pounds of eggs which sold for $4.75. Her bill of fare cost $1.50, leaving a net revenue of $3.25, more than is got from thousands of cows over the land.

Our readers know in a general way that there was a persistent drought over the country the past year, but perhaps few of them have seen it expressed in definite terms. The writer wished to have this data and so wrote the director of a north Iowa United States weather station. The director reported that covering a period of years the normal rainfall at his station was 31.23 inches, but that for the year from March 1, 1910, to March 1, 1911, the precipitation had been but 16.44 inches, which was a shortage of 14.79 inches as compared with the normal rainfall. Assuming that a pint of water weighs a pound, these figures mean that in the twelvemonth period there was a shortage of 1,366 tons of water per acre. Taking in connection with this the fact that an inch of water soaks down a foot in loose soil, one gets a good idea of the depth from which water was drawn last season to supply the needs of growing crops.

A reader of these notes living in a section where very little has been done along the line of growing alfalfa inquires how to go at it to get a stand, his purpose being to make a spring sowing of the seed. The writer is of the opinion that more satisfactory results will be had in getting a start with alfalfa if the sowing is delayed until the middle of August. The land used for the purpose should be well drained, enriched with seven or eight loads of barnyard manure per acre and just as free as possible from weed seeds. A piece of land from which a crop of wheat or oats has just been removed would serve the purpose very nicely, as a good share of the weed seed germinates within a short time after the grain is cut, while the remaining seed can be killed in the preparation of the soil for the alfalfa seed. While the seed can be broadcasted, there is little question that more uniform germination will be secured if it is drilled in. From fifteen to twenty-five pounds of seed may be used, the smaller quantity being required if a drill is used. There is a species of bacteria which works on the roots of the alfalfa plant, and a much thriftier growth will be secured if these are introduced into the soil. This may be done by mixing soil from an established alfalfa field with the manure with which the field is fertilized, or soil from the roadside where the wild sweet clover has grown will answer the same purpose, or one can make application to the department of agriculture at Washington for a little tube of the nitrogen fixing bacteria, which is diluted in water and the seed wet with this a few hours before sowing. After being treated the seed should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The writer has known of a number of instances in which a good stand of alfalfa has been secured by sowing the seed in the spring, but in these cases the soil was free from weed seeds, and the young alfalfa plants got a foothold at once and were not swamped with rank weeds, as is so often the case.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR FEEDING STEERS.

The past winter saw the first sack of cottonseed meal shipped into the section in which the writer lives. It costs laid down $34.50 per ton, which is about a dollar less than the price of linseed oil meal, and this notwithstanding the fact that the chemical analysis shows that the former feed contains nearly 10 per cent more protein than the latter. This makes a cheap and excellent source of protein, while numerous experiments which have been made show that, given in a proper ration with corn, about one to ten, feeding animals do exceptionally well on it. The feeder who is trying this cottonseed meal for the first time is also feeding with it equal parts of alfalfa, which is a prepared feed made of ground alfalfa leaves and stems and molasses. This contains a trifle less than 20 per cent of protein and costs about $5 per ton laid down. Notwithstanding the high price at which they are sold, this use of these protein concentrates makes possible a more economical ration than if corn should be used exclusively.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York is lending aid to a back to the land movement that is, to say the least, unique and interesting. She selected twenty young women from many applicants and has placed them on her farm, Brookholt, on Long Island. They dress in bloomers, broad brimmed hats and boys' shoes and are to do all the work on the place, including woodchopping and caring for the horses. They are to be given thorough training in household duties, and when the time comes will take up plowing, planting and the raising of poultry. At the end of two months, if they like "farming," they will have an opportunity to purchase small tracts from their benefactress. This plan may work all right awhile, but the chances are that most of these girls will have a man around the premises before many moons.

PAINTING NOTABLE AMERICANS

Anders Zorn, Famous Swedish Artist, Kept Busy During His Recent Visit to United States—Norwegian Minister at Washington Studying Home Life of Countrymen in North Dakota—Discovery of Rich Gold Ores in Iceland Reported.

SWEDEN.

The world famous Swedish artist, Anders Zorn, who for some time has been sojourning in the East, where he also served on the art jury at the art exhibition in Pittsburg, Pa., recently donated two of his most beautiful etchings to the Swedish Old People's Home in New York city. During his visit in Pittsburg and New York he painted a portrait of Andrew Carnegie and also a portrait of President Taft of Washington, D. C. He has also made portrait paintings of Senator Aldrich, Vice President Sherman and the oil king, John D. Rockefeller. Indeed, Zorn has more orders from prominent political and financial men in the United States than any other artist. He painted a fine portrait of Grover Cleveland and wife in the eighties when he made his first visit to America. He has now left for Italy, where he will be present as a juryman in an art exhibition in Rome.

Plans have been made for the building of a home for the unemployed in Stockholm and it is hoped to get the actual work under way this summer. The committee in charge has already raised 12,500 crowns and now the Widow Queen Sophia has augmented this sum by the donation of 2,000 crowns. It is also the intention to use the proposed home to help released prisoners until such a time as they can again secure work and become self supporting. The need of a philantrophy of this kind has long been felt in the city and a great many influential people are backing the movement.

The national fisheries department has just issued a report on their findings in their recent investigations at Dalalfven, a river which used to be famous for its salmon fishing. The report indicates that the salmon is all but extinct now and assigns as the reason that the waters have been rendered unfit for fish by the throwing of refuse into the water from various factories on the bank. The continual floating of logs in the stream has also interferred with the spawning of the fish.

The royal archivarius of Sweden has sent a circular letter to all the diocesan consistories in the kingdom, asking whether there were any congregations in their respective dioceses which had no obligations to meet and to what extent the churches of such congregations were used for worship or for other purposes. He makes inquiry also whether the roofs of such buildings are in proper condition.

The John Ericsson Monument association is the name of an organization which has just been effected in the state of Illinois for the purpose of soliciting funds for erecting a suitable monument in honor of Captain John Ericsson, the inventor of the Monitor, at the state capitol at Springfield, Ill. The association will attempt to raise at least $40,000 for this purpose and will set at work at once.

The French government has decided to introduce Swedish telephones in all public buildings all over France and will spend several million francs to secure the service. The immense contract has been let to the L. M. Ericksson Telephone company of Stockholm, a Swedish-French Telephone company, which has been doing business in the Swedish capital for a number of years.

Madame Ezaline Boheman, a woman journalist of Stockholm, has been chosen as editor of the Swedish Tourist society's annual Yearbook for the next year. The book is issued annually by the Swedish Tourist association and contains a world of information regarding the Swedish tourist system and the places of interest for tourists to visit while in the old country.

A new president of Upsala college in Kenilworth, N. J., Rev. E. J. Sodegren of Burlington, Ia., was elected at the recent session of the New York conference of the Swedish Augustana synod. The president will succeed President Rev. H. Beck, who has held the position for the past seventeen years.

According to a recent rumor from Chicago John Forsell, the famous Stockholm baritone, has again been engaged by the Metropolitan Opera company and will appear in Chicago next season. Director Dippel is reported to have offered a very handsome salary.

The cruiser Fylgia will represent Sweden at the 1,000th anniversary at Rouen, when there will be an international naval exhibition there.

NORWAY.

Says the Engineering Magazine regarding the Bergen-Christiania railway: One of the most interesting railway enterprises completed in Europe within the last few years is the line that has been recently opened across the Scandinavian peninsula for the purpose of providing direct communication between the city of Bergen on the Atlantic seaboard and Christiania, the capital of Norway. In constructing the line great natural difficulties had to be, and were, successfully overcome. The main difficulty was to find an easy passage through the mountains of the Dovrefjeld range. The district in question is the most mountainous in Norway, with short, narrow valleys, from which the mountains rise abruptly, if not perpendicularly, to great heights. Altogether there are no less than 184 tunnels on the line, representing a total length of about twenty-four miles. The line crosses fourteen bridges. The constructural work entailed the excavation of nearly 36,000,000 cubic feet of earth and 28,000,000 cubic feet of rock on the high mountain section, while the consumption of dynamite ran to 1,800,000 pounds. There are fifty-five stations between the two terminal points.

As the official envoy extraordinary of the government of Norway, Mr. Bryn, minister to the United States, when he arrived at Grand Forks, N. D., last Wednesday, May 17th, for the purpose of delivering an address, also made extensive preparations for investigating the home life of Norwegian people living in that state. North Dakota, whose percentage of Norwegian people is believed to be higher than that of any other state, affords an opportunity for this investigation, the direct purpose of which is to inform the mother country and government as to the success or nonsuccess of her former subjects in this, their new home. Arrangements have been made at Grand Forks for a three days' trip for the Norwegian minister through Vice Consul H. Bendecke of Grand Forks, which will carry Minister Bryn to several points in the northern part of the state. Grand Forks gave a banquet in honor of Minister Bryn, which was attended by about 250 persons. Governor John Burke was present and delivered an address of welcome to the distinguished visitor.

A Christiania dispatch says: The Norwegian government has taken up the adaptation of wireless telegraphy to the peculiar geographic conditions of northern lands. Central radiograph stations are to be established in Christiania, Mandal, Bergen and Hammerfest, which will be kept in touch on the south with the coasts of Denmark, Germany and Holland, on the west with England and Scotland, and on the east with Russia. Most novel of the features of the new system will be constant communication with polar waters through stations in Hammerfest and Spitzbergen. Two year-round wireless stations will be established on the coast of Spitzbergen and first reports from polar expeditions in the future may be transmitted to the world by this route. Incidentally, something in the way of business with whaling and fishing vessels as well as with tourist ships in summer is expected.

Norwegians held "syttende Mai" celebrations in all of the large cities of the United States last Wednesday. In Chicago, New York, Boston, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Duluth, Seattle, San Francisco and Racine and Madison, Wis., important celebrations were held and prominent speakers were lauding old Norway. Singing organizations appeared at each meeting and altogether the day has never been so generally observed all over the United States as last Wednesday. In St. Paul a festival was held at the Masonic temple under the auspices of the Normaendenes singing societies and among the speakers were Mayor Keller, J. Adam Bede and Governor Eberhart.

The university at Christiania, as also the one at Breslau, Germany, will observe the 100th anniversary of their founding in the next few months. Professor Noreen of the University of Upsala, Sweden, has recently been appointed delegate to the festivities of the latter and Professor Schueck, rector magnificus of Upsala university, will represent the institution at Christiania.

DENMARK.

An English Mining company has discovered rich gold ores in Iceland and is now negotiating with the Danish government to procure the rights to operate same. British mining engineers have been very busy in Iceland lately, trying to buy up all the farm property they can, where they believe that they can find gold.

Iceland will soon have its own university. The decision to establish such an institution was reached in 1909 and now the althing has appropriated the necessary funds. It is expected that the institution will open its doors next fall.

The receipts of the postal department of Denmark during the fiscal year of 1910-1911 were 16,003,100 crowns, as compared with 15,177,600 crowns during the preceding year. This is a gain of 825,500 crowns, or 5.4 per cent.

Last season's crops in Denmark were valued at 550,000,000 crowns. This is a slight decrease in the total amount as compared with the previous year. MARION S. NORELIUS.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Simonson and Laura Simonson, his wife as mortgagors to Peter Kiene of Dubuque, Iowa as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southeast quarter of section twelve, township one hundred fifty-four, north, range forty five, west of the fifth principal meridian and containing one hundred sixty acres according to government survey; now situated in Pennington county, Minnesota.

Which said mortgage bears date April 23, 1907 and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county, on April 26th, 1907 at 11:30 A. M. in Book 10 of Mortgages at page 400, and

Whereas the said Peter Kiene by an instrument in writing dated May 1, 1907 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on May 14, 1907 in Book 32 of Mortgages at page 521, assigned said mortgage to Louis Kupferschmidt, and

Whereas in proceedings duly had for that purpose pursuant to the laws of the state of Minnesota, the land described in said mortgage, and herein above described became a part of a new county organized on or about November 23, 1910 and known and called Pennington County, and

Whereas the said Louis Kupferschmidt by an instrument in writing dated May 2, 1911 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Pennington County on the 10th day of May, 1911 in Book 9 of mortgages at page 111 duly reassigned said mortgage to said Peter Kiene who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest the sum of nine hundred one dollars and fifty eight cents and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained and the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction for cash by the sheriff of the county of Pennington in the state of Minnesota at the front door of the Auditorium Building in the city of Thief River Falls, in said Pennington county on Saturday June 24, 1911 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof including an attorney's fee of fifty dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Dated May 11, 1911:

Peter Kiene
Assignee of mortgage.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. G. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 5th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 420. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 20th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of Mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 10th day of march, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; said land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the City of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m., of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated may 1st, 1911.

C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen,
Assignees of mortgage.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

ASKS FOR AN INJUNCTION

Minneapolis Representative Starts Court Proceedings Against the "Seven Senator" Bill.

Charles R. Fowler, during the last session of the legislature a representative from Hennepin county, has filed suit in the Hennepin county district court asking that the secretary of state be permanently enjoined from "in any way recognizing senate file 360 as a valid law."

Senate file 360 is the "seven senator" bill by which it is proposed to limit the representation in the state senate from big counties to seven members.

The suit is brought by Representative Fowler as a taxpayer. It sets out the following reasons for the prayer for the injunction:

First—That the bill was transferred from the house to the senate while a motion was pending in the house and that it is, therefore, illegal.

Second—That the bill, not having been signed by the governor, cannot, therefore, be legally submitted to the voters.

The suit is based upon the allegation that the act is in contravention of that part of the Constitution of the United States which grants free and equal representation. It sets forth that C. R. Fowler, as a taxpayer, and the county of Hennepin are deprived of equal representation and that they are taxed without adequate representation.

IN DOUBT ABOUT MEASURE

Minnesota Republicans In House Are Studying Free List Bill.

Most of the Minnesota Republican members of the house appear to be in an uncertain frame of mind over the Democratic free list bill now pending. Representative Davis is the only one of them who has announced that he will vote for it. Mr. Davis made known his attitude toward the measure in the debate on the Canadian agreement last week.

The other Minnesota Republicans are giving the free list bill careful thought and study. The chances are that Representative Stevens will vote against the bill, although he has not indicated so far just how he will side. Representative Volstead does not believe the bill will benefit the Northern farmer in the slightest degree. However, he may vote for it. Representative Lindbergh is thinking it over. Representative Anderson said that for the present he did not care to say how he would vote.

CENSURE SOLDIERS' HOME

Inmates of Minnesota Institution Make Complaint.

Inmates of the state soldiers' home declare the institution is mismanaged as to health and table. Officers in charge of the home reply these charges are made by dissatisfied old men and that these veterans are given all that is good for them, if not all they demand.

The inmates make the following specific charges: That only two light, crash roller towels are permitted each day to each washroom used by from fifteen to thirty men; that no milk or sugar is put on the dining tables and they are compelled to buy their own; that the visit of the Minneapolis health commissioner last Saturday who gave the management a "white wash" was a farce and that the officers in charge treat the inmates more like men under restraint than as those worn out in the service of their country.

INSISTS WHITTIER MUST GO

Governor Takes Positive Action Regarding Training School.

Governor Adolph O. Eberhart has written a letter to the state board of control putting the resignation or dismissal of F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the Red Wing training school for boys, squarely up to the board. One of the two alternatives is left for acceptance by the board.

The letter was written after a conference between Governor Eberhart, Superintendent Whittier and Judge Wilson of Red Wing, Mr. Whittier's attorney.

RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS ELECT

Discharged St. Paul Man Is Chosen President.

The Brotherhood of Railway Mail Clerks of the Tenth division, with headquarters in St. Paul, showed its teeth to the postoffice department by electing Carl C. Van Dyke, recently dismissed, president of the organization.

The votes of all the men in the division were counted by the executive committee at the West hotel in Minneapolis and when the result was announced Van Dyke was found to have received 681 votes to 363 cast for O. L. Johnson.

The most significant feature of the election was the turning down of all the candidates for office who are active in the Railway Mail association, which is said to be in high favor with the postoffice department as an offset to the activity of the brotherhood. Mr. Johnson is a member of the old association.

F. B. CLARKE DEAD IN WEST

Prominent In St. Paul Business Circles for Many Years.

Word has been received at St. Paul that Francis B. Clarke, formerly president of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle, is dead at Portland, Ore. Mr. Clarke retired from active duty about a year ago because of ill health. He was in St. Paul a couple of months ago, however, apparently in fair health, and the news of his death came as a great shock to St. Paul railroad officials.

Mr. Clarke lived in St. Paul for about thirty-five years and was popular and active in local circles. Mr. Clarke was made president of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle when it was organized about two years ago by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. He was a close friend of James J. Hill.

DEMOCRATS WILL HOLD BIG MEETING

Notables to Attend Gathering at St. Paul.

St. Paul will be the nerve center of Democracy on June 1.

On that date the eyes of politicians in every state in the Union will be directed toward St. Paul, for Democrats of the Northwest may determine then to whom they will give their support for the next presidential convention.

On that day the recent victories of the Democratic party in state elections and its feat of deposing Republican rule in the house and the elevation of Champ Clark to the speakership will be celebrated in a jubilee, the like of which has never before been seen in this part of the country. The gathering will be a departure in the annals of the national Democratic party.

William Jennings Bryan, Alton B. Parker, Governor Norris of Montana, Governor John Burke of North Dakota, Congressman Hammond and probably Governor Harmon of Ohio will be present. Democrats representing the Dakotas, Iowa, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and probably Wisconsin and Michigan will be present. It is expected that more than 1,000 Democrats will be on hand from the Northwest to celebrate what one Democrat terms "the new birth of national Democracy."

SHOWS HUGE EXPRESS PROFIT

Rate Hearing at St. Paul Brings Out Startling Figures.

Continuing the investigation of the Wells Fargo Express company at St. Paul Attorney General Simpson introduced evidence tending to show that the company enjoys an earning ability equal to that of any other company in the United States.

With a property investment of not more than $5,000,000 and assets of $33,000,000—of which $28,000,000 is invested in stocks and bonds, mortgages, notes, loans and deposits in banks—the company not only is paying 10 per cent dividend but is rapidly accumulating a vast surplus.

While G. W. Hillman, expert accountant for the state, was on the witness stand Mr. Simpson asked:

"Assuming that the Wells Fargo company should go out of business as an express company today, withdraw all its agents and continue to live on the money it has invested, what per cent could it annually pay on capital stock?"

"Seven per cent," replied Mr. Hillman.

Woman Dies of Exposure.

Mrs. Caroline Nystrom of Becker, aged eighty-nine, was found dead in a pasture near her home. She had been missing for three days. Coroner Trumbull decided that death was due to exposure and that a sudden mental derangement was the cause of her departure from home.

Child Wife Commits Suicide.

Mrs. Charles [illegible] shot herself in the forehead with a revolver at her home in Fairfax. Her husband and two small children survive her. She was not yet twenty years old and was living happily with her family, so far as known.

The United States geological survey, which is making a topographical map of the state in co-operation with the state drainage commission, has just completed a map of the section around Barrett. This map represents by far the most complete survey ever made of that section of the state. It shows so clearly every physical feature of the country covered that the character of any part of it, as well as the shapes of the hills and valleys, can be seen at a glance.

It is understood that Lieutenant Governor Gordon will name Senators A. J. Rockne of Zumbrota, G. H. Sullivan of Stillwater, Albert Schaller of Hastings, J. P. Boyle of Eveleth and Manley Fosseen of Minneapolis as the committee further to investigate workingmen's compensation. A resolution instructing him to appoint a committee of five to investigate and report to the next legislature was adopted by the senate during the closing days.

Mrs. Ole G. Othus of Renville has been committed to the state insane asylum at St. Peter following a trip to that institution during which she saw her husband, who has been confined in the institution for several months. It is believed that the shock of seeing her husband in the asylum and the sights of the hospital unnerved the woman and caused her to lose her reason.

At the hearing in the Fergus Falls city election contest case Judge Nye found that license had won. The recount shows that license men have one majority of all the votes cast. The original returns showed a tie, as blank votes were counted same as if cast against license.

The movement of ore is beginning to get under way for the summer at Hibbing, both over the Missabe and the Great Northern roads. The roads are sending out seven trains a day at the present time.

Mayor James C. Haynes has issued an order to the chief of police prohibiting the use of slot machines in Minneapolis and ordering the police chief to confiscate all slot machines.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

After suffering for thirty hours Rasmus Hatedal of Averill, one of the oldest farmers in point of residence in Clay county, is dead at Moorhead. Hatedal hurriedly saddled a horse on his farm with the intention of going out to round up cattle. The horse began to pitch and buck, finally throwing itself into the air and turning over backward, pinning the rider to the ground. The pommel of the heavy stock of the saddle was driven into the abdomen of the rider, who lay on the ground in an unconscious condition for some time after the accident until found by neighbors.

O. U. Caddegan, known also as John Moore, and John Armstrong, was arrested at Los Angeles, Cal., under advices from Chief of Police Mealy of Minneapolis. The man is accused of swindling H. F. Chaffee of Amenia, N. D., out of $25,000 in Minneapolis in October, 1909.

Ralph Lane, aged thirty-five years, was cremated in the Bain hotel, which burned to the ground at Ball Club, Itasca county. Every one else got out. In the excitement he was not missed until too late to rescue him.

Joseph Sauro, on trial at St. Paul charged with having slain his wife Dec. 6, 1910, was found guilty of murder in the second degree. The verdict carries with it life imprisonment.

After giving $30 to the church Alphonse Leclaire, a janitor at the French Catholic Church of St. Ann, committed suicide by shooting himself in his room at Minneapolis.

Four summer homes on Lafayette avenue, Minnetonka Beach, on the north shore of Lake Minnetonka, were totally destroyed by fire, entailing a loss estimated at $25,500.

DOZEN BUILDINGS TORN DOWN

Terrific Wind Storm Strikes the Town of Felton.

A great funnel shaped cloud, bringing with it a terrific wind, bore down upon Felton, a small town north of Moorhead, tore down a dozen buildings, blew in every good sized window in the town and tore up trees in large numbers.

The only one hurt, as far as could be learned, was Andrew Peterson, a farmer living two and one-half miles west of Felton, who sustained serious injuries about the head. He was in his barn when it was overturned.

The buildings blown down were mostly machine sheds and barns. In addition to this damage the wind took the top off a box car and overturned several wagons, with teams hitched to them, causing much excitement.

RATE CASE APPEAL FILED

Attorney for State of Minnesota Asks for Early Hearing.

The appeal of the state of Minnesota from the decision of Judge Walter H. Sanborn of the United States circuit court on the case involving the validity of the Minnesota commodity and passenger rates, was filed in the supreme court of the United States by Attorney General Edward T. Young for the state. With the appeal Mr. Young filed a petition to have the case advanced for argument soon after the beginning of the new term in October. Hale Holden, representing the railroads, concurred in the petition for a hearing at the earliest possible date.

White Seal Beer

"It's the Malt." "It's the Hops."

When one's vitality is at low ebb, the doctor says "drink beer."

Your old time family doctor used this prescription frequently and it is still more commonly used by the modern physician.

For two reasons:

First, because the strength giving properties of beer are now more generally recognized by the medical profession than ever before. Second, because the bottling of beer at the brewery renders it much more convenient to use than in the old days of the cumbersome cellar cask.

WHITE SEAL BEER contains barley malt, hops and a tinge of alcohol. The barley is a food, the hops a tonic and the trifle of alcohol an aid to digestion. It is a great combination.

NEW PROBE IS NECESSARY

Minnesota Attorney General Rules on Whittier Case.

Specific charges will have to be filed before the state board of control and a hearing be held before F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the state training school at Red Wing, can be removed from office.

This was decided in an opinion given by George T. Simpson, attorney general, in answer to questions asked him by the board of control.

"The duty of the board of control is to await the filing before it of specific charges by some person, who may be so advised; other than a member of the board of control," Mr Simpson says.

He is charged by the Maryland Casualty company of Baltimore with having appropriated to his own use $574 last July.

Child Is Fatally Burned.

Burning kerosene which poured over the eighteen-months-old son of Mrs. Mollie Schreiber of St. Paul caused burns that resulted in the death of the child at the city hospital where it was taken after the accident. The mother was severely burned while attempting to save the child's life and the home, which also was menaced by the flames.

Meets Death in the Air.

When George H. Hallman of Mankato, lineman for the General Electric company of Minneapolis, went to Twenty-seventh street and Stevens avenue to repair a break in the lines he came in contact with a high voltage wire, which threw him across the crossarm lifeless. The fire department was called to remove the body.

Active steps for the trial of 500 alleged Indian land fraud cases will be taken May 22 in the United States district court at Fergus Falls, when a master in chancery probably will be appointed to take the testimony. This work will last all summer or longer and some of the cases will be ready for submission to the district court next fall.

VOL XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1911 NUMBER 23

U. C. T. TEAMS BREAK EVEN

Local Knights of the Grip Put It Over Crookston Travelers Sunday.

Hit and Run the Slogan for the Day —Final Score Was 18 to 15.

Anyone who witnessed the game between the local knights of the grip and the Crookston travelers last Sunday have no kick coming even if both teams run in more scores than they had a license to get and almost as many errors were made as those tallied up against the big leaguers this season. What was lacking in the game from the point of excellent playing was more than made up by its many extremely funny features.

Manager Bakke had taught his "kids" that the essential feature of the national game was to hit and run and that's about all there was to it, as in every inning, the second excepted, one or more of them came home with a whoop bringing in as many scores. The Crookstonites, apparently, got onto the "gag" and in the eighth worked the same "stunt" to perfection. The locals, however, tried hard to shut the door on this onslaught but it seemed of no avail. With only one man out the visitors kept up a steady circle around bases that was truly amazing and finally when this came to an end had tallied up seven scores. The locals kept the door bolted after this and the visitors made only one more score in the ninth. After the scorekeeper had figured up the profit and loss for both teams the score was 18 to 15 in favor of the locals.

The following is the score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Crookston	1	0	1	3	1	1	0	7	1	15
T. R. F.	2	0	6	2	2	2	3	1	x	18

Delivered Baccalaureate Sermon.

Rev. Adolph Rosseland, of the United Lutheran church, delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the high school graduates at the Auditorium Sunday night and the attendance at the service was one of the largest that has thronged at the spacious hall. The graduates and faculty attended the service in a body. The services opened with a song by the United Church choir which was followed by the opening prayer by Rev. Sorenson. The sermon by Rev. Rosseland was as instructive as it was eloquent and contained many advices to those who have laid aside their school cares to go out and battle with the trials and tribulations of life that should linger in their memories and inspire them onto more honorable and holy deeds.

Among the musical numbers of the service were a vocal solo by Mrs. Maltby, a violin solo by Arnold Bjerkhoel and a vocal solo by L. O. Lasseson.

The Unanimous Verdict.

From many articles received from various sources the past few weeks, it will be seen that the comedy "The Climax," is a strictly first-class attraction, with more originality and novelty than any organization that has visited us in several seasons. It remains to be seen how the efforts of the local theatre management will be appreciated.

Fortune Smiles on Them

We have received personal and unquestionable information from the East that "The Climax" has made the greatest hit of any comedy seen in years and has been playing to an enormous business. Since its initial performance in New York at Webber's Theatre the author and management have been adding to it and changing situations, until it now stands without an equal in its line.

The Farmers' Boy.

At a meeting of the presidents of twenty of the nations' largest corporations held in New York, it was a matter of comment that of those present, twelve were "farmer's boys"

When the youngster at home on the farm gets "the blues" and fancies that there is no longer the chance that there used to be to rise above the monotony and drudgery of the tiller of the soil, he can think of those twelve captains of industry who started as he is starting and remember that when they were boys there were times when they too imagined that it was a hopeless ambition to aspire to win their way to the front in the city.

He wants to remember that the farm has evolved some of the world's greatest men and some of its most conspicuously useful ones and that with the increasing activities of the nation in all directions there is now, more than ever, room at the top for the exceptional man.

In the contemplation of the stirring achievements of the farmer's boy, past and present, if he has imagination and soul he will find helpful inspiration when the day seems dark and the future full of gloom. Let him recollect—as the world surely does—that it was the farm that gave us Abraham Lincoln, one of the world's most majestic figures; that gave us Andrew Jackson, Millard Fillmore, the martyred Garfield, Horace Greeley, Sir Isaac Newton and the brilliant Carlyle. It was a farmer's son—Eli Whitney, who created the cotton gin, which laid the foundation for the growth of the cotton industry, now worth $900,000,000 a year to the United states and a farmer's boy—Elias Howe, who emancipated womanhood from the slavery of the needle by inventing the sewing machine.

Long before Robert Fulton sailed his steamboat the Clermont, up the Hudson, John Fitch, the ingenious product of a Pennsylvania farm demonstrated that a boat could be propelled by steam by equipping a skiff with an engine and sailing his craft up the Delaware with its aid. Another brainy farmer's boy Oliver Evans—sometimes called the Watt of America—was the first to build and operate a locomotive in the United States. Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper, the whir of which is today heard 'round the earth, was the modest son of an ordinary Illinois farmer. The first machine to make tacks was the creation of a Massachusetts farm lad—Thomas Blanchard and the device that furnished the world with the modern screw was the work of a poor Vermont genious—Thomas Harvey, a quiet, thoughtful farmer's son. To the resourcefulness of an Ohio farm lad—Charles F. Brush, who invented the dynamo, the world is indebted for its present day industrial and power plants that give employment to millions of hands. Thomas A. A. Edison, most brilliant of the world's inventors, sponsor for the electric light, the phonograph and a hundred other devices, was the son of a poor farm laborer. K. M. Turner inventor of the acousticon, the dictograph and the interior telephone bearing his name, now universally used, when not engaged on his father's Indiana farm used to hire himself out to neighboring farmers at 25 cents a day seeding corn, at which he was acclaimed an expert. From a Wisconsin farm came C. L. Sholes, the inventor of the typwriter, which revolutionized the business methods of the world.

Where service is the only credentials that commands recognition and a man's ability must square with his responsibility, the farmer's boy" who has hearkened to the call of the big city will be found today in the front rank of the world's useful workers in every large city on the face of the earth. For he makes good and the world needs him.

Religious services are held at the Salvation Army hall on the following evenings: Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday. Sunday school Sunday afternoons. Capt. Simpson.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

The graduation exercises customary to the closing of the school year will be held in the Auditorium tonight and tomorrow night. No admission fee will be charged to these exercises and every one is extended a most cordial welcome to attend. The present year, graduating class is the largest in the history of the local schools, thirty-five of our young people will receive their diplomas and will be prepared to step into the narrow paths of life and take up the various vocations befitting to their calling or enter institutions of higher education and prepare themselves for professional life.

This is an epoch making event in the history of the public schools in this city. The attendance this year exceeds by far those of former years and it is gratifying to note with what increase and progress the schools have fared the last few years. With the splendid new Lincoln building in addition to the three other large buildings this city has an educational institution that it well may be proud of. To the graduating class of '11 we extend our best wishes of prosperity and happiness on their journey thru life.

To Kill Dandelions.

The state farm school has issued a bulletin telling how to kill dandelions that are now the pest of the lawns and streets. It has been found that a spray, applied with a sprinkler, and made from sulphate of iron, will do the business. The sulphate is cheap and the method of applying is easy. Use about 1½ to 2 pounds of the iron sulphate to a gallon of water. Apply as soon as dissolved as if left standing several hours, the solution loses in strength. The solution will not injure the grass if not applied too recklessly. It is not poisonous to handle but it will disfigure and discolor iron, stone, clothing and cement walks. So that care should be used in applying it. This solution has also been successfully used to kill wild mustard and other weeds.

Second John Dietz.

Peter Vorbanich, a settler on the Waterhen river, eighteen miles south of Alwabik, played the second John Dietz role just four days, and he is now in a hospital at Virginia dangerously wounded. He was shot through the hand last Wednesday by Deputy Sheriff Frank John King, and in the side by Deputy Sheriff Frank Magis.

Vorbanich demanded $1,000 of the Northern Lumber company, a Weyerhaeuser corporation, for the privilege of running logs through the Waterhen river on his land, which the company refused, and for four days he held the drivers at bay, firing a few shots to convince them that he was in earnest.

Goes to Canada.

A. R. Rairdon, who last week disposed of the Newfolden Review, of which paper he has been editor for the last three years, was in the city last Friday enroute to western Saskatchewan, Canada. Mr. Rairdon will commence the publication of a paper in a rising new town in western Canada and with his ability as a newspaper man will undoubtedly make the paper flourish from the start.

To Reside In This City

Yesterday afternoon Miss Christine Lein, of Grand Forks, Minn., and Charles H. Gunheim, of Holt, Minn., were united in marriage by Rev. A. J. Hulteng at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sannes on Walnut street. Miss Lilah Sannes was bridesmaid and J. O. Lein was best man. An elegant wedding dinner was served by Mrs. Sannes, assisted by Mrs. N. C. Olson. The groom is engaged in business near Theif River Falls.—Grand Forks Herald.

An Enjoyable Program.

At the last social session by the Antlers at the club rooms last Friday evening a splendid program was rendered by the Ladies' Thursday Musicale. This program consisted of some well rendered instrumental and vocal numbers and were of a very high grade. With this program and the dance which following this completed one of the most enjoyable social affairs held by the club this year.

Flag Day Is June 14.

The receipt of a circular from the American Flag association reminds us that Wednesday, June 14, is "Flag Day" On that date the American people will celebrate the 144th anniversary of the adoption of the stars and stripes as the Flag of our country.

On June 14, 1777, congress enacted; "That the Flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." The number of stripes having been increased by the admission of new states, the possibilities of the nation's future development dawned upon our fathers, the original thirteen stripes were unchangeably restored by act of congress on April 4, 1818, when it was enacted: "That from and after the fourth day of July next the Flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be twenty stars, white, in a blue field and that on the admission of a new state into the Union one star be added to the Union of the flag, and such addition take effect on fourth day of July next, succeeding such admission."

Since the struggle of 1861-1865 the flag has become the symbol of a mighty nation. It has been carried to the utmost parts of the earth, carrying liberty wherever it has been thrown to the breeze. The stars and stripes within the recent past have come to possess new beauty for friendly eyes and new terror for the foes of liberty.

The association appeals to the President of the United States, to the governors of all of the states and to the mayors of each American city to herald the coming and celebration of Flag Day, June 14, by proclamation; we call upon every public officer, every teacher of the youth of our country, the editors of all newspapers, the daily instructors of the youth of our land to call public attention to arouse enthusiasm and to provide for public exercises and general celebration of the day.—Mankato Free Press.

Fire Hall Occupied.

The fire department was moved into its new quarters at the foot of second street last week and the outfit installed and is ready for an emergency calls. The bell was taken down from the court house building, formerly the city hall, last Thursday and has been stationed on the beams just underneath the water tank. This places the bell considerably higher than heretofore and will be heard for a considerrble distance.

The pasture on the Bronley and Quigley farms with the river running through it about 3 miles from town, will receive cattle for pasturing during the summer months. For prices and information inquire of the Peoples State Bank. 3t

IN SEARCH OF HOMES

Party of Finns Were Here Last Week Looking for Farming Lands.

Were Sent Here by Mr. L. B. Arnold, Agent for Railroad Lands.

The latest of the many hundreds who have visited this section this spring in search of farming lands are a party of Finns who arrived here last Thursday morning from Ironwood, Michigan, and remained in this city for a few days. These men were sent here by Mr. L. B. Arnold, of Duluth, agent for railroad lands, to view some of the lands owned by the G. N. in this vicinity. They were accompanied on their trip by a reporter of a well known Finnish paper in the East who is gathering material for a series of articles in regard to this section.

These men expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with this section and paid many compliments to this city when being shown around town by Mr. Dan Shaw.

They went up to Middle River Thursday morning to view some railroad land in that vicinity, returning here in the evening.

These are all well-to-do men and enterprising farmers and are of the class that are a valuable asset to the progress and development of any well laid community.

This is thought to be only an advance guard of a large number, who, it is expected, may locate in this section in the near future.

The Simplicity of English.

London Answers: Do you know how many words in the English language mean "crowd"?

To a foreigner, anxious to master the language, it was explained that a crowd of ships is termed a fleet, while a fleet of sheep is called a flock. Further, a flock of girls is called a bevy, a bevy of wolves is called a pack, and a pack of thieves is called a gang, and a gang of angels is called a host, and a host of porpoises is called a shoal, and a shoal of buffaloes is called a herd, and a herd of children is called a troop, and a troop of partridges is called a covey, and a covey of beauties is called a galaxy, and a galaxy of ruffians is called a horde, and a horde of rubbish is called a heap, and a heap of oxen is called a drove, and a drove of blackguards is called a mob, and a mob of whales is called a school, and a school of worshippers is called a congregation, and a congregation of engineers is called a corps, and a corps of robbers is called a band, and a band of bees is called a swarm, and a swarm of people is called a crowd.

Tax Cash.

The legislature seems to have slipped one over on the taxpayers at the last session. It passed a law making it the duty of the assessors to obtain from all property owners a statement of all cash they have on hand or in banks on the first of May, also all amounts due them either in the form of notes or book accounts, all of which must be sworn to before the assessor at its full face value, on which a special tax of three mills must be paid.

The attorney general has ruled that there can be no indebtedness offset. This is a new phase of the tax law, as what a man owes has been deducted from the amount of his cash and credits.

Under the new law if you have $1,000 in cash, and have credits for another $1,000, you will have to pay a tax of $6, and although you may have outstanding obligations of more than this amount, you will have no deductions made.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

SEVERAL HUNDRED GUESTS EXPECTED

Plans for Democratic Meeting at St. Paul Completed.

Arrangements have been completed for the big Democratic demonstration at the St. Paul Auditorium next Thursday evening. The banquet will be served at 6:30 and the doors of the Auditorium will be open to the public at 6 o'clock. Arrangements are being made to care for 8,000 spectators and between 500 and 700 guests. The Auditorium will be decorated with flags and bunting. Portraits of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland, Bryan and John A. Johnson will adorn the stage.

The program will begin at 8 o'clock and the speakers will appear in the following order: Governor John Burke of North Dakota, "Democracy of the Northwest;" Congressman Hammond, "First Session of the Sixty-second Congress;" Alton B. Parker, "Opportunity of Democracy;" F. A. O'Connor, "Iowa Democracy;" John Lind. "The Voice of the People;" Joseph W. Folk, "Progressive Democracy;" Governor Norris, subject to be announced later; W. J. Bryan, "The Passing of Plutocracy."

WILSON VISITS TWIN CITIES

New Jersey Governor Discusses Modern Questions.

Minnesota had its first acquaintance with Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey and possible Democratic presidential candidate. Its citizens met the man and heard his views on public questions.

He expressed progressive and modern views of public questions, but his remedies for the country's ills were constructive and not destructive. He had no quarrel with corporate wealth as such, but demanded that it be made the servant and not the master of the people and that what the corporations do be done openly and publicly.

HAMLINE STUDENTS DROWN

Two Young Men Lose Their Lives in Minnesota River.

Two members of the freshman class at Hamline university at St. Paul, Frederick Kingsland, eighteen years of age, whose mother is matron of Goheen hall, and Louis Kemmer of Long Prairie, twenty-two years old, were drowned in the Minnesota river near the Cedar avenue bridge when the canoe in which they were paddling capsized. The young men disappeared before the eyes of six companions, who accompanied them on a day's outing and who vainly tried to effect a rescue, assisted by others along the river.

Caught After World's Chase.

After a pursuit which took detectives over Europe and this country, Adolph Pricken, twenty-nine years old, of New York, formerly an employe of Park & Tilford, a large Gotham perfumery house, was arrested in St. Paul charged with the theft of $30,000 worth of goods from the firm.

Some thoughtful hen man has hit on the idea of putting a light of glass in chicken coops to make them more cheerful when the chicks have to be shut up on rainy days.

Rape, which belongs to the cabbage family, seldom seeds much north of southern Missouri, as it produces no seed the first season, while north of the latitude mentioned the root kills during the winter.

It is little short of cruel to give poultry that is confined no outdoor shelter from the heat of the summer sun. If there are no trees in the yard this shade may be had by sowing sunflowers, giving the young plants protection during the period when the poultry would be likely to destroy them.

The average yield of potatoes for the United States is about eighty-five bushels per acre, yet there are growers that average from 200 to 300 bushels per acre on a large acreage. It is these last named growers that find potato raising interesting and profitable. The eighty-five bushel chaps simply skim along on bare bones.

While a justice of the peace can tie a marital knot just as tight as a minister, it is conducive to more satisfaction in after years if dignity and meaning have been given to the marriage ceremony by having a dominie officiate. It will contribute not a little to the peace of mind of the bride and groom in the after years also if father and mother were standing near when the fateful words were spoken.

It is enough of a trial for the hens to be shut up with green grass and inviting garden patches just through the fence without their being denied the pleasure of a capacious dust bath. This may contain a good quantity of road dust, some wood ashes and two or three pounds of powdered sulphur. A pint or two of kerosene thoroughly worked into the mixture will make it all the more effective as a louse and mite killer.

Perhaps no other fire of human experience is more likely to crack the veneer of etiquette, good breeding and supposed culture than the heat growing out of a disposition of the chattels and moneys of a rich relative, deceased. Often folks that are classed as pretty respectable and well behaved will conduct themselves in such a manner on these occasions as to become the object of the bitterest kind of community reproach and criticism.

For a piece of land that is pretty foul with weeds and needs a rest from the production of exhaustive crops beans are an excellent crop. They may be planted as late as June 15, prior to which time the surface soil may be given a thorough working and most of the weed seeds destroyed. More than this, the beans, being a legume, are soil enrichers. The writer has found it a good plan to plant the beans with a corn planter and straddling the rows, which puts the rows about twenty-two inches apart. Such a field may be cultivated nicely with a single horse and a five or seven tooth adjustable cultivator.

There is a growing conviction, coupled with a justifiable warmth under the collar, on the part of the potato growers of the country that if ever the market was manipulated by the commission men and jobbers it has been since digging time last fall. Naturally it is to the interest of the middleman to buy at the lowest possible figures at the opening of the season in the fall, and it is plain that prices were battered down to the lowest notch through circulation of the report of a bumper crop of potatoes, a claim that the present situation does not seem to be bearing out. As a rule it is not advisable to hold for higher prices when a remunerative price can be got at digging time, but 20 to 23 cents can hardly be called such a price.

With land values gradually increasing, areas of wet and low land are being reclaimed. Many of these tracts are sour, and to put them into the proper condition for growing crops application of lime is necessary. For light soils containing a small amount of humus ground limestone has been found to give most satisfactory results, while for heavy and very sour soils burned lime should be used. For quick results a combination of two parts of ground stone to one of the burned lime has been found good. The addition of lime seems to be especially beneficial to hay crops and wheat and to most of the garden crops except potatoes and strawberries. In buying lime the purity of the product, as well as the price, should be taken into account.

It is a first rate idea to keep dishes of fly poison just outside the back door, for a dead fly looks a whole lot nicer there than he does in a frying pan, in a glass of milk or a bowl of gravy.

The finest beverage that the good Lord ever made is also the cheapest—H_2O, otherwise known as plain water. Drinking it does not make a fellow see snakes, soften his brain, deplete his bank account or curse his family.

Now and then a pig will get thin and stay in poor condition simply because of poor teeth. We have seen hogs of this type being fed on ear corn that picked up right away when the same amount of corn or less was fed in the shape of meal.

It is usually greedy folk—those who want to get something for nothing—that most often fall prey to multitudinous skin games. That is, they get plucked by a class of sharks who are busy at the same game as they are, the only difference being that the sharks succeed and wax fat on it.

The fear that is sometimes felt by the one just installing a silo that ensilage not used within a year may spoil does not seem to be justified in view of the experience of the Wisconsin station, where ensilage has been kept in excellent shape under proper conditions for a period of five or six years.

Time was when it was thought out of the question to separate little chicks any distance from a clucking old hen. Today literally tens of thousands of downy little fellows but a few days old are shipped by express from many big poultry centers and given the kindly and louseless housing of a brooder on arriving at their destination.

Thanks to recent alertness and activity on the part of the postal authorities, a whole lot of grafters who have been using the mails to misrepresent and defraud have been run to earth and in many cases have not only had to pay heavy fines, but many of them are now doing time in federal prisons. Let the good work go on, for there are still others who should be chased into the open.

From most points of view rats are an all around nuisance, but when telephone linemen lay wires in underground conduits they come in handy. A light cord is fastened around a rat's neck, and it is released at the mouth of the conduit. Instinctively it runs through to the other end. Here it is caught and the end of the string secured. This is used to pull a wire through, and this in turn to pull through the cable containing many wires.

A decision that is bound to have far reaching effect upon the forest conservation problem and along the line of giving definiteness to the heretofore quite hazy relation existing as between national and state prerogatives was handed down by the supreme court of the United States a short time since. In brief it holds that the federal government without consent of the states affected may set aside vast areas of public lands and that when such reserves are created they are not subject to state fencing laws.

Notwithstanding the fact that we attribute so large a measure of the skill of birds to instinct, the fact seems to be pretty well established that both along the lines of nest building and song they are in a large degree imitative, learning the "how" by watching older birds of the same breed with which they are usually mated and by hearing their songs. It has been noted along a similar line that little chicks that are hatched in an incubator and that are not with a hen at all will not do one-quarter of the scratching that those will that are hatched and brooded in the usual way and have an example of scratching set for them.

The farmers living in Sangamon county, Ill., have organized an association whose watchword or slogan is "200 bushels of corn per acre." This smacks just a bit of the high school graduating motto, "Hitch your wagon to a star," yet it has a deal in its favor. The country over the average yield of corn is thirty-five bushels per acre or less, while there are isolated instances where as high as 100 bushels per acre have been grown. It is clear that the Illinois farmers propose to do what lies in their power to better this thirty-five bushel yield. It would mean more corn in the crib and bigger bank accounts if every county in the corn belt had just such an organization.

In top working fruit trees of any kind (it is more frequently done in the case of apples) it is well to remember not only that stocks on which the grafting is done should be naturally vigorous and as hardy as possible, but that its rate of growth should be as nearly as possible the same as the variety with which it is top worked. A slow growing top on a more vigorous stock produces a tree that at best is unshapely and uncouth, but where the reverse is the case and the top far outgrows the stock the top of the tree is almost sure to split and break down in the course of a few years, particularly when loaded with fruit. If one does not know the relative vigor of the varieties he may desire to handle in the above manner as stock and scions he can secure the information from his nearest reliable nurseryman or from the horticultural department of the state experiment station.

The galvanized hencoop is on the market and has several features in its favor not possessed by the old "A" shaped and apple barrel coops of our fathers and grandfathers.

If there were no other reason for keeping grass and weeds out of the orchard it is well worth while simply as a means of protecting the tract from fire. We have seen more than one fine orchard seriously marred by the accidental burning of a cover of grass and weeds in the spring.

Those planning to do tiling—and a lot of fellows ought to be—would do well to send to their representative in congress or to the department of agriculture at Washington for farmers' bulletin No. 187, entitled "Drainage of Farm Lands." The bulletin takes up the subject in an interesting and practical manner.

Inbreeding undoubtedly tends to fix and emphasize certain desirable traits, marks or characteristics of poultry and domestic animals, and to secure these results may be in a measure justifiable, but it is always well to remember that while fineness and quality may be secured thus it is almost invariably at the cost of vigor.

An acre of good land used as a rape pasture for hogs is worth in pork production from $18 to $24 in one season. With this should be taken into account the fact that there is no harvest expense involved. If the soil keeps sufficiently moist rape may be sowed as late as June 1 with good results. Every hog raiser should have a patch.

The boys and girls should be students of bird life to the extent of keeping tab on the young birds in the nests about the premises so as to know when to shut up the cat to keep her from killing the fledglings as they flutter to the ground in their first venture from the nest. Tens of thousands of young birds could be saved yearly were the boys and girls of the land to perform this simple service.

American women of the upper classes would enjoy a whole lot better health, besides being more happy and useful, if they spent less time playing bridge whist and attending pink teas and a good deal more time in cross country walks, studying birds and flowers and in personally doing some of the work in flower and vegetable gardens. Doing these things might not be aristocratic, but it would nevertheless be mighty sensible.

Some tests which have been made lately in the use of saccharin as an element in food products shows that when taken in an amount exceeding three-tenths of a grain a day it tends to injure the digestion. Saccharin is a distillate of coal tar and is 300 times as sweet as sugar. In view of the chemists' report it is likely that Secretary Wilson will put it on the proscribed list as deleterious and injurious to health.

Often during a season of heavy rainfall and humid atmospheric conditions the danger to the potato crop from blight is great. To head this off the vines should be sprayed when about seven or eight inches high with a bordeaux solution, to which arsenate of lead may be added at the rate of a pound to twenty gallons of solution to kill potato bugs. If unfavorable weather conditions persist, a second spraying of the bordeaux should be given in an interval of ten days or two weeks.

In the exhilaration of what is commonly termed the "back to the land movement" it is merely doing them a kind turn to dispossess any who may have had it of the idea that some sort of magic is going to make it possible for folks to make a distinguished success in agriculture or horticulture who have made a fizzle in several other lines to which they have turned their hands. Success in the two lines referred to comes as a result of a great deal of hard, persistent, painstaking work, coupled with an application of intelligence and practical wisdom in the management of things.

Perhaps no other feature of the care of the newly set orchard is so important in the securing of a thrifty and satisfactory growth as that of keeping the soil within a radius of three or four feet of the little trees loose and moist during the growing season. This is especially important if the summer months should be excessively dry. If corn or beans are grown between the trees the first season the rows of trees may be straddled with the riding cultivator for most of this work. All weeds and grass should be kept away from the trees and such work done with a hand hoe as may be necessary to make the stirring of the soil thorough and complete.

Maud S., the first great queen of the trotting world, was killed a short time ago, in accordance with the wish of her late owner, G. M. Stearns, at the advanced age of thirty-five years. Her famous record of 2:08¾ was made at Cleveland, O., on July 30, 1885. This record was broken in 1892 when Nancy Hanks went the mile in 2:07¼, and again when she made the distance in 2:04 at Terre Haute. The present world's record for trotting mares is held by Lou Dillon, she making a mile in 1903 at Memphis in 1:58½. Horsemen hold that the record of Maud S., made with the old fashioned, high wheeled wooden sulky, is a more remarkable performance than the later efforts by mares hitched to pneumatic tired, low wheeled, ball bearing spider sulkies.

TWO UNMITIGATED PESTS.

With every new springtime there recur most of the same old problems which tax our energy as well as our ingenuity. Among these may be mentioned the fly and the rat problem. These are two of the most unqualified and unmitigated pests with which the human family has to deal. The fly is chiefly an enemy to public health, the rat a destroyer of cereals and manufactured product to an extent that it is difficult to realize. Both will shortly begin to breed and multiply; hence any measures adopted at once to kill off the present members of the two nefarious tribes will be labor saving and very effective—the move in time that will save many later on. Two simple precautions will reduce the fly pest to a minimum. Kill all the holdover flies on sight and screen and lime their breeding places, chiefly manure piles and cesspools. Saucers containing poison solutions made by wetting poisoned fly paper or by putting two teaspoonfuls of formalin solution in a saucer half full of sweetened water will help in keeping down the number. In this it is well to place some of the dope out of doors, by means of which hundreds of the flies will be killed before they get into the house. In checking the rat pest every known means should be employed. Of the poisons perhaps the best is a cornmeal dough in which one part of barytes has been mixed with nine parts of meal. This should be spread rather thin on shingles and placed where it will be accessible to the rats. Often a cage trap baited with beef, bacon or cheese will round up a lot of rats. We have seen sixteen caught in such a trap in a single night, from the great-grandmother down—the whole family. Soaking the cageful in a pail of water ten or fifteen minutes will render the inmates perfectly harmless. In view of the fact that rats breed several times during the season the importance of giving 'em fits before they begin propagating will be appreciated.

THE WINDOW BOX.

For any readers living in cities and having no ground space for flower beds a window box may be arranged which will pay generously in the satisfaction it will give. To give best results the box for such purpose should be not less than eight inches deep, while if it is deeper it will be even better. It should be from eight to twelve inches wide and as long as one may desire. The box should have holes bored in the bottom to insure good drainage and should be filled with rich, mellow soil, with a generous amount of well rotted manure mixed in. Geraniums and marguerites are the most satisfactory plants for the window box, but ferns, petunias, feverfews and other plants of the same size will do well. Soil in such a box will dry out very rapidly, especially if it has a southern exposure; hence the watering of the plants it contains should be frequent.

CHEAP INSURANCE.

Grounding the wires of the pasture fence to protect the stock from the electrical discharges of summer storms is both a cheap and effective method of insurance and, aside from the loss which the killing of cattle by lightning involves, saves the sorry job of removing the hides and burying the carcasses of the best cows, steers and young horses, it may be, on the farm. The grounding of fence wires is easily done by punching a hole in the ground beside the posts at intervals of eight or ten rods and inserting a piece of wire to a depth of about fifteen inches. The part above ground should be so arranged that it will touch all of the wires composing the fence. When a lightning bolt strikes a fence fixed in this way the electric current is diverted into the ground, where it does no harm.

A DEFECT AND A REMEDY.

There is a celebrated Comice pear orchard in the valley in which the writer lives that for a number of years produced no fruit, without apparent cause, as conditons of soil and climate seemed to be favorable. Investigation following showed that the orchard did not bear because the blossoms of this particular variety are largely, if not entirely, sterile—that is, do not possess both stamens and pistils. Acting on this, a number of trees through the orchard were top grafted with Bartlett scions. As soon as these top grafts produced blossoms the orchard began to bear, and it has been a producer ever since. The same plan may be easily carried out in the case of individual pear trees by inserting two or three scions of a perfect blossoming variety.

DOESN'T KNOW BEANS.

A Harvard college professor has lately made the startling announcement that beans are hard to digest and contain little nourishment. It is fair to assume that the gentleman has never labored with his hands until his back ached and reenforced his interior anatomy with a plate of delicious pork and beans, with sliced onions, boiled taters and brown bread for trimmin's and, more than this, had "inside" information that the ration did him good for hours afterward and furnished him with a maximum of energy to do the same kind of work the next day. Granted—baked beans are no ration for a bookworm, a dyspeptic or a sallow cheeked college professor, but you can't beat them for the fellow who labors in the sun and in the wind.

THE DULUTH HERALD

BEATS THE CENSUS THREE TO ONE

During the past ten years the population of Duluth increased 48 per cent., St. Paul 32 per cent., and Minneapolis 49 per cent. In the Same Period the Circulation of The Duluth Herald

INCREASED 150 PER CENT.

This marvelous expansion—so much greater than that of the surrounding territory—is due solely to the merits of The Herald. The Herald has never used any kind of premium, contest, or price reduction to gain subscribers but prints each day the very best NEWSPAPER in the Northwest. Its editorial page is thoroughly independent and its news columns cover every feature of the world's daily history.

CITIZENS STATE BANK
Honesty
SOLIDITY

Financing the Farmer.

The farmer's business often needs a little extra financial backing if it is to grow and prosper.

That is one reason why he should have a strong and willing bank behind him.

It is an important function of this bank to give temporary assistance to farmers who seek it of us, and who have demonstrated their ability to repay their obligations when due.

Hundreds of farmers who have made real estate loans at the CITIZENS can testify that our treatment of them has been the most liberal.

Before making your loan, be sure to call on us.

Manufacturers In Minnesota.

A preliminary statement by the general Bureau of Census, of Washington, D. C., of the general result of the Thirteenth United States Census of Manufactures of the state of Minnesota was issued yesterday by Acting Census Director Falkner. It includes a summary comparing the figures for 1904 and 1909, by state totals, prepared under the direction of Mr. William M. Steuart, chief statistician for manufactures, Bureau of the Census. The figures are subject to such revision as may be necessary after a further examination of the original reports.

The Thirteenth Census, like that of 1904, differs from the Twelfth Census in 1900, with reference to manufacturers, in that the two later censuses excluded the hand and building trades and the neighborhood industries, and took account only of establishments conducted under the factory system. In the last census, also, as in that for 1904, statistics were not collected for factories having products for the census year of a value less than $500, except that reports were taken for establishments idle during a portion of the year 1909, or which began operation in that year, and whose products, therefore, were less than $500.

The comparative summary for the state, 1904, and 1909, follows:

	CENSUS 1909	1904	pr. ct. of increase, '04-'09
Number of establishments	5,5[illegible]	4,756	17
Capital	$273,416,000	$184,903,000	49
Cost of materials used	$281,[illegible]	$210,544,000	34
Salaries & wages	$62,922,000	$44,676,000	40
Miscellaneous expenses	$31,317,000	$24,494,000	29
Value of products	$409,420,000	$307,858,000	33
Value added by manufacture (less cost of materials)	$127,798,000	$97,304,000	31
Employees
Number of salaried officials and clerks	14,223	9,141	56
Average number of wage earners employed during the year	84,7[illegible]	69,636	22
Primary horsepower	[illegible]	230,904	35

The Sangerfest.

Preparations for the Sangerfest at Thief River Falls June 23, 24 and 25 are now being pushed with vim and vigor. With the executive committee at the head issuing orders, the subcommittees must promptly respond or woe unto the ones who fail to do so. We are sparing no efforts in trying to make this sangerfest the grandest in the history of the association, a festival whereof Thief River Falls can justly be proud, and, with that in view, we feel confident that the loyal citizens of our city will take great pride in assisting us in making this affair a grand success, and receive the ticket-committee royally when they come around. The price of tickets will suit everybody's pocket book so no one needs stay away on that account. But we are not satisfied with only the citizens of Thief River Falls and immediate vicinity, but we are very desirous of seeing every one that possibly can within a radius of 50 to 100 miles of this place lay aside his daily doings to jubilate with us during the three mid-summer days set aside for the sangerfest in our beautiful city. Following is a synopsis of the festival program:

Friday, June 23.

Will Do Hauling Free

In compliance with a law passed at the recent session of the legislature making it lawful for railroad and transportation companies to handle free or at reduced rates road material for the United States, the state or municipal corporations, the Soo railroad has consented to haul 75 car loads of gravel free for the city to be used on the streets if the offer is accepted.

It is reported that wherever the plan is tried gravel makes a splendid surface on the roads and makes a foundation on which heavy loads can pass over after heavy rains without any effect on the road.—As yet no definite steps have been taken in the matter.

Was Here In New Car.

President Pennington, of the Soo Line, E. S. Woodworth of the Woodworth Elevator Co., and Mr. McMillan of Minneapolis, were in the city last Friday from a trip over the Wheatline over which line they went to look over crop conditions along that line. These gentlemen made the trip in Mr. Pennington's new private car which has just recently been released from the factory. This car is made on the observation car plan and has all the modern conveniences and is of a new model just being put out by that road. The estimate cost of the car is about $30,000.

Death of Ben Bjorge.

Monday of last week occurred the death of Ben Bjorge aged 30 years at his home on the East Side from tuberculosis. The deceased has been a resident in this city for a number of years and leaves a wide circle of friends who are deeply grieved at his untimely demise. The funeral services were held last Friday afternoon in the Synod church and the remains laid to rest in the Greenwood cemetery.

The family of the deceased have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

Epworth League.

The annual convention of the Fergus Falls district, Epworth league, will be held at Detroit June 16-18. The chief feature on the program is a debate Saturday evening on the question: "Resolved that money expended by the Christian church has done more for civilization than equal amounts expended by governments." Rev. Messrs. Sam L. Parish of Fergus Falls and George Warmer of Frazee will present the affirmative, and Rev. Messrs. W. C. Hodgson of Crookston and J. B. Smith of Thief River Falls the negative.

Goes Abroad.

About nine of our local people comprise a party that will depart on Sunday evening for Norway, where they will spend about three months. The party is made up of the following: Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Sponheim and daughters, Misses Hanna and Clara, who go to Hardanger; Mrs. Nels Larson and Mrs. Ben Knutson, to Trondhjem, and Mr. Halvor Loken, to Christiania. Hans Heckne, also of this city, left the first of the week for Minneapolis to spend a few days and will join the party and proceed to the "old country."

A fifteen year old girl who was in the habit of making the trains and flirting with the trainmen, succeeded recently in landing a beau. She gaily consented when he asked her to walk home with her. Her newly formed acquaintance asked her to be led to her home, and upon arriving there boldly rang the bell. Her mother came to the door and Mr. Traveling Man delivered a short lecture something like this:

"Madam, here's your little girl. I picked her up at the depot a place where girls of her age should not go unless on business. I have a daughter at home about the age of this one. I am away from home a good deal and don't know for certain whether my daughter meets the trains and flirts with the trainmen and passengers or not, but if she does I hope someone will do what I have done—take her home to her mother."—Ex.

Had a Small Blaze.

The local fire department was called out about 4:30 o'clock last Monday afternoon to extinguish a blaze in a small stack of hay belonging to Joe Halda on the East Side. The fire had not gained much headway and was under control when the fire department arrived. The barn which was adjoining the hay stack was scorched to a considerable extent but otherwise the damage was not great. Just how the fire started is not known but the cause is generally attributed to boys carelessly handling matches.

"The Climax", will be seen at the Auditorium on June 6. It is one of the most remarkable dramas of modern times. It contains all the essentials of success. First, it has a tremendous plot, which is worked out with admirable power. Second, it has great heart interest; and third, it has situations which for intensity have never been surpassed. This play is by Edward Locke, dramatist, who has seized upon the salient points in modern life and has transferred them to the stage with fidelity to nature. The result is a play that appeals to people of all classes in life. It has been one of the most successful plays on the road this season and has created keen interest wherever it has been produced. The company offering the "Climax", is a carefully selected one, and the United Play Co. which is directing the rout of this organization, has spared no expense in making this a superb production. The company carries all scenery and special properties.

Took a Cold Bath.

That the season is rather premature for bathing yet is evidenced by the fact that one of our popular young men is nursing a slight cold these days as a result of an involuntary cold bath which he indulged in the other evening. Just how the accident happened will never be known, but we understand that the aforesaid gentleman was just in the act of crossing the gang plank to get ashore from a boat when he found that one of his legs had gone to sleep, and in its delicate state was unable to carry its heavy weight and the result was that in the general collapse of the dormant limb which followed Mr.——— plunged into the deep and very cool water up to his neck. While the accident happened only in a general way there has been more or less speculation as to the real cause of the condition of said limb, under the circumstances.

Some More Land Seekers.

E. A. Gibbs and a company of land seekers from St. James, this state, arrived here last week to look over lands in this vicinity. These gentlemen were favorably impressed with this section and as a result of this visit a number of land deals were made and more are expected to be made later. Like everyone else that has visited here they were high in their praises about our city and prophesied for a great future. They departed Monday evening for their home.

Services Held In Auditorium

Owing to rain the splendid program arranged for Decoration Day at the Park had to be abandoned and the services were held in the Auditorium at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The program consisted of a few selections by the band, and the invocation was delivered by Rev. Boyd, of the Presbyterian church. Attorney Kjomme delivered a very instructive and eloquent oration in honor of the dead heroes and the surviving veterans of the rebellion of '61.

Ball Game Sunday.

The local base ball team will play a game with the fast Grand Forks "White Sox" in this city next Sunday afternoon. The "White Sox", are classed among such teams as the Grand Forks Picketts and it is safe to say that the game will be a good one.

Everyone should turn out and see the game and incidentally help the management along as this team is secured under a heavy expense to the boys in order that the public may have a chance to witness a real article of base ball, and is deserving of a large attendance.

Mrs. Joe Halda Dead.

At her home on the East Side last Saturday morning occurred the death of Mrs. Joe Halda, after a brief illness, at the age of about 37 years. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her untimely demise. The funeral services were held Monday forenoon in St. Bernard's church and the body interred in the Catholic cemetery.

Notice to Creamery Patrons of T. R. F. Co-op. Creamery.

AN HERB INQUIRY.

A reader of these notes living near Valley Falls, Kan., a widow who has her own and her little daughter's support on hand, writes stating that she has no property, but believes she could make something by gathering herbs for medicinal purposes. She inquires especially about the burdock and horehound, both of which grow plentifully in the locality in which she lives. The writer has never had any experience in the gathering and drying of herbs, but is glad to give the following data, taken from farmers' bulletin No. 188, entitled "Weeds Used In Medicine," which our correspondent can get by sending 5 cents in coin to the office of public documents at Washington. This describes some thirty kinds of common medicinal weeds and would be of value to any one desiring to gather them for market. As to burdock, the roots should be collected in the fall of the year from the larger plants that are in their second year. The roots should be washed carefully after digging, split lengthwise and carefully dried. This is best done by exposing them to the light and air (not direct sunlight) on racks or shelves or on clean, well ventilated barn floors or lofts. They should be spread out thinly and turned every day or two for from three to six weeks. If properly cured the roots should snap when bent. In securing the roots of any herb it is well to take special care in drying, as they will mildew and spoil if not properly cured. The roots shrink in weight about four-fifths and will fetch, cured, from 3 to 8 cents a pound. The burdock seed, for which there is a limited demand, should be secured as soon as it is ripe and brings from 5 to 10 cents per pound. The horehound is a bushy, branching herb belonging to the mint family, and only the leaves and tops are used in medicine. These should be gathered just before the herb is in flower, the coarse parts being rejected. The leaves should be dried in the manner suggested for the burdock roots, care being taken to turn them when drying and to store so that they will not gather moisture. The price paid for horehound leaves varies from 3 to 8 cents per pound.

BENEFITS OF TILE DRAINAGE.

C. G. Elliott, drainage expert of the department of agriculture, has summarized the benefits derived from tile drainage in the following paragraph. The reasons in favor of tiling given are so pertinent and plain that they might well be committed to memory by every farmer who has wet acres that are fetching him in little or no revenue: (1) In the land that is properly tiled the surface soil is retained entire instead of the finest and most fertile parts being carried off with every considerable rainfall. (2) Any plant food in manure or other fertilizer deposited upon the soil is carried into it with the water as it percolates downward from the surface, and so becomes thoroughly incorporated with the soil. (3) Rainwater as it passes through the soil serves a most useful purpose by dissolving and preparing crude soil material for the nutrition of plants. (4) The soil having been well prepared, it is at all times during the growing season in readiness for the growth of plants, such growth not being hindered by stagnant water or saturation. (5) The frost goes out earlier in the spring, so that the planting season opens one or two weeks earlier than in the case of soil affected by surface drains only. (6) Where stiff clays are found the soil is made more porous, open and friable and roots penetrate more deeply than they do into surface drained soils. (7) The effects of drought are diminished, as has been found by experience, owing to the enlarged and deepened soil bed and to the more favorable condition of the surface for preventing excessive evaporation of moisture. (8) It aids in making new soil out of the unprepared elements, since it permits a freer entrance of air and atmospheric heat, which disintegrate soil material hitherto unavailable for the use of plants. (9) Stubborn and refractory soils when drained are frequently so changed in texture and mechanical structure that they become easily managed and respond to cultivation with abundant crops.

FIGHTING QUACK GRASS.

There may be some readers who have a quack grass problem on their hands this season. If so they will be interested in the following directions for getting rid of it: Let the grass grow until blossom time, then cut close and make for hay before any seed develops. Plow to a good depth, using breaking plow if necessary, and disk repeatedly until a good seed bed is formed, raking up carefully and burning all roots left on the surface. Then seed heavily to rye or millet. When the cover crop is coming into bloom turn the whole cover crop under in the shape of green manure. Best results will be had with this plan if there is rain during the summer months, so that the cover crop will make a rank growth. If the fall is wet and there is some of the quack grass that shows a tendency to grow the field should be given repeated diskings to prevent the shoots or roots seeing daylight or air or having any "peace." Another plowing just before freezeup, which will expose the roots to the action of the frost, will usually give the finishing touches.

Kindness is the only means that it is worth while using to get even with another. It is all right to use this "on the other fellow, and do it first."

If forest fires are threatening in north, central and eastern states in May, what may we look for in late August and September if we should have a dry summer?

The secretary of the Kansas state board of health contributes his mite to the solution of the omnipresent fly problem when he declares that flies can be kept away from kitchens and barns by painting them blue and by growing hops around the doors.

The toad has little to commend it in the way of looks, but in its quiet, sluggish way it renders a service to the tiller of the soil in the destruction of bugs, worms and insects that can hardly be measured. The small boy should be told of its usefulness and taught to protect rather than harm it.

Life is all too short to spend very much time wearing a fellow's patience and religion out fooling around with a kicking cow or a balky horse. The cow will fulfill her mission on the block in the butcher's shop, and as for the horse—well, sell him for just what he is to some one else who enjoys subduing brute orneriness.

That a cow is better for a rest between her milking periods is nicely shown in the case of the world's milk and butter record cow, Colantha IV.'s Joanna, she being dry a full year prior to the interval in which she made her great record. The common cow giving an average yield of milk is the better for a couple of months' rest between her periods of lactation, and for the same reason as in the above instance.

A reader of this department asks what to do to get rid of moles. Perhaps it would be well first to find out whether the offender is really doing more harm than good, which is an open question. If the little chap is plowing up the lawn in bad shape and is not rendering a compensating service in flower or vegetable garden he may be dispatched by buying and setting one of the mole traps for sale at most any hardware store.

Charles Akeley, an American hunter-naturalist, recently shot in East Africa what is said to be the largest elephant on record. The great beast stood eleven feet four inches at the shoulder, and the circumference of a front foot was sixty-seven and a half inches, while the two tusks weighed respectively 95 and 110 pounds. The foot of Jumbo, the famous circus elephant, is said to have had a circumference of but sixty-one inches.

A lady friend who is interested in bird life tells us that a flock of about a dozen bluejays visited the neighborhood in which she lives the other day and played havoc with the nests of a number of other valuable birds. Collectively and individually the bluejays are outlaws and pirates in the bird world, and their nests and eggs should be destroyed, particularly when found in the vicinity of other useful birds like the robin, bunting and catbird. Added to this destructive trait which they possess, like the sparrow they render very meager service in the destruction of insect life.

Peanut butter is not only an appetizing food product, but very nutritious, and it is not difficult to make. The peanuts—meats—may be roasted in a moderate oven either before or after shelling, but in either case they should be stirred quite frequently to insure even roasting. The skins should then be rubbed off. The meats may be ground in an ordinary meat grinder by using the finest plate and should be run through a second time if necessary. If the butter is quite oily after grinding the only ingredient that need be added will be a little salt. If it is not as oily as desirable a little olive or peanut oil may be added.

If any of our readers have apple trees that rested last year and bore no blossoms this spring we would suggest they make an experiment with them in the matter of summer pruning, which means the removal during the latter part of July and early August of the limbs and newer growth that would normally be removed during the spring months. Pruning at the time specified—summer—tends to check wood growth and to the formation of fruit buds for the following year. Often trees grow so thriftily and vigorously that they will produce no fruit at all. Summer pruning is a sort of shock to the tree, and it is this setback that tends to the production of fruit buds.

FOR CONTROL OF TRUSTS

Swedish Ambassador to Japan Recommends Plan in Effect in Mikado's Kingdom—Visit of Minister Bryn to Northwest Attracted Much Attention—Danish Government Urged to Prohibit Activities of Mormon Missionaries in That Country.

SWEDEN.

Says the Chicago Daily News: The United States would do well to look to Japan for a solution of the problems of "trusts" and "unreasonable" combinations in business with which the government here is wrestling, according to Gustav O. Wallenberg, Swedish ambassador to China and Japan, a visitor in Chicago last week for a few hours. The solution, as explained by the ambassador, may be set forth in two words—government control. "In Japan monopolies are controlled by the government," declared Ambassador Wallenberg, who has passed years in the investigation of business conditions in various countries of the world. He is known in Stockholm, his home, as captain of industry, and is a brother of Sweden's minister of finance. "The plan of control by the government works extremely well," he declared, "and a monopoly in Japan means no more than any other business formation, as a partnership, for example. The United States could learn some lessons from the Japanese in this problem of business. With the Sherman anti-trust law I am not as familiar as I should be, though I have read of the recent dissolution of the Standard Oil company. Of course, the monopoly problem in this country is more serious than in any other, for the business that is carried on is of so much greater volume. I am of the opinion, however, that government control of your monopolies would be a good thing." Ambassador Wallenberg was asked as to the possibility of war between the United States and Japan. "Absurd," he laughed. "The war talk is all 'bosh' and is only the result of irresponsible 'yellow' Western newspapers."

Former Governor John Lind of Minnesota, president of the board of university regents, was operated on for appendicitis at the Swedish hospital in Minneapolis recently. The operation, which was not a serious one, was performed by Dr. C. J. Ringnell and will relieve Mr. Lind of a trouble of several years' standing. There was nothing in the report, current a few days ago, that his condition was serious and Mr. Lind felt annoyed to think that this report gained any circulation. Dr. Ringnell feels certain that Mr. Lind will gain much by the recent operation and that his health will be very much improved.

NORWAY.

The visit of Helmer H. Bryn, minister from Norway to the United States, to the Northwestern states of Minnesota and the Dakotas, has been given a great deal of attention by the daily press because of the fact that Scandinavians in America seem to be getting closer together and also seem to succeed in bringing about better and closer relations between the two mother countries. A closer Scandinavian union was the message that Minister Bryn brought during his recent visit in the Northwest and that he was well received is needless to mention. In Grand Forks, Fargo, St. Paul and Minneapolis the distinguished guest was banquetted and at all gatherings there were present many prominent Scandinavians, principally, of course, Norwegian-Americans, for it was them particularly that the Norwegian diplomat came to visit. During his visit in St. Paul, where a banquet was held in his honor, Minister Bryn said: "While Norway and Sweden have given their best to this country, they had also received much good from this country, and the best they are receiving is the lesson of brotherly love and friendship everywhere evident among Scandinavians here. This is most significant, for as the sons of the two nations learn to depend on each other here they will bring the same brotherly love to their people in the old country and nothing is doing more to heal the wounds caused by the separation of the two countries than the friendship of the Scandinavians in America for each other. The Scandinavians here have developed a keener love for their fatherland than the folks at home, and are better able to forget petty jealousies and work for the real good of Scandinavia." On this same occasion, the sentiments expressed by Minister Bryn were also heartily endorsed by Captain Mjoen, a Norwegian officer in America studying military schools. He said lasting peace and friendly relations between the two countries will come through the Scandinavians in America, and that within ten years Norway and Sweden will be bound closer than ever before in a defensive union. He also wanted to include Denmark and the Finns.

"The United States should maintain a large navy and thus be the wowrld's greatest power for universal peace," says Captain Alf. Mjoen of the Norwegian army and a nephew of the great Norwegian author, Bjornsterne Bjornson, who is in this country to study the cadet system in American universities with a view of establishing the same system in the colleges of his own country. "Without a large navy the United States cannot become a great power for peace, but with a navy the country could compel all the nations to wait several days after a controversy has arisen before declaring war and by that time both disputants would be cooled off and there would be no war. The thing which I have admired most in this country is the practical machinery you have to carry on your farming operations. I find this a big country with a big future." Captain Mjoen has been in the United States three months and among other schools has visited West Point, the University of Wisconsin and St. Thomas college at St. Paul, Minn., and a number of the leading educational institutions of the Eastern states.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, one of the great leaders for the woman's suffrage movement in the United States, recently paid a visit to Christiania. She was a guest of the well known Norwegian suffrage leader, Miss Anna Rogstad. From Christiania Mrs. Catt went to Stockholm, where she will see a number of people in the interests of the cause that she is working for.

The government has been authorized to negotiate for a loan of 60,000,000 crowns in the near future. It is possible that this loan will be made in France.

DENMARK.

Says George Bothner in a recent Copenhagen dispatch: The anti-Mormon outcry has roused an echo in Scandinavia, where hitherto the missionaries from Utah have done much as they pleased. Now the government is being urged to prohibit their activities and public meetings are being held up and down the country to denounce the methods of the traveling elders in persuading Danish girls to emigrate to Salt Lake City. Several resolutions were sent to the premier calling on the government to empower the local police to expel any Mormon advocate found spreading his doctrines among the people. The missionaries are certainly very active. Their main centers are in Copenhagen, Aarhus and Aalborg for Denmark, Christiania and Drontheim for Norway. No less than 118 missionaries are at work and during February they distributed 1,828 Mormon books and 52,002 catechisms, held 3,086 evangelistic conferences, 609 public meetings and paid 38,557 house-to-house calls. Out of all that effort they appear to have drawn twenty-six converts. In a conference between a deputation of churchmen the home secretary and the minister for public worship it was declared the chief Mormon elder, Andrew Jenson, had publicly stated, in Aarhus and elsewhere, he had two wives. The deputation urged he be expelled, for his bigamy was contrary to the laws of Denmark.

A new church was recently dedicated in Copenhagen at which the entire royal family of Denmark and a large number of ministers and other dignitaries were present. Bishop Peder Madsen was present and performed the dedicatory sermon. While he was preaching his sermon he suddenly swooned away in front of the altar. Several of the ministers present carried him into the sacristy, from whence he was taken. He soon recovered from his illness. Provost Oftenfeldt concluded the dedicatory services.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Attorney General George T. Simpson has prepared an answer to Charles R. Fowler's suit attacking the validity of the "seven senator" bill. The answer is brief and alleges that the bill, as legally passed by the legislature, is constitutional. The case will probably be argued in the Hennepin county courts during the next month.

I. Frankel, the merchant found guilty at St. Cloud of violating the new transient merchant law, has paid his fine, $165, and decided not to appeal the case, as at first planned. The arrest was the first in the state under the law which requires the payment of a transient license fee of $150 to the county, as well as local fees.

Senator Gore has informed Representative Miller that he will be unable on account of congressional duties, to accept the invitation of the Minnesota Educational association to address it at its meeting Oct. 26. Mr. Miller had been asked by President George F. James of the association to extend the invitation to Senator Gore.

In response to a petition signed by over 200 women of Moorhead and one signed by over 100 business and professional men, the city council lowered by seven the number of saloons in that city, making the new number forty, and raised the license from $1,000 to $1,200.

Between seventy-five and one hundred bankers from the First district of Minnesota will attend the convention of that branch of the state association in Winona on June 5 and 6. Former Representative Tawney will deliver the principal address.

Representatives of 55 per cent of the assessed valuation of Cook county have decided to refuse to pay their taxes this year. They assert the taxes are too high and they also complain that the money has not been judiciously expended.

The national grand lodge of Good Templars has decided to hold its next convention in St. Paul in 1912. In addition St. Paul probably will have at that time the state conventions of grand and junior lodges of the same order.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Missouri Pacific railway in St. Louis John G. Drew of St. Paul, comptroller of the Great Northern, was appointed auditor to succeed S. B. Schuyler.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The jury in the case of Harry Albrecht, on trial at St. Cloud for murder in the first degree, brought in a verdict of manslaughter in the first degree and recommended leniency to the court. Judge M. D. Taylor passed sentence at once, giving Albrecht an indeterminate sentence to the state reformatory. Albrecht killed Charles O'Brien of Duluth on Dec. 20, 1910.

Mildred Louise Bayley, three-year-old daughter of J. R. Bayley, supervisor of penmanship in the Minneapolis public schools, died after she had drunk the entire contents of a bottle of medicine, which was to have been given her in small doses. The child drank the medicine while her mother was out of the room. She lived about twenty minutes.

An auto accident with fatal results occurred a few miles north of Garfield. Alex Landeen, a pioneer of Garfield, received injuries from which he died and Mrs. John Landeen of Eagle Bend, wife of former Representative Landeen of Douglas county, was severely bruised.

Henry Winther, a Fergus Falls lumber dealer and member of the city council, was severely wounded by a stray bullet while at Wall lake, four miles from that city. He was standing erect in his automobile when the bullet struck him in the chest near the shoulder.

Responding to an alarm of fire he dreamed was being sounded, William Flaherty, a fireman connected with the St. Paul fire department, fell through the pole hole and received injuries that may result in his death.

Edwin Twohy, fourteen years old, with a crowd of other boys, went swimming in the Mississippi river at Minneapolis to escape the heat. He was seized with cramps and before others could reach him he drowned.

Nels Hefty, a student at the Park Region Luther college at Fergus Falls, was drowned in a pond above the dam in the center of the city. He was aged sixteen and his home was at Walcott, N. D.

Knocked down by a street car at Minneapolis Mrs. Annie Peters, forty-two years old, died a few hours later at St. Mary's hospital. She was a widow.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Simonson and Laura Simonson, his wife as mortgagors to Peter Kleene of Dubuque, Iowa as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southeast quarter of section twelve, township one hundred fifty-four, north, range forty five, west of the fifth principal meridian and containing one hundred sixty acres according to government survey; now situated in Pennington county, Minnesota.

Which said mortgage bears date April 23, 1907 and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county, on April 25th, 1907 at 11:30 A. M. in Book 10 of Mortgages at page 400, and

Whereas the said Peter Kleene by an instrument in writing dated May 1, 1907 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on May 14, 1907 in Book 32 of Mortgages at page 521, assigned said mortgage to Louis Kupferschmidt, and

Whereas in proceedings duly had for that purpose pursuant to the laws of the state of Minnesota, the land described in said mortgage, and herein above described became a part of a new county organized on or about November 26, 1910 and known and called Pennington County, and

Whereas the said Louis Kupferschmidt by an instrument in writing dated May 2, 1911 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Pennington County on the 10th day of May, 1911 in Book 9 of mortgages at page 111 duly reassigned said mortgage to said Peter Kleene who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest the sum of nine hundred one dollars and fifty eight cents and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore notice is hereby given that under and by virtue of the power of sale therein contained and the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction for cash by the sheriff of the county of Pennington in the state of Minnesota at the front door of the Auditorium Building in the city of Thief River Falls, in said Pennington county on Saturday June 24, 1911 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof including an attorney's fee of fifty dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Dated May 11, 1911.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars, which is claimed to be due, and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470, Which said mortgage, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 28th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 5 of mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz.:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen,
Assignee of mortgage.

The formal opening of the new British parliament was marked by gorgeous ceremony and was attended by King George and Queen Mary and their suites, most of the dignitaries of the empire, many members of the diplomatic corps and all others who could crowd within the doors of Westminster. The speech from the throne was brief and formal and made small reference to the great issues that underlie the assembling of the members for the present session.

Two more names were added to the death roll of the aeroplane at Douai, France. Aviators Noel and Delatorre were killed while conducting a trial of a military aeroplane before experts from the war department previous to its delivery to the army. Noel was the pilot and Delatorre a passenger.

Figures compiled from the 1910 imperial German census show there are forty-seven cities in the empire having a population in excess of 100,000. The thirteenth census of the United States shows fifty cities with this population. Berlin, Germany's largest city, without its suburbs, has 2,064,154.

The Montreal Star, the largest and most influential newspaper in Canada, devotes an entire page to a denunciation of the proposed reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada and an appeal to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to secure the defeat of the agreement.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford is sixty-five years of age and by virtue of the age limit clause is retired from the active list of the British navy. He has held no appointment since his surrender on March 24, 1909, of the command of the channel fleet.

Frederick Archibald Vaughan Campbell, third earl of Cawdor and the greatest railway authority in Great Britain, is dead after a long illness.

General Millionard, the head of the Haytien revolutionists, and five other rebel generals were taken from the prison at Trou and shot to death.

In the first division of the new British parliament the house of commons, by a majority of 102, reaffirmed adherence to free trade principles.

The first battle at Juarez, Mex., between federal troops and insurrectionists lasted about an hour and no one was hurt on either side.

Baron Albert Rothschild, head of the Austrian branch of the famous family of bankers, is dead at Vienna.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Seven members of the family of Herman Berkowitz, the father, mother and five children, were killed by illuminating gas in their home in the Ghetto district of Philadelphia. When their bodies were discovered in the gas filled room by neighbors the father lay fully dressed on one bed with two small boys, while the mother and three girls were in another bed in the same room on the third floor.

In one of the most disastrous explosions ever recorded in Upper Michigan ten men met instant death at the plant of the Pluto Powder company in the outskirts of Ishpeming. Another man was injured. The bodies of the dead were blown to pieces. The explosion took place in the gelatine powder house. Every man in this building perished.

An explosion of gas in the Cokedale mine of the Carbon Coke and Coal company at Trinidad, Colo., caused the death of fifteen men. All the bodies have been recovered and indicate that the victims died of suffocation while attempting to escape from the mine after the explosion.

The Missouri capitol building at Jefferson City has been entirely destroyed by fire. The total loss, including the structure and many records and state papers in the offices of the governor, secretary of state and treasurer, is estimated at $1,000,000, with no insurance.

Ten shop employes of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad were torn to fragments and seven others were injured when an engine under repair exploded in the Smithville (Tex.) yards. Besides the loss of life railroad property valued at $20,000 was destroyed.

Three women were drowned when a street car went through an open draw into the Sheboygan river at Sheboygan, Wis., and became submerged. These were the only passengers inside the car when it toppled into the river.

Four men were crushed to death and five others were perhaps fatally injured when the roof of a brick shed of the Illinois Brick company in Blue Island, Ill., collapsed, burying the men beneath it.

A rather striking illustration of the effectiveness of the Babcock test as a means of determining the butter fat returns of cows in a dairy herd was related to the writer the other day by the owner of a large herd of pure bred Holstein cows. It was shortly after the introduction of the sulphuric acid test as a means of ascertaining the amount of butter fat in milk. In his dairy barn were two fine looking cows which stood side by side. At the time of the test one was giving thirty-five pounds of milk per day and the other twenty-five pounds, and the rations fed were based on this showing. On applying the Babcock test it was found that the milk of the cow giving the larger amount tested 1.9 per cent of butter fat, while that of the one yielding the smaller amount tested 6 per cent. This meant that the latter cow was giving two and one-fifth times as much butter fat as the former and should have been fed that much more feed instead of less, as had been the case. The reader will likely say that this is an extreme case. It is, but it simply emphasizes the need of applying the test to a herd of cows and weeding out the worthless loafers from those that are really a source of revenue.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York is lending aid to a back to the land movement that is, to say the least, unique and interesting. She selected twenty young women from many applicants and has placed them on her farm, Brookholt, on Long Island. They dress in bloomers, broad brimmed hats and boys' shoes and are to do all the work on the place, including wood-chopping and caring for the horses. They are to be given thorough training in household duties, and when the time comes will take up plowing, planting and the raising of poultry. At the end of two months, if they like "farming," they will have an opportunity to purchase small tracts from their benefactress. This plan may work all right awhile, but the chances are that most of these girls will have a man around the premises before many moons.

Experience of experiment station and orchard men covering several years proves very conclusively that a big majority—about 80 per cent—of the worms that enter apples do so at the blossom end. The codling moth lays its eggs in the calyx cup within a period of about ten days after the petals fall. It is during this interval that the tree should be given a thorough spraying with an arsenate of lead solution at the rate of about two pounds to fifty gallons of water, the object being to deposit a little of the poison in each one of these calyx cups. If one is spraying to check apple scab or other fungous pests with the bordeaux solution or summer lime sulphur mixture the arsenate may be added to the same volume of these. But whether applied in water or with them the liquid should be given frequent stirring to insure an even distribution of the poison.

Shelled corn, grits and water may be all right for the bunch of old Biddies that are being fattened for pie, but if eggs are wanted something that will furnish a protein element will have to be provided—bran, oilmeal, tankage, bran, clover or alfalfa.

An investigation into the probable cause of rust spots appearing on apples shipped from some Pacific coast points made by Professor D. J. O'Gara, fruit disease expert, leads him to the conclusion that the spots in question are due to impurities contained in the arsenate of lead used in spraying the trees and not to any fungous or scale pest.

While they may not be able to analyze the philosophy of it, it is remarkable at how early an age little children seem to acquire a sense and appreciation of what is right, just and fair. Many a parent ignores this faculty in the early years, only to wake up later to a realization of the fact that both the respect and confidence of the child have been forfeited.

The jungle fowl of India, supposed to be a distant cousin of our modern breeds of domestic fowls, follows out her natural instinct and lays a clutch or two of eggs a year, as many at one time as she can effectively cover and incubate. It is because of this natural habit of their early ancestors that the modern flock of hens incline under average conditions to produce 60 rather than 200 eggs in a year.

Until recently plaster was seldom used in the interior finishing of Pacific slope houses, owing to the fact that it so frequently became loose and fell off during the rainy weather. Instead, the rooms were finished with matched sheathing, heavy building paper or cloth and the paper put on over this. Since the introduction of wood fiber plaster it is being quite generally used in the section mentioned.

In a recent statement published by Chief Forester Graves the estimate is made that 84 per cent of the loss from forest fires during the year 1909 was directly traceable to carelessness on the part of settlers in burning their timber clearings and similar carelessness on the part of the railroads through failure to use effective spark arresters. Here is a type of conservation of natural resources that can be put into practice without the necessity of legislative deliberation or executive decree to make it effective.

For the benefit of the uninitiated it is only fair to say that the poultry business can hardly be classed as an inexpensive, easy, no worry, get-rich-quick occupation. Rather it requires brains, persistence, patience, courage and some other staying qualities. The novice should take it upon a small scale. For those not having experience in the business farmers' bulletin No. 287 on "Poultry Management" will be found instructive and helpful.

Contrary to a practice that has been in vogue for a long time, the best medical authorities now recommend shutting up instead of killing a dog that has bitten persons or other animals and is thought to have the rabies. If such dog really is mad the disease will develop rapidly and in the course of ten or twelve days cause its death. If madness does develop, persons bitten by it should be given the Pasteur treatment at once, while if it does not there is no danger whatever.

The national pure food law adopted in 1906 has done wonders in putting a stop to the dishonest as well as harmful adulteration of food products, drugs, etc. Another law needed equally bad and which would be of incalculable value to the agricultural interests of the country would be a federal pure seed law which would not only prevent the transportation of adulterated or otherwise worthless seeds from one state to another, but their importation of such seeds from foreign countries. Agriculture is so important an interest and its effects so farreaching that congress ought to see its way clear to do this much in its behalf.

The apple, the most popular of cultivated fruits, has a history that traces back into the far distant past. It is said that carbonized apples from 5,000 to 7,000 years old have been found in the mud of the stone age, while pieces apparently cut as for drying have been found beneath the ruins of the lake dwellers. Apples were cultivated by the ancient Romans and were introduced into Britain before the conquest by the Romans and by the third century had spread over the entire island. Apple seeds were brought to New England in 1629, and an orchard of considerable area was set out in Rhode Island in 1636. The many varieties of apples in the country at the present time have been developed from the trees first set in New England.

AN HERB INQUIRY.

A reader of these notes living near Valley Falls, Kan., a widow who has her own and her little daughter's support on hand, writes stating that she has no property, but believes she could make something by gathering herbs for medicinal purposes. She inquires especially about the burdock and horehound, both of which grow plentifully in the locality in which she lives. The writer has never had any experience in the gathering and drying of herbs, but is glad to give the following data, taken from farmers' bulletin No. 188, entitled "Weeds Used in Medicine," which our correspondent can get by sending 5 cents in coin to the office of public documents at Washington. This describes some thirty kinds of common medicinal weeds and would be of value to any one desiring to gather them for market. As to burdock, the roots should be collected in the fall of the year from the larger plants that are in their second year. The roots should be washed carefully after digging, split lengthwise and carefully dried. This is best done by exposing them to the light and air (not direct sunlight) on racks or shelves or on clean, well ventilated barn floors or lofts. They should be spread out thinly and turned every day or two for from three to six weeks. If properly cured the roots should snap when bent. In securing the roots of any herb it is well to take special care in drying, as they will mildew and spoil if not properly cured. The roots shrink in weight about four-fifths and will fetch, cured, from 3 to 8 cents a pound. The burdock seed, for which there is a limited demand, should be secured as soon as it is ripe and brings from 5 to 10 cents per pound. The horehound is a bushy, branching herb belonging to the mint family, and only the leaves and tops are used in medicine. These should be gathered just before the herb is in flower, the coarse parts being rejected. The leaves should be dried in the manner suggested for the burdock roots, care being taken to turn them when drying and to store so that they will not gather moisture. The price paid for horehound leaves varies from 3 to 8 cents per pound.

COPENHAGEN SNUFF

GUARANTEE OF QUALITY AND PURITY

Copenhagen Snuff is made of the best, old, rich, high-flavored leaf tobacco, to which is added only such ingredients as are component parts of natural leaf tobacco and absolutely pure flavoring extracts. The Snuff Process retains the good of the tobacco and expels the bitter and acid of natural leaf tobacco.

WHAT DETERMINES THE PRICE?

The proposal to admit Canadian wheat free under the terms of the reciprocity treaty has led to the statement of some rather interesting theories as to wheat movements and prices. On the one hand we have those of a rather practical turn of mind who contend that the admission into the United States duty free of Canadian wheat will in just the proportion that this bears to the total amount of wheat produced at home reduce the price thereon. On the other hand, we have the view of the economist and experienced wheat trader who contends the price of wheat at the big markets in the United States is not determined by home production and consumption in the larger sense at all, but by price levels prevailing on the London and Liverpool markets, which are the wheat clearing houses of the world. The wherefore of the above lies, so it is claimed, in the fact that wheat prices in the United States are determined by the price which our surplus or export wheat fetches on the foreign markets. It follows from the above, if true, that if, say, 250,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat were diverted to points in the United States instead of going to English markets the supply at the latter points would be in that proportion lessened. This would mean, if the theory holds water, that the price got for our increased volume of export wheat would be increased as a result, so that in the end the price average would be the same as if the Canadian product were shipped directly to Europe. It would seem to be merely a matter of two ways of getting around the same stump.

A MANIFOLD RETURN.

While roses will give a manifold return in beauty, fragrance and all around satisfaction planted in almost any kind of soil, they thrive best in one which contains a good per cent of clay. If the soil about the house does not contain clay a wagon load can usually be got at no great distance. This should be mixed with the loam soil, and if thoroughly rotted manure, leaf mold or decomposed sod can be had so much the better. The roses should be set in the bed two or three inches deeper than they stood in the pot, should be sprinkled daily—sprayed with water under pressure, if possible—sprinkled with flower of sulphur for mildew, with road dust in the morning for slugs and with tobacco tea for spiders and lice. The best blossoms will be produced on the most rapidly growing wood, and this is secured by rather heavy pruning. This applies especially to teas like the American Beauty, but in a less degree to all hardy bush and climbing roses.

WHAT CURES ECZEMA?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D., can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbors unless we were sure of it—and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription.

Because—We know that it gives instant relief to that torturing itch.

Because—D. D. D. starts the cure at the foundation of the trouble.

Because—It cleanses, soothes and heals the skin.

Because—It enables Nature to repair the ravages of the disease.

Because—The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most serious cases show that D. D. D. is today recognized as the absolutely reliable Eczema cure.

V.—Where Is Your Talent?

Remember the case of the man who took his talent, wrapped it in a napkin and buried it?

Not only did his master punish him for his folly, but his conduct has become a byword.

The world has progressed since his time. Modern conditions have developed a kind of man who is even more useless than the one who buried his talent. HE IS THE MAN

WHO SENDS HIS MONEY OUT OF TOWN TO BUY FROM MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

The man who buried his talent at least had the talent to show for it. If we all spent our money out of town in a short time we would have nothing to show for it except BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

The man who patronizes home industries benefits the people he deals with and benefits himself. His conduct is like that of the good and faithful servant who so used the talents intrusted to him that they greatly increased. He is a good and faithful citizen who is worthy of the success he is sure to win.

The next time you see an attractive advertisement of a mail order house go to your local merchant and try to buy the article of him. IF HE HASN'T IT ASK HIM WHY. If he has it ask him why he never told you about it in your local paper.

That will be a boost for us. But we'll stand for it. And we'll boost back; remember that.

Do your share of the boosting and you'll get your share of the prosperity.

SUCCESSFUL MEETING

Northern Minnesota Development Assn. Closed Two Days Meeting Last Saturday.

Failure to Pass Reapportionment Bill By Legislature Condemned by Assn. as Great Injustice.

The Northern Minnesota Development Association closed its fourth convention since its organization, at Duluth last Saturday afternoon after a two days' meeting. Many matters of importance and of interest to the northern part of the state came up for discussion before the meeting.

What the Association did:

"Censured legislature for failure to enact reapportionment law.

Censured legislature's failure to pass bill creating a department of public domain, bill providing for sale of foreign securities in state treasury, bill providing for a deep waterway from the Lake of the Woods to Lake Superior, and for the repeal of the permanent improvement clauses in the law relating to state land sales.

Put its disapproval on the seven-senator constitutional amendment and urged its rejection.

Created immigration commission to engage immigration commissioner, who will have an office in St. Paul and will work independent of the state commission to attract settlers to Minnesota.

Commended Elwell bill for good roads.

Instructed executive committee to appoint a good roads commission.

Urged adoption of constitutional amendment providing for a 1-mill state road tax.

Commended extension of agricultural education in the high schools and common schools of the state.

Pledged its support to the reclamation board.

Urged that a soil survey be made to make available more definite information for the guidance of prospective settlers.

Urged extension of drainage work.

Decided to meet in St. Cloud in December."

Of the many speeches made by prominent men present we print the following made by C. L. Hanson, the local representative for the Commercial Club:

"During a twelve years' residence in the Red river valley, every opportunity has been afforded for actual personal knowledge of conditions, and it is a matter of deep regret to say that there were more actual farmers, more actual tillers of the soil and more actual producers by at least 20 per cent than we have today. This is true in Clay, Norman, Polk, Marshall, Kittson, Red Lake, Pennington and Roseau counties, and this it is safe to say is equally true of the entire northern part of the state.

"Now, gentlemen, the question of vital importance is this: Is there not a way or plan which can be adopted whereby this state of affairs may be remedied to at least some extent? After a careful and prolonged study upon this matter, the conviction dictates that the failure lies in the way we use our homeseekers and prospective purchasers. In short, there is too much money going to waste between the owner and the purchaser.

"In most cases the purchasers, or homeseekers, are men with but a limited amount of money, and perhaps a little stock. For illustration, a man with $1,000 in cash will buy a farm for which he agrees to pay $4,000, which in reality should have been bought for about $3,000. He pays his $1,000, which is all he has, on the land, and gets a contract for a deed subject to payments aggregating $3,000. Now, if all his cash is handed to his agent, in the way of commission, the purchaser has nothing left to face the season's work with, consequently he goes to the bank and gets the required accommodation by giving chattel security. By having only a limited amount of his land under cultivation the first year he needs a little more money in the fall and then some more the following spring. The banker finds that his client is unable to pull through, and does not wish to foreclose, so the next best thing to do is to advise the poor fellow to hold an auction sale and get out of debt, and this he does and moves into town or back to where he came from, and naturally gives the country a black eye.

"The whole reason for his failure is simply because he paid all his money to the agents, which he otherwise would have had to bring his farm in shape to produce enough for himself and family. It is extremely difficult, especially without any money at all, to make a raw farm yield a profit in a dairy community the first year. I hold that if the purchaser had paid a reasonable commission say not to exceed $1 an acre, he would have been in shape to face one or two hard years and get properly started, and would have remained with us permanently. In selling a farm to a permanent settler, one should exercise as much care as the clothier does in selling you a suit of clothes. It must, above all, fit his pocketbook. As I stated before, we have fewer farmers at the present time than we had twelve years ago. This goes to show that our methods of bringing in settlers are wrong. If the commercial clubs would take this matter up in the right way it could not help but bring results.

"The plan is this: Organize your clubs or development leagues in each town or city under the supervision of a district league, and publish a monthly paper for the benefit of the whole district. No commission should be charged except the land owner may pay a small sum to the league, not to exceed $1 an acre, and thus the league can be made self-sustaining. In addition to the paper published, judicious advertising should be done in leading newspapers in an informal way. These leagues would each hire a competent secretary and pay him a reasonable salary.

"Years ago it was the custom in the ordinary course of business transactions to get all you could out of your customer regardless of ultimate consequences. This method, however, has ceased in all lines, except in the land business. I hold that these leagues, together with our legitimate real estate men would form an organization which would work like a wheel with a wheel, and would be talked of all over the United States. I can cite the cases of more than 100 good farmers, to my knowledge, who have returned to the place whence they came, simply because they were not started right.

"I wish to take this opportunity to urge upon our lawmakers the necessity of demonstration farms. I sincerely hope that a bill will be passed which will provide for at least one demonstration farm in each county and it would be better still to have two such farms in our larger counties.

"These plans are laid before you as a practical solution of some of the problems presented to us in the prosecution of the great object of this association."

SOO TRAIN WRECKED

Northbound Passenger Derailed by Washout Caused by Heavy Rains.

One Passenger Killed and Seventeen Receive Some Minor Injuries.

Shortly after twelve o'clock last Friday night, 109, the Soo's northbound flyer, was wrecked at a point near Vergas and one passenger met instant death and seventeen others received some minor injuries.

The accident happened as an aftermath of the heavy rain which fell just prior to the accident, the disaster occuring at a washout in a cut about one mile south east of Vergas.

The passenger to meet death was Mrs. L. S. Berg, wife of the president of the New Orleans, Mobile and Chicago railroad, who in company with her husband were enroute to Winnipeg in their special car. The car of the Berg's which was the first to leave the track caught on fire almost instantly and the unfortunate woman was suffocated before aid could reach her. The rest of the occupants of the car, including Mr. Berg was injured altho not seriously.

The heavy rain dug out a ditch beneath the tracks six feet wide and about five feet deep, on a curve in a cut. The train was going at a rapid pace and was due at Detroit at 11:34, and was a few minutes late. The engine, baggage car and mail car got across the unsupported rails safely but the private car attached behind pitched sideways down an incline to a level some few feet below, carrying behind it into the ditch the two day coaches which were also burned to the trucks. The rest of the train was also derailed but remained in a standing position on the side of the track.

The "wrecker", with a crew of men, was dispatched out of here shortly after the accident to gather up the wreck and to get the track in readiness for traffic again. The southbound flyer which meets the 109 at Detroit was switched off onto the N. P. track at that point and went on to the Twin Cities over that road. In this manner service on the road was maintained uninterrupted while the repairs were being made to the track.

May Was A Warm Month.

The May report from the Duluth weather bureau shows that the mean temperature was almost 3 deg. above the normal, which is given as 48.6, the average having been 51.3. The warmest day was May 18, when the thermometer reached was 81 deg., while the minimum temperature was 24 deg. on May 2. The atmospheric pressure was highest on May 29th, when it was 30.3[illegible], and the lowest on May 11, at 29.2[illegible], the mean being 29.95.

The precipitation was 3.45 inches: snowfall, 1. The greatest precipitation for twenty-four hours was on May 15 and 16, when it amounted to 1.33 inches. The prevailing wind was northeast. The month was divided into eight clear days, thirteen partly cloudy, and ten cloudy.

MONTH OF MARRIAGES

The Much Talked Of Handsome June Bride is Much In Evidence.

Old Adage that June is Month of Marriages Apparently Holds Good.

June is the month of marriages according to an old saying, but whether it is or not Dan Cupid has arranged a nuptial program to take place during the month that may make the old saying hold good. Many a handsome and blushing bride will stand before the altar with the man of her choice and take the vows that will make two hearts beat as one, unless Dame Rumor has made a false alarm.

Of the marriages to take place up to date the following are among the number:

Last Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of Axel Risberg, in this city occurred the marriage of Miss Marie Mossestad to J. E. Budd, deputy register of deeds of Roseau county. The marriage ceremony being performed by I. T. Aastad in the presence of immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride is an accomplished young lady and has made her home here since her graduation as a trained nurse from the Warren Hospital, and has won a host of friends during her stay here. The bridegroom is the deputy register of deeds of Roseau county and is one of the popular and enterprising young business men of Roseau.

The happy couple has the well wishes of their many friends of success and happiness in their married life.

Miss Mabel Gulrud, daughter of C. C. Gulrud and Thomas Nestby also of this city were married at Winnipeg, Canada, last Monday evening, May 29, and have gone to housekeeping at that place. Mr. Nestby holding a position in a Packing House.

Last Thursday June 1st at the home of Rev. Roseland occurred the marriage of Miss Alma Becken to Mr. Ed Thorstad, the Rev. Roseland officiating. The ceremony was performed in the presence of immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties, and after the bridal dinner the happy couple departed on the 10:30 Soo flyer that same evening on their honeymoon trip to the Twin Cities and points in Iowa.

Both the contracting parties are well and favorably known here, having made their home in this city for some time past. The bride had up to a short time ago been employed as saleslady in the Farmer's Co-operative store, where also the bridegroom holds a lucerative position.

The News joins in with their host of friends in extending congratulations.

On Wednesday, May 31st at Adams N. D. occurred the marriage of Miss Camilla Lucile Doherty to Mr. J. J. McCarty, of this city. The wedding ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother in the presence of immediate friends and relatives, the Reverend H. J. McDonald of Michigan City tying the nuptial knot.

The bride was at one time pianist at the local theatre and during her stay here made a wide circle of friends who will be delighted to welcome her to our midst again. The bridegroom needs no introduction to the majority of the people of this city and vicinity, he having been employed by the Soo railway for a number of years and during that time has made this city his head quarters.

Mr. and Mrs. McCarty will be at home to their friends after June 15th in this city.

We join in with the young couple's host of friends in extending congratulations.

Panama Canal Nearly Completed.

"Uncle Sam" has taken stock of what has been accomplished at Panama after seven years of hard work. May 4th ended the the seventh year of canal construction by Americans. Only one-fourth of the great task of excavation remains to be done for the "ground hogs" have removed 138,000,000 cubic yards from the line of the canal. That leaves only 44,000,000 yards to be cut away.

In placing of the concrete in the locks is more than 52 per cent completed and the installing of the lock gates has begun and 70 per cent of the filling of the Gatun dam, which will feed the canal with water has been done.

The lock gates are staggering in with the timber gates of the canals in this country. Each leaf of which there are two in a gate is seven feet thick, 65 feet long, and from 47 to 82 feet in height, there being no less than 92 of these leaves. Special hoisting machinery has been installed to place these masses of steel.

One of the unexpected obstacles in the construction was the development of twenty-two slides in the Culebra cut within a short distance of nine miles, but it is stated that these will not delay the completion of the canal as the earth can be easily removed by dredges after the water is turned on.

Receive Many Filings.

That there is a great demand for lands is evidenced by the rushing business being done by the land office at Crookston these days. In order to keep up with the pace of business it has been made necessary for Register Toupin and Receiver Peterson together with the Clericial force to put in extra time.

During the month of May the total number of acres filed on the Red Lake Indian reservation was 12,134.57, acres this with the 928 acres of other public lands, and the 13,609.76 acres on the Chippewa reservation makes a total for the month, includes 320 acres otherwise classified, of 27,014.33 acres.

Applications are being received from every state in the union and the acreage of vacant lands is fast diminishing day by day. It is just a question of a very short time before almost every quarter section of this heretofore vast stretch of vacant lands will find a respective owner.

To Get Fine Attraction.

Manager Anderson of the Auditorium announces that he has been fortunate in landing as the next attraction one of the best shows on the road today. "The Flower of the Ranch" has been secured to appear here for one performance on the evening of July 10th. This company is showing big city time and does not show in the smaller cities, but owing to a couple of vacant dates between its appearance at the Shubert Theatre at Minneapolis July 2 to 8 and its engagement at Winnipeg for a week' stand during the fair at that place, this city has been selected as one of the two places where the show will perform during one of the vacant dates. The company is composed of forty members and travels in two special cars.

Field Day July 9th.

C. Walden, superintendent Northwest District of the Minnesota Anti-Saloon League, was in the city last week making arrangements for a field day, similar to the one held here last year, in this city July 9th. A more extensive mention of the fact will be made in this paper at a later date.

The graduating class and teachers of the Newfolden school came down Tuesday of last week to have their class picture taken at Iberty's gallery.

CLOSED LAST WEEK

City Schools Closed for the Summer Vacation Last Week.

Last Thursday and Friday Evenings Marked the Closing Exercises.

Last Friday was the day of real and unadulterated joy for the small boy as he laid aside his book and slate to enjoy his three month's "respite" from the schoolroom. As is customary the last week was devoted to taking final tests and state examinations and were busy days for pupils and teachers.

The closing day exercises were held in the Auditorium on Thursday and Friday evenings and the program arranged and as presented are deserving of the highest credit. In the class day program on Thursday evening many new and novel sketches were part of the program and were produced under the excellent skill and management of Miss Schwalbe. The May Pole and the Witches scene are especially deserving of extraordinary credit, as are likewise the songs and speeches delivered.

Hon. Charles E. Elmquist, one of the state railway commissioners of Minnesota, delivered a most eloquent and fitting commencement address for the graduating class at the Auditorium on Friday evening.

As a memorial of the class of '11 the students presented to the school board a purse of money with which to erect a fountain in front on the east entrance of Lincoln High School.

Most of the instructors departed Saturday afternoon and evening for their respective homes to spend the summer vacation.

The following instructors out of the present year teaching force, will return to their duties here next fall:

J. H. Hay, Superintendent.
M. A. Schmitt, Manual training.
Louise Twinam, Principal.
Theoline B. Goodwin, Normal
Janet C. Ward, Domestic Science.
Lois Burton, H. S. Asst.

Senator Cummins Sees Omens.

Washington, May 27.—Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, at the graduation exercises of the Washington college of law, declared Friday night that the shadow of a bloody revolution hangs over the United States.

"Within a decade," said Cummins, "time will see whether the grievances of today will be settled by law or by the manner that has been in existance for 2,000 years—the revolution of violence and terror and bloodshed.

"The greatest problem that we are facing today is the question of distribution of the vast wealth of the nation.

"I do not for a moment suggest the equality of fortune. The openness of opportunity is what is needed in this country today. Until recently this law of competition, which is the survival of the fittest had ruled the commerce of this country. Now the business is being concentrated into the hands of a few, and the vast opportunity that once existed is being taken away.—Daily News.

The vicious and wanton killing of birds has got to stop, according to Game Warden Munch. Mayors and heads of police departments, teachers and parents are asked to co-operate in the endeavor to impress upon children, young men and boys, that the useless slaughter of birds must stop or there will be trouble. The St. Paul humane society gives the following reasons why birds should not be killed: Because the law forbids it; because they trust us and cheer our lives by their beauty and their songs, because we have it from the best authority that they destroy each year in the state only, 2,000,000 of noxious worms and insects. —Ex.

The annual destruction of the country roads is due. The farmer with a road tax to work out, takes a good, strong grip on the plow handles, and after he has ripped up the best piece of road he can find in his neighborhood, and piled a few cords of sod on the center of the roads so that teams and automobiles have to take to the ditch, returns home at night, with most of his winter's spleen worked off. If he has to do time for each profane word he has caused to be uttered by the weary and disgusted traveler, the average road despoiler would spend about ninety-nine million years in purgatory—and we trust there will be no fuel famine.—St. Cloud Journal-Press.

Teacher's Training School at Crookston.

The Teachers' Training School which will be held at the State School of Agriculture, Crookston, opens for a six week's session Monday, June 19. Besides the regular branches the instructors of the school will give work in agriculture, horticulture, dairying and live stock, poultry, gardening, cooking, sewing, and manual training. A faculty numbering twelve will teach the various branches.

The full equipment of the school will be used and teachers will receive great benefit from this opportunity. There will be only one school similar to this one in the state. The teachers of Northwestern Minnesota are fortunate in being near this one.

Teachers will live in the dormitories paying $3 a week for board, light and lodging. Prominent lecturers have been secured and a very icstructive session will be held. Anyone interested may secure a bulletin giving complete information by writing to the School of Agriculture, Crookston, Minnesota. Tuition is free to all teachers or prospective teachers.

White Earth Men Under Indictment

Fergus Falls, Minn., June 3.—Ten prominent citizens of the White Earth country appeared in the United States court here yesterday to answer to charges of conspiracy in connection with Indian land transfers. Criminal prosecution in these cases was undertaken by direction of Attorney General Wickersham, and indictments were returned by the grand jury here last Saturday, but the names of the accused were not given out until warrants were served.

The service was made by Deputy Marshall Buckman Friday.

Those arrested were: Gus H. Beaulieu, editor of the White Earth Tomahawk, an Indian attorney prominent in reservation affairs; M. J. Kolb, banker and real estate dealer at Ogema and Bagley; Robert G. Beaulieu, brother of Gus Beaulieu, and also prominent in reservation affairs; B. L. Fairbanks, merchant at White Earth; John Leecby, merchant at White Earth; L. S. Waller, banker at Waubun; Lewis D. Davis, attorney at Waubun. Joseph A. Perrault, of Ogema, former government scout; William Uran, farmer of Ogema; Andrew Vanoss, banker and land man at Waubun.

The indictment against the two Beaulieus, Fairbanks and Leecby, contains thirty counts, that many alleged deals being specified. The indictment against Waller, Davis and Vanoss contains fourteen counts, and the indictment against Kolb, Perrault and Uran, fourteen counts.

When arraigned all of the defendants entered pleas of not guilty, but many of them entered them with the request that they be permitted to withdraw them later, in case they decide to demur to the indictments. Judge Amidon gave them thirty days in which to file demurrers, understanding that if demurrers were to be filed, they should be disposed of before the November term of court, so that the cases could come to trial at that time if the demurrers were overruled.—Duluth Herald.

Mr. Peter Wickstrom wishes to announce to all those interested that his house is moved away from the ditch line so that the grading work may go on at any time now.

Mr. Peter Wickstrom of Lincoln Township, has just completed his new living house, and they say it is a dandy. This shows what the good old cows will do for one if properly attended to Understand that Mr. Wickstrom is one of the largest if not the largest patron of the creamery now.

Mr. W. O. Addy and E. J. Yackel were visitors in Karlstad on Sunday, going on the latter's speeder.

Roy Halseth, of Thief River Falls, was a Sunday visitor, calling upon his sister Magna.

Water, water, water, such a lot, and then some. The rain on Friday evening was a soaker right, and Lincoln never received so much rain at one time before in her history. The culvert in town at the depot was washed completely out and traffic has to go half mile south of town to get here. The swamp west of Lewis Anderson's has a foot of water over the road, and it will take some time before you can walk over it.

W. O. Addy and Miss Halseth were visitors at the P. O. Hanson home on Friday evening.

J. J. Olstad was an all day visitor at the Charley Carlson home, on Saturday.

A great many people were planning to go to Karlstad on Saturday, to take in their Market Day programm, but owing to the fact that the flyer did not come thru at all that day, they were all disappointed except Israel Bergstrom and the photographer who is in town now, and the writer cannot recall his name at present. These two received a tie pass which entitled them to a free ticket there.

Mr. Arvid Johnson visited at the Anton Jenson home on Sunday evening, and judging from the melodious strains of music issuing forth from there, they must have had a grand concert.

Nelson's auto had a crowd of picnicers out to the sand ridge on Sunday last, and they reported an enjoyable time, altho they came home quite early due to some unknown reason.

Mrs. E. J. Yackel returned home Tuesday morning after a six weeks visit with her parents in Iowa.

Rev. Waldien of Warren was a visitor at Rev. O. G. Gronberg home on Tuesday.

Mr. John Gratzek, the Polish King, was a Strandqtist visitor [illegible]day of last week. He reports [illegible]king fine in his country, also a contemplated trip with his wfe to Chicago, where he expects to take in the graduating exercises of the Chicago "U", as his son Thomas is a member of it.

Pickets Won.

The game between the "Pickets" and the "Tigers", two teams aspiring to second honors in this city, was played on Sunday afternoon. The "Pickets" after a close game tramped off with the game by a score of 5 to 4. The game was a close fought one and was a tie in the last inning when Harry Becken of the "Pickets" made a home run which brought in the winning score.

Guy Larson, the twirler for the "Pickets", while attempting to catch a fly, sustained a broken finger.

Art Bain, the ex-league "umps," was secured to do the magistrate act for the teams to insure a square deal.

Next Sunday the teams will play outside teams, the "Pickets" will play St. Hilaire at that place and the "Tigers" will go down to Red Lake Falls to play a game with the second team in that city.

Federal Dam is Fishermen's Mecca.

Every resident there is hospitable and will make your stay pleasant. There are plenty of fish of the choicest varieties, and you can sit on the grassy bank just below the million-dollar dam and angle for them.

The size of them may be judged by the fact that a resident of Thief River Falls, weighing 240 pounds thought he had snagged his hook on a saw log, when it was only a bull-head at the end of the line.

That was a week ago and the laugh he heard still rings in his ears and his eyes still bulge. If you doubt this, ask Christ Porter, for he was there or thereabouts.

The great Leach Lake stretches away in the distance until the shore line is no longer visible, and is surrounded with tepees of the noble Red Man. Here is a chance to commune with Nature in all her natural beauty.

At Federal Dam you can take a launch and visit Bear Island, Sugar Point, the Giant Pass and a Hole in the Lake.

Dusky damsels of the forest will paddle birch-bark canoes around at your pleasure. It is a safe summer resort, for lightning has never been known to strike the lake.

The constant evaporation from the large body of water and cool breezes temper the heat so you can loll upon the sandy shores in perfect comfort on the hottest day.

Giant pines cast their shadows athwart the sheen of the silvery waters and huge denizens of the deep disport themselves in the crest of the wave. It is not exactly Elysian, but bordering on it.

Take the Soo line any week-day morning and depend on getting all necessary supplies—even ice—at Federal Dam.

Call on H. H. Zaiser and F. J. Pfefferle there and join the Fish Club.

Legal Tangle Over Soo Job.

Crookston, June 2.—A knotty civil case was adjourned at Red Lake Falls yesterday afternoon by Judge Watts in the district court until August 28, when at least two weeks more will be consumed in the taking of evidence, in addition to a week just closed, in the case of the Merchants National bank vs. A. Perrusso, a contractor. Perusso appears the real plaintiff in the case and the Soo railroad the defendant. Perrusso had a sub-contract for the construction of a section of the Soo line from Bemidji to Thief River Falls, from Foley, Welch & Stewart, and the bank advanced him the money to start operations.

It is alleged that Perrusso did not get along well with the contract, and after advancing some money on estimates of work done, the Soo became apprehensive on hearing that Perrusso had contracted heavy obligations which were not being discharged. Following this, the Soo paid him little and claimed to have done over some of the work and to have finished the contract. Thus while Perrusso is being sued, the Soo road, Foley, Welch & Stewart and several others are also made defendants, and the defendant named in the suit is, in a sense, the plaintiff in the case. About $15,000 is being sued for and there are about 200 causes of action named in the complaint.

Harris Richardson, of Richardson & Kerr of St. Paul, represents the Soo, and C. E. Boughton represents the bank.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Circuit Meeting June 13 and 14.

The semi-annual meeting of The Thief River Falls Circuit will be held in the Silver Creek congregation at Thorwick, Rev. H. Bjornson's call, on June 13th and 14th. The meeting will commence at 10:30 o'clock on Tuesday June 13th and will be opened by a sermon by Rev. I. T. Aastad of this city The ministers who will be present at the meeting are: Rev. Bjornson, of Thorwick Rev. O. E. Saeboe, Grygla: Rev. Ordahl Holt; Rev. S. T. Palm, St. Hilaire and Rev. I. T. Aastad of this city.

Saterdol's "Stevne" Next Week.

Next week will see the first of the large gatherings to take place in this city during the month of June. On Tuesday and Wednesday, June 13 and 14, the Saterdol's "Stevne" will take place here and it is estimated that between 600 add 700 persons will be in attendance at this meeting. Delegates from all over the United States will be represented at this "Stevne" [illegible] this will undoubtedly be the largest gathering of its kind ever held in this city.

No Game—Wet Grounds.

Owing to the heavy rain last Saturday evening the base ball game with the Grand Forks White Sox scheduled for Sunday afternoon on the local diamond failed to materialize. While the grounds were in fairly good shape on Sunday afternoon and would have permitted a game the visitors failed to put in an appearance as the weather was threatening more rain Sunday morning. This is the second time the conflict between the locals and that team has been abandoned owing to rain; the game scheduled for Decoration Day being abandoned on that account.

LEGISLATORS ARE SCORED

Northern Minnesota Boosters Criticise Lawmakers for Failure to Reapportion the State.

Reapportionment as an issue in the Northern Minnesota Development association's convention at Duluth could not be squelched. Resolutions were adopted condemning the recent legislature for failure to enact a new apportionment and for passage of the seven senator bill.

Incidentally, St. Paul is to be made the headquarters for a new immigration bureau to be organized and financed by the Northern Minnesota Development association. Offices will be secured there, a competent man will be placed in charge and funds will be provided for advertising the northern part of the state.

When the resolutions committee reported the reapportionment section was first read. It was adopted unanimously. The resolutions on advertising and publicity were adopted next, the plan to advertise from St. Paul the opportunities offered in the Northwest meeting instant favor.

Good roads, as urged by Governor Eberhart and other speakers at the convention, were boosted by the appointment of a committee to co-operate with county boards and the state highway commission to insure the building of trunk line roads through Northern Minnesota. This committee will meet at Crookston in the near future. The work of the state reclamation board was commended and resolutions were adopted asking the state auditor to compile a report on soil conditions in Northern Minnesota.

The association will convene again in St. Cloud in December, when an active campaign for reapportionment will be started. New committees will be appointed to visit the different counties in Northern and Central Minnesota to arouse sentiment for reapportionment.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Accused of embezzling about $14,000 of the funds of the University of Minnesota, J. D. Brun of Minneapolis, for four years cashier and accountant of the institution and a trusted employe for ten years, is behind cell bars in the city jail. He sticks to his story of a holdup, but detectives declare they have found so many contradictions to important statements that they say the entire story is untrue and that an effort has been made to cover discrepancies in accounts.

J. A. McVittie, his wife and two children, residing near Pawnee City, Neb., were killed and a third child dangerously wounded in their beds by Jim Filder, a farmhand, who had been working for McVittie. Filder shot and killed himself after shooting Sheriff Fuller three times and seriously wounding him.

Crazed by jealousy because his girl wife had instituted divorce proceedings Herman Pephlo, a Sioux Falls (S. D.) tailor, murdered his mother-in-law, Mrs. Carrie Johnson, and killed himself. Three shots were fired, one of which was aimed at his wife, who made her escape.

The jury in the case of Representative George R. Nye, on trial at Columbus, O., on the charge of soliciting a bribe of $500 from State Printer Crawford, returned a verdict of not guilty.

James and Matthew Wright, brothers, were murdered at their home in Sac City, Ia. Clif Nelson, a Sac City youth, is in jail charged with the crime.

LEADER IN HIS PROFESSION

Death of Gustaf Gullberg, Stockholm Journalist, a Great Loss to Sweden. Article in Russian Newspaper Attracting General Attention in Norway—Danish Society of Small Beginning Has Notable Record.

SWEDEN.

In the death of Gustaf Gullberg Stockholm, as well as Sweden, has lost one of its most efficient newspaper men. He was for a number of years the editor and publisher of the Stockholm Tidningen and was a real friend of the United States. Instead of always criticising America, like the average Swedish newspaper does, he upheld American institutions and made several visits to the United States. He was a representative of a syndicate of papers at the world's fair in Chicago and his reports were always characterized for their fairness. Gullberg was born in Malmo in 1859. At the age of twenty he decided that he would enter the theatrical world and so he did, following this avocation for about three years. He soon tired of this profession, however, and entered the newspaper profession, in which he at once felt at home and in which he afterwards made such a splendid success. He had published the Stockholm Tidningen since 1906 and the paper is today one of the leading and enterprising daily newspapers of Stockholm.

"Swedish hospitality is on a downward grade," comments a prominent journalist in a recent article in one of the Stockholm papers. "There was a time," says the same writer, "when we were considered the most hospitable people in the world and in the very best society the hospitality was something extraordinary, even so much so that it was commented upon favorably by all foreigners. How different now. If you care to get real hospitality and eat at a real good table you will have to turn to the middle class of society. They are having a better and more social time now than they did before, for they are maintaining the good old Swedish customs, both at the table and at their social gatherings generally. The upper crust of society, that is, the nobility and some of the professional men, has grown continental in its manner of living and eating, and this is an untimely sign for us Swedes of the old school."

The movement to restrict the attendance of children at the moving picture theaters is gaining ground every day. Recently the school boards of the elementary schools, as well as the co-educational colleges of Sdertelje, prohibited the attendance of their students except when accompanied by parents or guardians. This action is taken because the shows are considered harmful to young people whose character and morals are as yet in process of formation.

King Gustaf has offered an international athletic prize to the coming winner of the fifty-yard dash at the Olympic games which are to be held in Stockholm next summer and the czar of Russia has offered a similar prize for the winner in the hundred-yard dash. Much interest is being evinced in the Olympian games all over the country and the executive committee is hard at work making the necessary preparations for the big event.

King Gustaf and Queen Victoria were the guests of King Emmanuel of Italy at Rome for three days last week. The purport of their visit to Rome was to be present at the fiftieth royal anniversary. They were greatly feted in Rome and a number of functions and demonstrations were given in their honor. Sweden was one of the first countries in the world to recognize the new kingdom, which was founded in 1861.

Franz von Reichenau, the newly appointed German ambassador to Stockholm, arrived April 10 to assume his duties. William Cooper, formerly vice consul in Archangel, has been appointed to the same position at Teheran and T. I. Soderlund has been appointed vice cousul in St. Petersburg.

Swedish consumed 1,500 pounds of gold and 14,000 pounds of silver for industrial purposes in 1910. The gold deposits at the Riksbank are $12,500,000. Sweden has coined a total of about $27,000,000 in gold coins and about $2,000,000 in subsidiary silver coins.

Anders Zorn, the renowned Swedish portrait artist, who is at present in the United States, has been named foreign representative of the French Academy of Arts to succeed Fritz von Uhde.

Stockholm's population has increased by 2,675 during the last year. The present population of the city is 331,307.

NORWAY.

The Moscow Vjedomosti, one of the leading newspapers of Russia, recently contained an editorial which attracted general attention in Norway. The paper first mentioned the Russian proposition to extend its territorial limits, and the dissatisfaction which this proposition caused in the interested circles in England and Norway, "the fishermen of whose countries are the main marauders along the coasts of Russia." Next the paper argues that each country must have a right to fix its own territorial limits, England making the limit twenty miles at Ceylon and Norway making it ten geographical miles at one point. The Vjedomosti finally devotes considerable space to the attitude on this matter taken by Foreign Minister Irgens of Norway at a meeting of the storthing. He says that the two countries were on the most friendly terms, and the paper was in hopes that Irgens expressed the true sentiments of the Norwegian government.

A new bill for a vaccination law has been introduced into the storthing. This law will make vaccination compulsory. The specifications are that every child must be vaccinated before it is four years old and must be revaccinated before it is fourteen. Parents are made responsible for the vaccination of their children. The present vaccination law is very old, dating from the first part of last century. This law does not make vaccination directly compulsory, but specifies that no person can be confirmed or married unless a vaccination certificate is presented. Neither can pupils be admitted to the schools, other than the common schools, unless they are vaccinated.

The estimate of this year's emigration from Norway is 13,000. Last year there were 18,000 persons who emigrated to foreign countries. Naturally enough most of these went to the United States. There were 4,000 Norwegians who emigrated to Canada. The cause given for the falling off in emigration is due to the fact that there are better times now in Norway than there has been for a number of years. If the good times continue emigration will have a decided setback and this would certainly be a good thing for Norway, which has during the past few years been sapped of her youngest citizens at an alarming rate.

Norwegian bank accounts have been increasing at a gratifying rate recently and the following figures show that the country is on a solid financial basis: In 1905 the total bank deposits were 675,600,000 kroner; in 1906, 743,100,000 kroner; in 1907, 802,800,000 kroner; in 1908, 842,800,000 kroner; in 1909, 905,700,000 kroner. The record for the year 1910 is not known. But it is estimated that the amount will pass the billion kroner mark in the course of the present year.

Little Crown Prince Olaf had a mild attack of the measles lately. He did not seem to mind the experience much and was only sulking because he was compelled to stay in the house and keep warm.

The national customs receipts for the month of March amounted to 3,465,000 crowns. They were only 3,002,000 crowns during the same period last year.

DENMARK.

In the year 1833 two students of the University of Denmark were sitting together and talking as to how they might be of help to some of their poorer comrades. They decided to start a society with that aim in view and they called it "Philadelphia." Three years afterwards another student joined the society. The three young men later became quite prominent. One was Provost E. Glahn, the others being Rev. J. Rogind and Dr. G. Winther. The society has in these years of its existence distributed 400,000 crowns among needy, worthy students. It will soon celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary.

The czar of Russia will, in the early part of next month, start on an extensive European tour and plans to visit Stockholm, Christiania and Copenhagen also. In the days of old King Christian, Nicholas, who then was on a visit to Denmark, declared after engaging in a quarrel with the old king that he would never visit Denmark again. It appears that he has changed his mind.

It is reported on good authority that the Danish government is about to adopt some very stringent methods in the near future whereby to put a stop to the Mormon propaganda in the country at present. Mormon missionaries have been and are operating all over the country and have been winning many converts and are also inducing people to emigrate to Utah.

The number of females in the city of Copenhagen on Feb. 1, 1911, was 252,212. The number of males was only 222,742. It will thus be seen that the capital of Denmark would be under the control of the women if they had the same rights as the men.

An international congress for the protection of animals will be held in Copenhagen in August. The king of Denmark has promised to be the protector of the congress and Minister of Justice Bulow to be its honorary president.

King Gustaf will make a brief visit to King Frederick on his return trip from Rome within a few days. These two monarchs have occasion to meet quite often.

UNIVERSITY CASHIER DETAINED BY POLICE

Charged With Embezzling $14,000---Says He Was Robbed.

Joseph D. Bren, cashier of the University of Minnesota, has been placed under arrest by the Minneapolis police, charged with the embezzlement of the $14,000 which he declared had been taken from him on the university grounds by three highwaymen.

He was taken to central police station by order of Chief Michael Mealey and was given a gruelling examination until the minute of his arrest. Pierce Butler of St. Paul, member of the board of regents of the university, was present at the examination of Bren.

Chief Mealey would give absolutely no information as to the result of his examination of Bren, but from others who were present it was learned that Bren stuck steadfastly to his story throughout the whole of the questioning by Chief Mealey, Captain Smith, Detectives De Laittre and Broderick, who signed the complaint against Bren, and several other members of the department.

Chief Mealey does assert, however, that his department has been unable to verify in any particular Bren's story of the robbery. To the contrary he asserts that he has statements from several persons who were in the vicinity of the supposed robbery which contradict Bren's statement in that they say they saw no one there at the time in any way resembling the men Bren says robbed him.

The police found that Mrs. Maud Eddington, an intimate friend of Bren's for a number of years, had possession of a key to the safety deposit vault where university funds were kept.

The accounts of the university are said to be in very bad shape and the state public examiner is engaged in trying to unravel the tangle.

MOVE TO OUST WHITTIER

Charges Filed Against Minnesota Training School Head.

Charging F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the boys' training school, not only with having brutally whipped and beaten inmates of that institution with a leather thong, but also inflicting similar punishment to girls in the girls' training school, Ralph Wheelock, private secretary to Governor Eberhart, filed a formal complaint with the board of control, asking for Whittier's removal. The complaint was drawn by attorneys under the direction of A. D. Stephens of Crookston.

FATAL PLUNGE INTO WELL

Minnesota Man Meets Death in Peculiar Manner.

Chris Christopherson plunged headlong into a thirty-foot well at South Stillwater and was taken out dead He had several ugly cuts on his forehead, face and head. His head was submerged in water.

The man was single, about fifty years old, and has been working for years about sawmills and in the pineries. It is presumed he went to the well to drink from a bucket used to draw water, and, losing his balance, fell in.

TEACHING THE CALF TO DRINK.

It is amusing sometimes to see the somewhat lengthy dissertations on teaching the calf how to drink, as if it were a matter of considerable difficulty. There are a few simple precautions that make the matter relatively easy—at least the writer has found them so in his own experience. In the first place, the calf will learn to drink the more quickly if it hasn't acquired the habit of sucking. It is well to take the little chap away from the mammy after it has her udder cleaned out in good shape. In the case of inexperienced persons the job is aggravated by going at it wrong way to. It is well to be friendly with the hungry little bovine, and with this idea in view straddle its back, give it two fingers and when it has got a good grip on them gently lower the head into the pail, keeping the fingers far enough apart so that the milk will pull between them. Keep the little brute's nostrils above the milk line and when it is getting a good draft of milk withdraw the fingers. It will shortly want something to suck besides its tongue, and the fingers will have to be returned to the mouth, but gone at in this way it will not be long before the calf will drink in an entirely satisfactory way.

ORCHARD HEATING.

The question of heating orchards during frosty nights to prevent a destruction of the bloom has passed beyond the experimental stage, and this year every level headed orchardist who lives in a latitude that is likely to be visited by a spring frost when the trees are in bloom should make preparations at once to safeguard himself against frost damage. Where it can be procured at a price of from 4 to 6 cents per gallon crude petroleum will serve the purpose as well or better than any other material and has the advantage that, being in a covered pot, it is not rendered useless by a rain, as is quite often the case with wood or litter of several kinds. There are several good oil burners on the market, and those made without soldered joints are preferable. Experience has shown that about fifty burners should be used per acre and so set that the wind will blow the smoke and heat from them into the limbs of the trees. In a majority of cases the critical—coldest—time during a night in which frost occurs is between 3 and 6 a. m., and the burners should be held in readiness until the time mentioned. Frequently conditions prevailing in the early evening will indicate a frost later, but a change of wind may prevent it. Two or three thermometers of a good make should be stationed through the orchard so as to keep tab on the temperature. It is well to remember that both apple and peach blossoms in full bloom will stand from four to five degrees of frost without serious damage; hence if only two or three degrees of frost threaten it will not be necessary to make more than a smudge on the east side of the orchard just before sunup so as to prevent a too rapid thawing of the blossoms. Stumps, cordwood, brush and other litter have also been used with good results, fewer fires being required with materials making a larger blaze and giving more heat. In some of the orange growing sections of California orchards of from fifty to a hundred acres have been protected by driving through them in the early morning hours low wagons bearing fires so fed as to make dense smudges. Whatever method be followed in protecting the orchard from frost, preparations for heating or smudging should be made well in advance so that one will not be taken unawares. Instances are numerous where the money spent in orchard heating has been returned manifold in the crop return of a single season.

While it is a mighty fine thing for the farmer to have an automobile and all right for him to do so if he has the money in the bank with which to purchase the machine, it is a very questionable procedure for any fellow who has to increase his indebtedness to buy one. We have in mind a fellow who did just this thing, and in the end it meant that he lost the farm, as he couldn't get his money's worth out of the machine without using it, and he couldn't do this without neglecting the farm work.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 00-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 26th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances: that the land and premises above described were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

Commissioners' Proceedings

Thief River Falls, Minn.,
May 15, 1911.

Pursuant to adjournment the county board of Pennington county met in the auditor's office in the auditorium bldg. in the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., at 11 o'clock a. m.

Members present, Aubol, Shaw, Larson, Wold, Hedeen.

Members absent, none.

On motion duly carried the county board proceeded to open bids for remodeling the county court house, with the following results:

F. S. Doege, Thief River Falls...	$6,150
Ed. A. Krohn, " " ...	6,160

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Larson, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Hedeen:

Resolved, That the bid of F. S. Doege in the sum of $6,150 for remodeling the court house, as per plans and specifications on file, be accepted, and the proper officers are hereby instructed to execute the necessary contracts. Resolution prevailed unanimously.

On motion duly carried the board took a recess until 1 o'clock p. m.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 1 o'clock p. m. All members present.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the sum of $400 be and the same is hereby appropriated from the county's portion of the liquor license moneys, same to be expended in improving and maintaining the roads leading into the city of Thief River Falls, said sum to be available when such license money has been turned into the county treasury, provided also that said moneys shall be spent under the supervision of Commissioners Shaw and Aubol.

On motion duly carried the county board adjourned until 5 o'clock p. m., to meet with the county board of Red Lake county at the court house at Red Lake Falls, Minn.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.,
May 15, 1911.

Pursuant to agreement the county board of Pennington county and the county board of Red Lake county met in joint session in the commissioners' room in the county court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minn., for the purpose of ascertaining and effecting a division of the funds and indebtedness of the original Red Lake county and the percentage of the indebtedness to be assumed by each of the existing counties of Red Lake and Pennington.

Moved by Commissioner Shaw, seconded by Commissioner Pigeon, that Commissioner Demann act as chairman of the joint meeting. Motion carried.

Moved by Commissioner Aubol, same being duly seconded, that Auditors Latendresse and Fasel act as secretaries of the joint boards. Motion carried.

After due deliberation, the Red Lake county board acting separately, on motion duly carried, proposed to place the value of the county building at $45,500 as of date of Nov. 23, when county was divided.

The Pennington county board acting separately, on motion moved by Commissioner Shaw, duly seconded by Commissioner Hedeen, that the Pennington county board accept settlement of the county buildings at the sum of $45,500. Motion carried unanimously.

The boards again acting jointly, the following resolution was offered by Commissioner Aubol, who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Commissioner Kankel:

Whereas, The boards of county commissioners of Red Lake county and Pennington county have met in joint session for the purpose of agreeing upon the valuation of the county buildings and the amount of indebtedness of Red Lake county and the funds in its county treasury at the time of the creation of Pennington county, and full discussion and consideration has been had, therefore

Be It Resolved, That it is hereby agreed by and between the respective boards of county commissioners of Red Lake and Pennington counties and between said counties:

First—That the valuation of the county buildings of Red Lake county at the time of the creation of Pennington county is the sum of forty-five thousand five hundred dollars ($45,500.00).

Second—That at the time of such creation there was thirty-six thousand nine hundred twenty-seven and 68-100 dollars ($36,927.68) in the treasury of Red Lake county.

Third—That at the time of such creation the total outstanding debt of Red Lake county was the sum of one hundred fifty eight thousand six hundred and thirty-two and 85-100 dollars ($158,632.85), as shown by the list attached marked Exhibit A.

Fourth—That deducting the value of said buildings and the amount of said funds from the total outstanding debt of Red Lake county there remains a balance of seventy-six thousand two hundred five and 17-100 dollars ($76,205.17), of which fifty-five and one half (55½) per cent shall be and is hereby assumed to be paid by Pennington county and said county shall make due provision to pay the same as it falls due.

Adopted by each board acting jointly and severally this fifteenth day of May A. D. 1911.

ORDER APPOINTING VIEWERS.

In the matter of the petition of Ole Skreland and others for County Ditch No. 53 in the county of Pennington, state of Minnesota:

State of Minnesota, county of Pennington, ss.

Whereas, A petition bearing date the 23rd day of March, A. D. 1910, signed by Ole Skreland and others, praying for the establishment of a ditch in said county designated and numbered by the county auditor as county ditch No. 53, the route of which is fully described in said petition, together with a proper bond accompanying the same, has been filed with the county auditor of said county; and said county auditor has given due notice of the pendency of said petition, and the said notice has been published and served as by law required; and hearing had on said petition pursuant to said notice; and the said county board of said county have heretofore duly appointed a competent engineer, towit: C. H. Martz, to make a survey of said ditch.

Now therefore, We, the county board of said county, at a session held this day, do hereby appoint Gilbert Haavi and K. O. Gigstad and R. M. Johnson three resident freeholders of said county, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and not of kin to any of the parties known to be interested therein, to be viewers of said proposed work and of the route thereof. The said viewers shall first take an oath to faithfully perform their duties as such viewers, and thereafter, having received a certified copy of the petition for said ditch and of the order appointing them such viewers and of the order of the county auditor of said county designating the time and place of the first meeting of said viewers, shall meet at the time and place specified in the order of the county auditor aforesaid, and shall proceed to view said proposed work and the land damaged or benefitted thereby; and, having completed said view and examination of said work, shall make and file their report thereof with the county auditor of said county within thirty days from the date of their first meeting. In said report they shall in tabular form give the names of the owners of each tract of land to be benefitted or damaged by said proposed work, the description of each tract of land so benefitted or damaged (said names of owners to be the same as appear on the county tax duplicates of said county and the description to be given in legal form), and the total number of acres in each of said tracts, the estimated number of acres in each tract of land to benefited or damaged (as the case may be), the number of acres added to any tract by the total or partial drainage of any meandered lake or the change of any water course and the location and value of such added land; the damage, if any, to riparian rights, pertaining to any tract, and the amount that each tract of land will be benefited or damaged by the construction of said work. In case said ditch drains, either in whole or in part, any public or corporate road or railroad, or benefits any such road so that the roadbed or traveled track of any such road will be made better by the construction of said ditch, said viewers shall estimate the benefits arising therefrom to said road, road beds, or railroads, and report said benefits, together with the names of roads and other particulars necessary to identify the corporations, private or public, to be benefited thereby, and amounts of benefits to each, they shall report as part of such tabular statement the damages awarded to each municipal or other corporation for injury to any road or roadbed, and from the necessary construction and maintenance of any bridge, culverts, or other works rendered necessary by the establishment of such ditch, stating the same separately. They shall also report the total estimated benefits in respect to said ditch entire, and branches thereof, if any, and also whether or not, in their opinion, the estimated expense of the construction of said ditch, including the damages assessed therefor, is greater than the utility of said proposed ditch; and whether or not said proposed ditch is impracticable for any reason, and if so stating the reason why it should not be constructed. In making said view and survey of said proposed work and their report thereon, the said viewers shall proceed according to chapter 230 of the general laws of 1905.

The following proposal was submitted by the Security Trust Company of St. Paul.

Thief River Falls, Minn., May 15, 1911.

Hon. County Board, Penningto
County, Minn.

Gentlemen:—Assuming that the 191 assessed valuation for the county o Pennington amounted to over $2,210,000.00 and that the present outstanding bonded debt of the county amount to but $1,000,000.00 and that the portio of the general bond debt of Red Lak county to be assumed by Penningto county amounts to but $42,300.00 an that but $114,000.00 of drainage bond originally issued by Red Lake county will have to be paid by Pennington county, and that the population of the latter is 10,000 or over, we will make you the following proposition:

For $150,000 of legally issued drainage bonds of Pennington county, Minn., bearing interest at 5 per cent per annum payable semi-annually, $120,000 to be issued on Judicial Ditches Nos. 13 and 18, the balance to be issued on other ditches to be later specified (not exceeding four ditches), denominations of $1,000 each, dated June 1, 1911, maturing serially in six to twenty years at $10,000 per year, principal and interest payable in St. Paul, or Chicago, or New York, as we may later specify, bonds to be delivered in such of said cities as we may name.

We will pay you par plus interest accrued to date of delivery of said bonds and will attend to the preparation of bond blanks, we to be allowed $5.00 per bond to defray such expenses.

This tender is made subject to the approval of our attorneys, Ambrose Tighe, Esq., of St. Paul and Wood & Oakley of Chicago, as to the legality of the proceedings, you to furnish us without charge a full certified transcript of such proceedings and to make any corrective measures that may be prescribed by them.

As evidence of good faith we will send you a check for $1,000, to be used as part payment for said bonds.

Signed,
SECURITY TRUST COMPANY,
W. W. Matteson.

Above tender is hereby accepted this 15th day of May, 1911, by order of the county board of Pennington county, Minnesota.

VOL. XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 1911 NUMBER 25

A DOUBLE VICTORY

Locals Capture a Double Header From the Fast White Earth Indians.

First Game Resulted in a 5 to 1 Score; the Last, 14 to 2.

The local "Big Chiefs" slipped a couple over on their red brothers from White Earth when they trimmed them up in a double-header on the local diamond Sunday afternoon and evening.

The first game was the best game played on the local diamond this season, and was a real classy article of base ball, "big league style" and resulted only after a well played and hard-struggled contest on both sides in a victory for the locals by a score of 5 to 1.

The second game, however, was too one-sided to even be interesting. The locals on some fortunate bunch hits in the first inning and on some errors by the visitors managed to run in four scores which seemed to take the ginger out of the White Earth bunch and they were entirely outclassed henceforth in the game in the point of playing. The final score was 14 to 2.

The locals played at White Earth yesterday afternoon where the great Indian celebration is in progress this week. Next Sunday the locals play the Crookston aggregation at that place, and on the 25th of this month a return game will be played with that aggregation on the local diamond. The second of July a game will be played with the fast Grand Forks Picketts at Grand Forks, and on July fourth the team goes to Warroad to play a game with that team.

The following is the summary of the game and the score by innings:

The Red Lake Falls second team will try conclusions with the "Tigers" on the local diamond next Sunday afternoon. The two teams are evenly matched and it will undoubtedly be a fast game.

Return From Honey Moon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry McCarty arrived in this city last Monday evening from their honey moon trip and have gone to housekeeping in this city.

"The Flower of the Ranch"

Which comes to the Auditorium for an engagement on Monday night, July 10, is a musical play in three acts-all of the scenes of which have been laid in the rugged West, with colorful and complete scenic settings of great beauty. The book, lyrics and music of the play have been written by Joseph E. Howard, composer of The Time, the Place and the Girl," "The Girl Question," "Honeymoon Trail," "A Stubborn Cinderella" and other successful works, and is declared to be the best he has contributed to the stage. The story of the play in brief is as follows:

Winding down a steep mountain trail in California a stage coach containing several passengers is overturned and crashes down into the valley. A ranch man arrives on the scene and finds but one living survivor of the wreck, a baby girl held fast in her dead mother's arms. He takes the child, and as no papers or evidence of the child's identity can be found, adopts her as his own. Seventeen years later, the child, grown to happy young womanhood and beloved by everyone with whom she comes in contact, is the life of the town of Tomahawk, a straggling settlement in which she has charge of her father's general store. Jack Farnum, a popular ranchman whose possessions are coveted by a scheming sheriff, falls in love with Flower, as the young woman is known, and complications in which a thieving Mexican adds to the interest, develop. An Indian chief whom Farnum had befriended assists Flower in thwarting the designs of the sheriff and the young ranchman regains the deed to his property, which had been stolen by the Mexican, who in turn has been slain by the Sheriff whom he tried to betray.

Of course, everything ends happily, but in the development of the story many strong situations and stirring scenes are enacted. Character types true to the locale participates in the action of the play. The musical numbers, of which there are some twenty, are logically and naturally introduced, and a romping, spirited chorus of handsome young women, who not only sing, but dance with grace and vigor, add to the interest of an entertainment that last season was declared by New York, Boston and Chicago papers to be the most novel and pleasureable of the entire season.

Married.

Mr. John A. Naplin and Miss Edna C. Swanson were married on the 7th of June at the home of the bride in Sec. 27 of Black River, Rev. Sand officiating. The witnesses were Gust Naplin, Lillian Swanson, C. O. Swanson and Lillie Hallstrom. After the ceremony, which was performed at 1 o'clock in the grove where proper arrangements had been made for the purpose, a bounteous dinner was served to about sixty guests. The groom is a prosperous farmer in Polk Centre, where they will make home, and the bride has served as a teacher for some time. Both are well known in this community and have a host of friends who wish them happiness and blessings.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

MAY GET A SPECIAL

Efforts Being Made to Secure Special to Warroad on the 4th of July.

Fine Outing on Lake Is the Promise of Entertainment Committee.

As there will be no celebration in this city on the 4th of July an endeavor is being made to secure a special train from this city to Warroad where preparations are being made for a grand celebration on that date. In order to secure the special a guarantee of a hundred or more tickets being sold is required, but there is little or no doubt that this number can be secured. The train will leave this city between 6 and 7 o'clock and will arrive in Warroad about 9:30 o'clock. This will give everyone ample time to see the sights and take a boat ride on the lake and get back to town in the early part of the evening before leaving for home about 11 o'clock.

One of the features of the trip will be a boat ride on the lake on which the large fish industries will be visited. Among the other attractions of the day is the ball game scheduled for the local team and Warroad.

Good Roads.

With this issue the News commences for the benefit of its readers the publication of a number of articles on good roads to be run serially in our forthcoming issues. These articles are written by Howard H. Gross, who is an eminent authority on roads. Mr. Gross was for years in the employ of the government in this connection, and represented the United States at the International Good Roads congress held in Europe. This is a topic in which everyone is vitally interested and it is with this end in view that we have gone to the expense of securing these articles and we hope that they will prove as beneficial as they are interesting and that they will meet with the approval of our readers.

Fine Crop of Winter Rye.

One of the finest farming scenes on the west road is the field of winter rye belonging to O. P. Rogne who resides about five miles northwest of this city. Mr. Rogne has fifty acres sowed to this cereal which stands about five feet high at present and is heading out and will be ready for harvest in July.

Mr. Rogne put his crop in last fall, and a peculiar feature about this field is that most of it is sowed on the stubble from last years crop and this is faring far better and will produce a larger crop than that which was sowed on the plowing.

SANGERFEST NEXT WEEK

The official concert program for the approaching Sangerfest to be held in Thief River Falls, June 23-24 and 25 is now practically completed, and ready to be submitted to the public. The different chorus numbers have been carefully rehearsed, and studied by the various choruses comprising the association, and the final productions will undoubtedly be successful in the highest degree. Below is printed the musical program of the two grand concerts to be rendered on the evenings of June, 23 and 24th:

BEGINS TODAY

City Delivery Service To Be Formally Instituted By Post Office Today.

Work of Arranging the Routes, Etc., May Take Up a Few Days Time.

The city mail delivery service will be established by the local post office today. While it may take a few days to get the residents on the routes listed, etc., actual service will be instituted by either the latter part of this week or the first of next week at the most. Patrons should be careful to have the proper receptacles for the mail placed in a convenient place in time and follow out the instructions given out by the postmaster in order to insure prompt and efficient service.

1. Carriers are not required to deliver mail above the second floor of office buildings not equipped with elevators, nor to the different rooms or suites in apartment houses. If boxes are not provided in the front hall on the lower floor of apartment houses, arrangements should be made for some reliable person to receive the mail and distribute it to the occupants of the building.

2. If patrons so direct, all mail intended for them, however addressed, will be delivered in one way-by carrier, through the general delivery, or through a rented box; but if such directions are not given, mail will be delivered as addressed. Postmasters are not required to withdraw mail in the course of delivery by carrier in order to deliver it to persons calling at the Post Office. Mail is considered to be in the course of delivery as soon as it has been distributed to the carriers.

There will be two collections and two deliveries each day in the residence district. And two deliveries and three collections in the business district. For the last collection in the business district the carriers will leave the post office at 5:30 p. m. and return to the Post Office at 6:30 p. m.

Given a $12,500 Verdict.

In the case of Ole Landro, of this city, against the Great Northern railway company which came up before the court at Warren last Monday and Tuesday a verdict of $12,500 was given the plaintiff. Mr. Landro sustained an injury in a wreck near Ardock about two years ago and it was on this ground that the action was brought.

Reclamation Service.

July 5, 1911.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an examination on July 5, 1911, at the places indicated below, to secure eligibles from which to make certification to fill vacancies as they may occur in the position of field clerk in the Reclamation Service, at salaries ranging from $60 to $125 per month, depending upon conditions of service and location, unless it shall be decided in the interest of the service to fill such vacancies by reinstatement, transfer, or promotion.

The examination will be held in all cities in which city free delivery has been established in Arkansas, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wyoming; and the following places at which there are civil-service boards for the Reclamation Service:

This examination may be taken at any place at which it is given, regardless of the applicant's residence.

The Passing of the Harem Skirt.

Detroit News: The harem skirt will die of its own puritanism. It is modesty itself, incasing the nether limbs of womanhood as in a sack, lending itself neither to the grace of motion in the wearer. The harem skirt lacks seat. It is not piquant, it suggests nothing, it is nothing. In fact, it is no skirt at all. Where is there room for the dainty, fluttering fabric, for the swift vision of ankles on a rainy day, for the art that conceals art, where, in brief, is there stimulus in the puckering strings of the bagged skirt? Romance has ever hedged about the skirt. Man has followed for centuries its swish and its swirl, its vague possibilities, its remote suggestion of ankles and limbs, its tantalizing grace, and will continue to do so as long as the eternal feminine with its eternal question mark endures.

BIG SUM FOR CHIPPEWAS

Minnesota Indians Awarded $784,210 by Court of Claims.

The court of claims, sitting at Washington, has awarded the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota the sum of $764,210 in the case of the Mille Lacs band of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota against the United States for timber which was cut on the Mille Lacs reservation from 1893 to about 1900.

While the case was brought and sustained by the Mille Lacs band, some three or four hundred in number, under the rulings of court the sum awarded will be distributed among about 10,000 Chippewa Indians in Minnesota.

The attorneys in the case are Chauncey E. Richardson, formerly of Duluth and now of Washington, and George B. Edgerton of St. Paul and others, and was filed in May, 1909. The suit was against the United States for $3,000,000 for the taking of the Mille Lacs reservation and despoiling of its timber.

MINNESOTA FARMS PAY WELL

More Profit Per Acre From Wheat Than Any Other State.

Minnesota farmers got more profit per acre from their wheat last year than the farmers of any other state and more profit per acre from corn than the farmers of any other state except Iowa, according to figures compiled by George Welch, immigration commissioner, from the government crop reports.

Minnesota farmers, after paying for labor and figuring the rental value of the land, got an average return of $6.28 an acre of wheat last year. Iowa was the next best with $6.03, Nebraska $6.01, Kansas $5.66, North Dakota $4.87 and South Dakota $4.80.

Minnesota land gave bette returns when planted to corn than to wheat, at the current market prices. The net return, after allowing for labor, rent and all other expenses was $6.99. Iowa did better with a net of $8.43. North Dakota came third with $6.54, South Dakota $6.26, Nebraska $5.69 and Kansas $5.90.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR FEEDING STEERS.

The past winter saw the first sack of cottonseed meal shipped into the section in which the writer lives. It costs laid down $34.50 per ton, which is about a dollar less than the price of linseed oil meal, and this notwithstanding the fact that the chemical analysis shows that the former feed contains nearly 10 per cent more protein than the latter. This makes a cheap and excellent source of protein, while numerous experiments which have been made show that, given in a proper ration with corn, about one to ten, feeding animals do exceptionally well on it. The feeder who is trying this cottonseed meal for the first time is also feeding with it equal parts of alfalfa, which is a prepared feed made of ground alfalfa leaves and stems and molasses. This contains a trifle less than 20 per cent of protein and costs about $5 per ton laid down. Notwithstanding the high price at which they are sold, this use of these protein concentrates makes possible a more economical ration than if corn should be used exclusively.

BACK TO THE FARM.

The restless, eager boy may well reflect, when tempted to leave the often humdrum life of the farm for the city, with its salaried positions, its tinsel and glitter, on the step which has been decided on by W. C. Brown. There are so many men by the name of Brown that such a simple statement about him will not arouse much interest. Well, the Brown in question was born on a farm, grew tired of it, learned telegraphy, became an operator, then agent, assistant superintendent, and so on, until he became president of the New York Central, one of the greatest railroads in the land. But after a few years of the terrific grind and responsibility he is going back where he started from, to the farm, to enjoy a little quiet and peace and contentment before it is too late. He says that places of large salary—those at the top—are will-o'-the-wisps, elusive and disappointing and do not satisfy the longing of the one who covets them. He will soon retire to a fine farm he has and there devote his energy and brains to a scientific tilling of the soil and to raising the finest of blooded stock. It is a wholesome picture, and we need more men possessed of this man's judgment and the good sense to carry such a plan into execution.

It is as often true of farm animals as of human beings that where there is lack in the matter of shelter there is also carelessness in respect to the bill of fare.

If the hens are not where they have access to it or its equivalent, throw them a bunch of that fragrant alfalfa or clover hay and see how greedily they will go after it.

For the dairyman a pretty good New Year's resolution is the determination to weed out all cows that do not pay for their keep and to pull no teats whose yield of milk does not make the operation a paying one.

Quite naturally conditions which have to do with the comfort of the poultry or farm animals directly affect their health and because of this their ability to produce eggs, milk or meat. In spite of the direct connection in cause and effect, the importance of proper conditions are too often overlooked or ignored.

In all too many co-operative creameries the buttermaker is kept tied down too closely to scrubbing, cleaning and stoking work when this could be done just as well by much cheaper help and the buttermaker given this time to inquire more carefully into the stable and milk house conditions to be found on the farms of the several hundred patrons of the creamery. Owing to this shortsighted effort at economy there is little question that creameries of this type lose thousands of dollars annually, which they might just as well save in an improved butter quality by giving their buttermaker more help, thus enabling him to give them more of his service as a specialist.

In a recent institute which the writer attended the question was raised by one farmer present whether if the Babcock test and weighing of the milk yield of cows were generally introduced there would not be an overproduction of butter. There seems to be very little likelihood of it, for if the test were universally applied close to a third of all the cows in the country would be put out of commission—the star boarders that are making 130 pounds of butter or less and are kept at a loss.

Fruit growers in some sections of the west where smudging has to be resorted to as a safeguard against spring frosts have provided themselves with alarms which are operated automatically by thermometers which set them going when the mercury reaches the danger line. Any one who has hiked out in a shiver on a frosty night every half hour between 10 p. m. and 3 a. m. to consult that old thermometer would quite likely not have to be argued into getting one of these newfangled alarms. They save sleep and nerve force.

A rather striking illustration of the effectiveness of the Babcock test as a means of determining the butter fat returns of cows in a dairy herd was related to the writer the other day by the owner of a large herd of pure bred Holstein cows. It was shortly after the introduction of the sulphuric acid test as a means of ascertaining the amount of butter fat in milk. In his dairy barn were two fine looking cows which stood side by side. At the time of the test one was giving thirty-five pounds of milk per day and the other twenty-five pounds, and the rations fed were based on this showing. On applying the Babcock test it was found that the milk of the cow giving the larger amount tested 1.9 per cent of butter fat, while that of the one yielding the smaller amount tested 6 per cent. This meant that the latter cow was giving two and one-fifth times as much butter fat as the former and should have been fed that much more feed instead of less, as had been the case. The reader will likely say that this is an extreme case. It is, but it simply emphasizes the need of applying the test to a herd of cows and weeding out the worthless loafers from those that are really a source of revenue.

TEACHING THE CALF TO DRINK.

It is amusing sometimes to see the somewhat lengthy dissertations on teaching the calf how to drink, as if it were a matter of considerable difficulty. There are a few simple precautions that make the matter relatively easy—at least the writer has found them so in his own experience. In the first place, the calf will learn to drink the more quickly if it hasn't acquired the habit of sucking. It is well to take the little chap away from the mammy after it has her udder cleaned out in good shape. In the case of inexperienced persons the job is aggravated by going at it wrong way to. It is well to be friendly with the hungry little bovine, and with this idea in view straddle its back, give it two fingers and when it has got a good grip on them gently lower the head into the pail, keeping the fingers far enough apart so that the milk will pull between them. Keep the little brute's nostrils above the milk line and when it is getting a good draft of milk withdraw the fingers. It will shortly want something to suck besides its tongue, and the fingers will have to be returned to the mouth, but gone at in this way it will not be long before the calf will drink in an entirely satisfactory way.

At the national corn show held the latter part of January at Columbus O., the first prize of $1,000 for the best ten ears of corn exhibited was awarded to Roy Clore, a lad nineteen years old, of Franklin, Ind. It will be remembered that his father, L. B. Clore won the championship prize in 1907 and 1908 and was barred from competing, but it is a fair assumption that the boy had some of the old gentleman's seed corn as well as the benefit of his many years of experience.

In serving as a judge of an exhibit of grains at a farmers' institute a short time since the writer weighed a sample of Swedish select oats that tested forty-two pounds to the bushel and two other samples of white oats that weighed forty pounds to the bushel each. Several samples of wheat examined showed a like plumpness and soundness of berry, which furnished proof that the heat moisture conditions for the maturing of the grain were as nearly ideal as could be.

Where one is located in the vicinity of a good horse market and his tastes incline in that direction there is good money to be made by purchasing raw, thin and unbroken horses, fattening them, breaking them and finishing them for market. And it is often surprising what a few months of this kind will do for a decidedly unpromising piece of horseflesh.

CHILDREN PERISH IN FIRES

Bonfire and Box of Matches Fatal to Two Little Ones.

A bonfire and a box of matches were responsible for the death by burning of two children at St. Paul.

Elizabeth Egger, the five-year-old daughter of Michael Egger, was trying to take her small brother away from a bonfire when her own clothes ignited and before aid reached her she had inhaled flames and was severely burned about the body.

Robert Edmondton was left alone in an upstairs room by his sister and during her absence found a box of matches by which in some way he set his clothing afire. He was so severely burned that he died.

NAMES SPECIAL INTERESTS

Dr. Stone Introduces Resolution in Minnesota House.

Charging that the brewers, railroads, street railways, steel trust and medical trust contributed money to the campaign committee of which E. E. Smith was chairman, "for the purpose of electing as many members as possible of this house favorable to said special interests," Dr. W. T. Stone introduced into the house of representatives the resolution he had promised.

In his resolution Dr. Stone gives the names of the twelve men and four committees that "control legislation in the house." Dr. Stone asks that a committee of seven be appointed to investigate the charges he has made. He desires that the speaker name three of the committee, that he be permitted to name three and that the six so chosen shall select the seventh member.

Woman Perishes in Fire.

A fatal accident occurred on the farm that C. J. Riley, a newcomer from Iowa, purchased recently just west of Amboy. Mrs. Riley went down into the basement and it is supposed that she lighted a match and that gas leaking from a lighting plant exploded. Her clothing, as well as the house, was set on fire and before the family could come to her assistance she had been burned to death.

ROADS ASK THREE-CENT FARE

Injunction Suits to Be Started by Six Minnesota Lines.

Papers are being prepared for injunction suits in the federal court by the stockholders of the six roads in the state not affected in the previous rate cases.

This action is being taken to put all the roads of the state in the same position as are the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Minneapolis and St. Louis on the 2-cent rate. These three roads have been excepted by Judge Willard's decision from putting the lower rates into effect and July 1 the 3-cents a mile rate will be restored by these roads.

These suits for temporary injunction will be filed with the federal court in a few days.

Must Sprinkle Its Tracks.

Without a dissenting voice the supreme court of the state of Minnesota handed down an opinion holding valid the ordinance passed by the St. Paul city council in October, 1909, requiring the St. Paul City Railway company to sprinkle its right of way in all parts of the city where it operates.

WELL KNOWN EDUCATOR DEAD

Dean W. S. Pattee of the University of Minnesota Passes Away.

W. S. Pattee, dean of the University of Minnesota law college, is dead at Minneapolis. He had been ill at intervals for more than a year, the last severe illness lasting about two weeks. The attending physicians announced kidney trouble as the cause of death.

Dean Pattee had been connected with the university since 1888 and was one of the men instrumental in the growth of the institution.

W. S. Pattee was born in Jackson, Me., Sept. 19, 1846, and graduated from Bowdoin college in 1871 with a degree of A. B., taking his master degree in 1874. He was admitted to the bar in 1878. He came to Minnesota and took up his residence at Northfield.

Dean Pattee was a member of the Minnesota legislature in 1884-5. In 1888 Mr. Pattee was named dean of the college of law at the state university.

SLAPS AT THE LARGER CITIES

Bill Restricting Representation Passes Minnesota Senate.

The state senate has passed the Duxbury-Haycraft-Moonan-Weis bill in which it is proposed to submit a constitutional amendment to the people providing for a limited representation in the legislature. The vote was 38 to 24.

The bill was amended so that the maximum number of senators from any one county shall be six instead of four, as planned by the authors. Debate lasted more than two hours.

A proposed amendment to reduce taxation where representation is less in proportion than in other counties lost by a vote of 14 to 11.

The maximum number of senators provided in the bill is sixty-three.

Child Is Fatally Burned.

Burning kerosene which poured over the eighteen-months-old son of Mrs. Mollie Schreiber of St. Paul caused burns that resulted in the death of the child at the city hospital where it was taken after the accident. The mother was severely burned while attempting to save the child's life and the home, which also was menaced by the flames.

Meets Death in the Air.

When George H. Hallman of Mankato, lineman for the General Electric company of Minneapolis, went to Twenty-seventh street and Stevens avenue to repair a break in the lines he came in contact with a high voltage wire, which threw him across the crossarm lifeless. The fire department was called to remove the body.

SMALL MINNESOTA CYCLONE

Farm Buildings Destroyed and Other Damage Done.

A wind storm, which developed into a miniature tornado at Baker, struck Barnesville, demolishing small buildings and uprooting trees.

Freight crews passing through Baker at the time of the storm report seeing several farm buildings demolished and other damage.

The storm passed to the southwest of Baker and struck the southern portion of Barnesville, causing darkness for several minutes.

THE DULUTH HERALD

BEATS THE CENSUS THREE TO ONE

During the past ten years the population of Duluth increased 48 per cent., St. Paul 32 per cent., and Minneapolis 49 per cent. In the Same Period the Circulation of The Duluth Herald

INCREASED 150 PER CENT.

This marvelous expansion—so much greater than that of the surrounding territory—is due solely to the merits of The Herald.

The Herald has never used any kind of premium, contest, or price reduction to gain subscribers but prints each day the very best NEWSPAPER in the Northwest. Its editorial page is thoroughly independent and its news columns cover every feature of the world's daily history.

Says Figures Lie.

There were 24.029 deaths reported to the state health department in 1910, as against 22,176 in 1909, or an apparent increase in deaths of more than 2,000.

Dr. Bracken states that the increase was more apparent than real, and was due to the fact that the county officials were reporting vital statistics better now than ever before. He believes that the figures collected in 1909 were not complete, and that the increase in deaths is not as great as the comparison would indicate.

The deaths from preventable diseases amounted to 9,966. Accidents claimed 1,747 victims, and there were 12,316 deaths from various other causes.

Mr. Henry E. Goerty of Cavalier Co. N. D. and Miss Louise A. Vallacher of Thief River Falls, Minn., were united in marriage at the bride's home 509 Markley Ave. South in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride. The happy couple will make their home in North Dakota. The News extends congratulations.

STARTS WORK MONDAY

Theif River Falls Lumber Co's Mill Begins Seasons Operation Monday.

Recent Heavy Rains Raises Streams Sufficiently to Admit of Log Driving.

The Theif River Falls Lumber company's saw mill, which has been laying idle so far this spring, will commence its seasons cut next Monday morning.

The recent heavy rains have raised the streams sufficiently to admit of floating the logs, and on Friday evening a crew of about twenty-five men left for the Red Lakes to "drive" the logs. The dry spell that has prevailed until just recently has lowered the streams about the lakes to such an extent as to make the floating of the logs an impossibility

The recent rains, have now made this work possible, however, and the first drive is expected in a short time.

The Great Northern railway announces an increase in the freight rates from Thief River Falls to Duluth and the Twin Cities, effective July 1.

On first class freight the old rate o 61 cents will be increased to 67 cents Corresponding changes, all increases are to take place with all other sorts of freight. The rates announced from this city to the twin cities are exactly the same as to Duluth, giving the city at Head of the Lakes an equal opportunity to secure a part of the local business with the Twin City establishments. The commodity rates will be increased about 2 cents throughout the list also.

All of the party, excepting Mr. Smith who returned last Monday evening, returned on Tuesday evening and brought with them a large grocery box full of fish as evidence o their good luck and their skill as anglers.

In nature's economy the woodchuck occupies about the same relative place as the mole—digs holes in the ground that are a source of considerable annoyance, yet performs a service in the destruction of vermin of one kind and another that makes it possible to class it as a real benefactor of the tiller of the soil. In case it seems imperative to dispose of a woodchuck it may be done easily by saturating a piece of absorbent cotton with carbon bisulphide (CS2) and inserting it in the animal's burrow. The several openings to the burrow should be stopped with earth so as to prevent an escape of the animal and make the gas more effective.

While the damage done by the family of borers that work in the trunk and limbs of trees is much less than that done by those found at or just below the surface of the ground, it is well to keep an eye open for them. We noticed a dead strip of bark in the upper trunk of a thrifty top grafted Wealthy tree the other day and supposed at first view that it was caused by some rot fungus getting a foothold. A closer inspection with a knife showed that the dead spot was due to one of the borers referred to that had been working for a considerable time unmolested. The birds of the woodpecker family get many of these borers, but this one they had skipped. We scraped the dead inner and outer bark away, killed the borer and will paint the wound.

Large crowds arrived in the city on Tuesday evening and on the G. N. Wednesday forenoon to be in attendance at the Saterdols "stevne" which is in progress to-day; having been commenced yesterday. It is estimated that in the neighborhood of 500 outside guests are in attendance. Yesterdays G. N. train carried two extra coaches to care for the large crowds from Crookston, Grand Forks, and points out west, The meeting is being held at the Auditorium and the guests possess the key of welcome to our city.

On tomorrow and Saturday the "Nordland's lagot" will be held here and an equal number of guests are expected here for that event.

Alumni Banquet.

The alumni banquet was held at the Evelyn Hotel and about 30 former graduates of the local high school participated in the event. After a sumptuous feast and a speach by Prof. Hay, the party withdrew to the Antlers Club rooms where games were participated in the rest of the evening.

Convention at Wilmar.

Rev. A. L. Larson left Monday afternoon for Willmar where he went to attend the annual convention of the Lutheran Free church which convene at that place this week. It is estimated that between 500 and 600 delegates from all over the United States will be present at this meeting.

Changes at Wholesale House.

Commencing next Monday there will be several changes made at the Wholesale house. Art Baine, who has been the city representative, will be assigned to the Wheatline route to succeed C. B. Pinney, while Mr. Baine will be succeeded by Mr. Gray, who has been the representative of the Armour Packin Company, Mr. Gray will be succeeded by C. Hanson, who was formerly assigned to this territory.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The resolution admitting Arizona and New Mexico to statehood, but withholding approval of the constitutions of both states until the people have voted on certain proposed amendments to them, passed the house of representatives by a viva voce vote. No roll call was demanded on the final vote. The resolution requires Arizona to vote on an amendment removing the recall provision as it applies to judges, and requires New Mexico to vote on an amendment making its constitution more easily amendable in the future.

A resolution declaring that Rockefeller, Archbold and all the other personal defendants in the Standard Oil case are subject to criminal prosecution under the decision of the supreme court of the United States was introduced in the senate by Senator Pomerene, (Dem., O.). It instructed the attorney general to report whether criminal proceedings "have been or will be started against them." The resolution was adopted without debate.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin opened a second fight on Senator Lorimer of Illinois to expel the "blonde boss" from congress and for two hours, despite the sweltering heat, addressed the senate and crowded galleries in his usual impassioned manner.

Charging President Taft with "evading the Constitution" and "beating around the bush," Senator Nelson of Minnesota made a bitter attack on the Canadian trade agreement and the president at the hearing before the senate committee on finance.

By unanimous consent Senator Borah (Rep., Ida.) has secured consent of the senate to have a final vote on the resolution for direct election by the people of United States senators on June 12.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Six negroes were lynched at Lake City, Fla., after a party consisting of more than a dozen men, masquerading as officers, appeared at the county jail and secured possession of them by presenting a forged telegram to the sixteen-year-old son of the sheriff, ordering the release of the blacks to the alleged posse officers. The negroes were being held here for safekeeping on the charge of murdering B. B. Smith of Wadsborough and wounding another man named Register on May 12.

The incendiaries who terrorized Dubuque at an early hour Saturday morning by setting four fires which caused a loss of more than $300,000 to the Standard Lumber company got busy again and started a fire in the south yards of the same company. The loss is estimated at $250,000 to the Standard Lumber company, $50,000 to the Conlin & Kearns Ice company and $10,000 to the Star Brewing company.

Laura Nelson, a negress, and her sixteen-year-old son were taken from the jail at Okema, Okla., dragged to the Canadian river, six miles away, and hanged from the timbers of the bridge. The woman was the first lynched in this state. The woman and her son were under arrest on the charge of murdering Deputy Sheriff George H. Loney, who had discovered stolen goods in their home.

Daniel J. O'Reilly, former assistant district attorney of New York city and a criminal lawyer in connection with the cases of Harry K. Thaw and Nan Patterson, was found guilty by a jury of receiving stolen goods.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The other day at Fort Worth, the market was topped by a ca. hogs which were fattened largely on rice, and the fact was one that roused much interest on the part of both hog raisers and buyers. In the rice country along the coast cracked rice and what is known as rice polish, a byproduct of rice milling, have long been a drug on the market, and, while their food value as a hog ration has not been completely demonstrated, it has been proved that when fed in connection with corn they make an economical fattening ration.

In spite of the efforts of the agricultural department at Washington to arouse interest among farmers in the production and use of denatured alcohol, practically nothing has been attained along the line desired. Dr. Wiley, who has charge of the denatured alcohol experimental work, says that a still costing $2,500 would convert into alcohol the products of a territory six miles square and that the cost of production per gallon would be much cheaper in a plant of this size than in one considerably smaller. In Germany and France the smaller individual stills have been in profitable use for the past 250 years.

The other day in passing through eastern Washington the writer noticed what seemed to be a sort of dust storm on the landscape at some distance, the cause of the disturbance not being in evidence. As the train advanced and a view was had from a different angle a "dry" farmer, harrowing with a six horse outfit, proved to be the kicker up of the big cloud of dust. To the farmer used to pastures and roadsides clad in blue grass and tilled soil held firmly down by surface moisture the dry farming condition referred to would be strange and distasteful perhaps, but to offset the drawbacks of dust and summer drought are ideal ripening and harvesting conditions—no hail, no smut, no rust, no floods.

It is proposed that three ships of the American squadron visit Bergen on its trip to Europe. The Kristiania Verdens Gang makes some curious comments on this plan. Why not visit Kristiania? Such a visit would be a token of the good feelings existing between the two countries. Then the paper proceeds to give the following explanation: The competitive struggle seems to be dragging Norway into the swirl of international political calculations and in case of naval war between the two powers the waters off Bergen are very apt to be the scene of the decisive clash between the two navies. "The North American navy," says the paper, "numbers among its officers the greatest of the naval strategists of our day, Admiral Mahon, and this explains why Bergen is preferred to Kristiania. The numerous officers of the battleships shall have a chance to make a preliminary study of the future theater of war, which Germany is plowing through with her best ships and men."

The Daily News of London states that King Haakon and Queen Maud desire that their son Olaf, the present crown prince of Norway, should be educated at a college in England, but the suggestion has already met with a vigorous protest on the part of Norwegian ministers and statesmen, who contend that the crown prince is naturally to be educated in Norway. They contend that it will not do to allow a future king of Norway to be educated in a foreign country and it is natural that they have the people with them in their contention. However, the king and queen will decide the matter at their next visit to England, when the little crown prince will accompany them.

Ole Bull's second wife, the late Madame Sara Bull, left a decidedly peculiar will in Boston, where she made her home. She, in the first place, expressed the wish that her ashes should be sent to the native city of her distinguished husband, which is Bergen, and where now rest his remains. Her will has occasioned much comment in Norway and the relatives of Ole Bull are very much displeased over it all. The Bull children of the first marriage have entered a most decided protest and have made an appeal to the city authorities of Bergen to have the wishes of the second wife expressed in her will entirely ignored.

Five Christiania students intend to make the trip to the Normandy celebration in Rouen, France, in an old fashioned, but rather large rowboat, which was used in the time of the Vikings. The boat will be known as the "Viking ship" and when it arrives at Havre, France, the students will take in a few more passengers. Professor Yngvar Nielsen has been taking up a subscription list for the students so that they can secure the necessary equipment for the long and perhaps hazardous journey.

During the latter part of this month King Haakon and Queen Maud will pay a visit to the royal court at St. Petersburg, where they will be the guests of the czar and czarina. The Russian czar, accompanied by the czarina, will pay a return visit to King Haakon and Queen Maud in Christiania on or about June 20. The Norwegians are not, according to recent advices from Christiania, very enthusiastic about the czar's visit.

In the French city of Rouen there will, in the near future, be celebrated the 1,000th anniversary of the duchy of Normandy. Scandinavians of course have an abiding interest in historic old Normandy, for the Scandinavian race 1,000 years ago played a significant role in the formation of that historic little duchy.

The race between the Antarctic expeditions under Captain Scott and Captain Roald Amundsen for the South pole is attracting much attention in Copenhagen and is the subject of much comment in the press of Scandinavia. Dr. Rensch, president of the Norwegian Geographical society, speaking with regard to Amundsen's chances, states that he can surmount the difficulties of reaching the pole if he is able to get his dogs safely over the equator and its torrid heat. This is the main point, but he must also start under the same conditions as those found by the expeditions under Sir Ernest Shakleton and Captain Scott. Professor Mohn, a great polar expert, agrees with Dr. Nansen that it will certainly be impossible to reach the South pole from Cape Adare and that Amundsen has made a mistake in not going by some other route than that followed by the British Antarctic expedition.

The American-Scandinavian Foundation was made the residuary recently of Nils Poulsen, president of the Heckla iron works and reputed to be many times a millionaire, in his will filed in New York city. Mr. Poulsen's housekeeper, Nicolene Christensen, was left $50,000 and his furniture, books, manuscripts and art works, and his stenographer, Annie Brush, was given $20,000. His $300,000 mansion in Brooklyn is bequeathed to William Dickman, who is named as one of the executors of the will.

It is said that the Danish labor organizations sent millions of their savings to Swedish banks before the lockout because they thought that under the circumstances it might be safer to keep the money in that country.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Simonson and Laura Simonson, his wife as mortgagors to Peter Kleno of Dubuque, Iowa as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate, situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southeast quarter of section twelve, township one hundred fifty-four, north, range forty-five, west of the fifth principal meridian and containing one hundred sixty acres according to government survey; now situated in Pennington county, Minnesota.

Which said mortgage bears date April 23, 1907 and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county, on April 26th, 1907 at 11:30 A. M. in Book 10 of Mortgages at page 406, and

Whereas the said Peter Kleno by an instrument in writing dated May 1, 1907 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on May 14, 1907 in Book 32 of Mortgages at page 521, assigned said mortgage to Louis Kupferschmidt, and

Whereas in proceedings duly had for that purpose pursuant to the laws of the state of Minnesota, the land described in said mortgage and herein above described became a part of a new county organized on or about November 26, 1910 and known and called Pennington County, and

Whereas the said Louis Kupferschmidt by an instrument in writing dated May 2, 1911 and recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Pennington County on the 10th day of May, 1911 in Book 9 of mortgages at page 111 duly reassigned said mortgage to said Peter Kleno who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest the sum of nine hundred one dollars and fifty eight cents and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof,

Now, Therefore notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained and the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold at public auction for cash by the sheriff of the county of Pennington in the state of Minnesota at the front door of the Auditorium Building in the city of Thief River Falls, in said Pennington county on Saturday June 24, 1911 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the cost of foreclosure thereof including an attorney's fee of fifty dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Dated May 11, 1911.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

(First publication may 4, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. C. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of mortgages on page 470. Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 28th day of April, 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of Mortgages on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said Mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and state of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described (were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910) lawfully detached from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 17th day of June, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue; to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy five Dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated May 1st, 1911.

WIDE TIRES A HELP

IMMENSE BENEFIT IN KEEPING HIGHWAYS IN GOOD CONDITION.

CONCERTED ACTION NEEDED

Two-Ton Load on Wagon With 1¾ Inch Tires Will Do More Damage in Cutting Up Road Than Twice the Load on Three Inch Tire.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

The question of good roads throughout the country is of tremendous importance, and the people are everywhere clamoring for them. The great majority seem to be wandering around in a maze of uncertainty as to what to do.

The solution involves many factors. Local conditions are subject to a wide variation both as to soil, road material, amount of traffic, etc., hence no rule can be laid down that will apply in all cases. The subject must be given intelligent treatment by a capable engineer, familiar with the surroundings.

There is however one thing that can be done that will be of immense benefit to the roads of all times, whether earth, stone or gravel, and that is wider tires upon the wagons. Untold millions of dollars of damage to highways is done every year by heavy loads upon narrow tire farm wagons. These are often from one and a half inches to one and three-quarters wide, seldom more than two and a quarter. A two-ton load on a wagon with one and three-quarters inch tires will do more damage in cutting up a road than twice the load upon a three inch tire. If we could have uniform, concerted action in any community whereby three to three and a half inch tires would be put upon every farm wagon, it would mean much better highways than we now have. The narrow tires mean deep ruts, and if the rule is a narrow tire upon wagons, the man who goes out upon these highways with a wide tire is badly handicapped. Hence, if any good is to come from the wide tire movement, it should be generally adhered to. It is a truthful statement that wide tires make roads and narrow tires destroy them.

An equitable basis would be to license all vehicles doing business upon the public highways, grading the license fee according to the width of the tire, and letting the amount of money paid in be used to maintain the roads. This is just and no one, who is willing to tote fair can object to it. In grading the license fee it should be in such a manner that it will be to the interest of the owner to substitute a wide tire for his narrow one.

When this is suggested, it will be at once said that it is impractical, and that it cannot be done. It is surprising how many objections can be found against the doing of anything that a person does not want to do. The writer has witnessed two campaigns where the question of narrow and wide tires has been thrashed out and every objection made and answered.

The first was during the World's Fair in Chicago. In the grounds were temporary roadways, designed to last only during the fair season. These were made of gravel or crushed stone about three or four inches deep. The fair authorities discovered that if the exhibits were hauled in and out on these roads it would destroy them, because of the narrow tires that prevailed upon the wagons of the truck and express companies. The authorities established a rule that no narrow tire wagons could come on the grounds. There was a great howl by the transportation companies, but the fair authorities stood firm, and the teaming companies met the conditions by substituting a wide for a narrow tire upon the same wheel. They simply took off say a two and a half inch tire and put on one three and a half inches or four inches upon the same wheel and the same felloe. This served the purpose.

About three years ago the city of Chicago passed an ordinance providing for wide tires upon vehicles using the streets for traffic. A tremendous howl was made by all teaming interests and they brought in the wagon makers to state that the changing of these wheels meant an expenditure of millions upon millions of dollars, and it would take several years in order to have the change made. Large manufacturers of wagons said the wagon stock was gotten out for the narrow tire wagons, and it would take at least two years before any general change could be made. At that time the writer took a hand in the campaign with others, and published in the Chicago papers illustrations of how this change could be made (see cut herewith). The city council stood firm, the ordinance was passed and the users of narrow tires were arrested and fined. In a very short time wide tires began to appear upon the streets, and now the use is general and the solution has been mainly as indicated, namely, substituting wide tires for narrow ones upon the same wheels. Any local blacksmith or wagon maker can make the change indicated and the expense ought to range between $8.00 and $12.00 for a wagon. The illustration is so simple that anyone can follow it.

The question is, how shall this be brought about? The writer would suggest a state law licensing all the vehicles, the same as the automobile is now licensed, and let it apply upon everything that goes upon the road, graduating it with a view of making the vehicles that do the most damage pay the largest tax.

Without giving an entire schedule the following will illustrate what the writer has in mind:

That after a given date no vehicle shall be used upon the highways unless it carries a license.

On a two horse farm wagon with a tire of 1¾ inches or less the annual license fee to be $7.50 a year.

Over 1¾ inches and under 2¼ inches, $4.50 a year.

Over 2¼ inches and under 3 inches $3.00 per year.

Three inches or over, $1.00 per year.

The money collected to be credited to the road district and be used for road repair work.

There is another advantage to be gained by this method over and above the preservation of the highways; that is, the same wagon is more useful on the farm or on the fields for doing ordinary farm work. The hauling over hay fields and grain fields with narrow tired wagons does considerable damage. Hauling out manure, and in a variety of farm work wide tire wagons are advisable. Many farmers keep wagons with wide tires for this specific purpose. Why not have all vehicles carry a wide, sensible tire that will improve conditions rather than make them worse?

Dynamometer tests have been made showing the amount of power required to move a given load, over various surfaces with tires of different widths. Many persons will be surprised to know in the large majority of cases a load can be moved with less power with vehicles having wide tires, rather than narrow ones.

There may be another and easier way to accomplish the end desired than the imposing of a license tax upon vehicles. That would be to credit the owner a certain amount each year on his annual road tax bill, upon furnishing proof that all his vehicles used upon the highways conformed to the wide tire requirements.

Suppose the owner has a road tax of, say $12.00, and he has two wagons used upon the highways. Credit him $4.00 per year upon each wagon for four years. In this way the tax abated will more than pay the cost of changing the wagon. Thus, his interest would be sufficient to induce the owner to make the change.

Public sentiment would also change rapidly in support of the wide tire movement, and in a year or two a man would be ashamed to be seen on the street with one of these road destroying wagons.

The plan suggested is feasible, practical and has worked satisfactorily where it has been tried. There is no reason why action should not be taken along the lines indicated.

Referring to the illustration above. A wide tire can be placed upon an old wheel without any filling piece as shown in the illustration. Just let the tire project a half inch on each side of the felloe. This will greatly simplify the changing from the narrow to the wide tire, and for many localities will serve the purpose just as well.

Wide tires make roads, narrow tires destroy them. There should be a thorough co-operation between all of the residents of the several townships for better roads. Nothing can be done so quickly and so cheaply that will be productive of such good results as to discard narrow tires and substitute wide ones in their place.

250,000 PUDDINGS FURNISHED

London Manufacturer Made That Many to Meet the Demands of the Christmas Spirit.

The manufacture of plum pudding in England is mainly confined to London and is carried on by all the principal bakeries, delicatessen and other establishments. The industry was greatly boomed by the Boer war.

In the opening days of that struggle the Yuletide season increased the natural solicitude for the fathers and sons and husbands in far away Africa, and the plum pudding was requisitioned in large quantities to express the feeling at home and carry at least a spark of Christmas cheer to enliven the soldiers' camp.

Thousands of pounds of plum pudding were sent out, but the demand was far in excess of the supply, a fact which gave greater urgency to the demand and by concentrating general intrest in the pudding added immensely to its popularity, and especially as the soldier called loudly for more. The result is that today the bulk of plum pudding consumed in the United Kingdom is supplied by public purveyors and hundreds of thousands of pounds are shipped abroad. Manufacturers begin active operations as soon as the new crops of raisins, currants and other required fruits appear in September. All the constituents of plum pudding, which do not include plums, are prepared and manipulated by elaborate and expensive machinery. Currants are washed and stems removed, raisins are stoned, nuts are shelled and ground, oranges and lemons are peeled, the peel candied and cut up, eggs are beaten and all other ingredients prepared by machinery.

Exclusive of milk and rum the ingredients used by a single manufacturer in supplying plum pudding to meet the demands of the Christmas season of 1910 aggregated 630,144 pounds, the number of puddings furnished aggregating 250,000. There are three or four London manufacturers, says Daily Consular and Trade Reports, each of whose output perhaps equaled that described, and there are quite a large number of smaller establishments in which plum pudding was supplied for home and foreign consumption.

The pudding is put up in packages weighing one to five pounds each and securely packed to insure preservation and safe transportation. Properly prepared and packed the plum pudding of England, with ordinary care on the part of the housewife, will retain its virtues for a year or more.

American Aviating Girl.

The aviating girl is quite an established feature of American life. She has superseded the old-fashioned matinee girl, but is very much more impassioned. Her one dream is that she may, at some time or another, be dashed to death with her beggoggled idol. If you want to find her when next you attend an aviation meeting in America, do not look for her on the lawn or in the grand stand. You will not even find her in the clubhouse. Cross over to the hangars—that is the place for the aviating girl. Beautifully dressed, she will sit for hour after hour on an old box, or a log of wood, or an upturned bucket, just near the doorway of the hangar. You may stare at her, photograph her, do what you will—she will not move. The spirit of martyrdom is as strong within her is in the Indian fakir. By and by, later in the day, it is faintly possible that "he" may let her creep on to the machine and go for a ride. That is why she is waiting, waiting, waiting.

DEPUTIES SHOOT A SETTLER

Northern Minnesota Tragedy Resembles the Deitz Affair at Cameron Dam, Wisconsin.

Peter Vorbanich, a settler on Waterhen river, south of Biwabik, played the John Deitz role just four days and he is now in a hospital at Virginia dangerously wounded. He was shot through the hand by Deputy Sheriff John King and in the right side by Deputy Sheriff Frank Magie.

Vorbanich demanded $1,000 of the Northern Lumber company, a Weyerhaeuser corporation, for the privilege of running logs through the Waterhen river on his land, which the company refused, and for four days he held the drivers at bay, firing a few shots to convince them that he was in earnest.

Deputy Sheriffs John King and Frank Magie left Virginia in an automobile with a warrant for the arrest of Vorbanich for assault in the second degree. They left their automobile three miles from the Vorbanich homestead and proceeded on foot.

Arriving in sight of the clearing they found Mr. and Mrs. Vorbanich at some distance from the house and their fifteen-year-old son near the building. The deputies were not molested as they approached. When they explained their mission Mrs. Vorbanich called to her son and talked to him in Austrian, which the deputies could not understand, but she told the lad in English to get the gun.

Son Goes After Rifle.

The lad started after it and the deputies proceeded to arrest the man and his wife.

Vorbanich then picked up a pitchfork and some rocks. Magie called to King to go after the boy who had gone for the gun, but turned back again when, looking over his shoulder, he saw that Magie was going to have his troubles with the man and woman.

King fired at the feet of Vorbanich as the man approached threateningly with rocks and pitchfork, but the man did not hesitate. He came right along and then King shot him in the hand. Still the settler, enraged by his hurt, came forward, and then Magie shot him in the side, and he fell.

By this time the boy appeared, running toward the group with his rifle.

The deputies put on a bold front to the boy and ordered him to drop the rifle. The lad was anxious to help his parents, but was afraid, and after raising the gun two or three times his nerve failed him and he turned and ran away and later could not be found.

The deputies made a stretcher and carried the wounded man three miles to their auto, accompanied by Mrs. Vorbanich.

BREN IS RELEASED ON BAIL

Accused Treasurer of State University Appears in Court.

Joseph D. Bren, treasurer and accountant of the University of Minnesota, was arraigned in police court at Minneapolis to answer to a charge of grand larceny. He waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury on $2,500 bonds. The bonds had been arranged for in advance and Bren walked out of the courtroom at liberty less than ten minutes after he had been brought from his cell.

Examination of the records, securities, certificates and cash contained in the university vault and Bren's private safe deposit box in the Northwestern National bank revealed contents tallying, except in minor details, to the list given to Deputy Public Examiner F. N. Stacy by Bren.

Boy Wrestler's Neck Broken.

Louis Fluciauik of Winona, sixteen years of age, had his neck broken while engaged in friendly wrestling with Blecki, a boy two years older, who secured a half nelson hold. Fluciauik is paralyzed from the neck down and his condition has been growing worse steadily so that attending physicians do not think he will long survive.

The putting of the lawn mower away when through using it and the rubbing of the hoe and wheel cultivators bright when through using them are largely matters of habit. It is well to remember that it is just about as easy to form the right habit along this line as to fall into the bad one of leaving the tools wherever one happens to get through using them.

There is good reason to believe that the codling worm injury to apples this year in those sections where the crop was wiped out by frost last year will be greatly reduced owing to the fact that there were mighty few apples left on which the eggs could be laid and in which the worms could find a harbor. It is another illustration of the old saw "It's an ill wind that blows no good."

Townspeople whose places are bordered with shade trees can do a real favor to the drivers perched on the tops of loads of hay or straw or other high loads by keeping the limbs which droop into the roadway trimmed up. It does not sweeten a fellow's temper to have a part of his cargo pulled off into the highway or to get a scratch or welt across the face from these overhanging limbs.

A new interest has been shown in irrigation in this country within the past few years, and in particular since the passage of the reclamation act by congress, yet irrigation as a practice of agriculture is as old as that of scratching the surface of the soil with a stick, the forerunner of the modern chilled steel plow. Mesopotamia, Egypt and sections of our own southwest show the remains of irrigation systems hoary with age that hundreds of years ago lapsed into ruin and disuse.

While the sweet potatoes grown in the north do not develop the sweetness and quality of the New Jersey or more southern product, one can still raise a pretty fair article. The soil in which they are planted should be rich, light and mellow and should so lie as to receive as much warmth as possible from the sun, a slope to the south, with shelter of some kind to the north being preferable. While the practice is often followed of planting them on ridges, this is not imperative if the soil is well drained and is kept thoroughly cultivated.

We watched a groceryman counting eggs into a shipping case the other day and called his attention to a number of apparently fresh white eggs that were badly smeared with mud or manure, due to the hens having inadequate nesting places. His reply was: "Yes; there's really no excuse for it. Those eggs are just as fresh and good as any that have been brought in, but the folks were careless. When they reach the commission houses they will go in as 'dirts,' which means that about 3 cents per dozen will be knocked off the price."

A stirring of the surface soil every few days, and particularly after a rain, will put a blanket of mellow earth on the surface that will tend to keep the subsoil moist and loose in a condition the most favorable possible for the development of the growing plants. It is well to remember in this connection that the circulation of soil air is as essential to the growth of the root system as soil moisture and that both are secured by keeping the surface soil properly stirred. It matters little relatively how rich soil is if the surface is allowed to bake. This locks both moisture and fertility up and the growing crop suffers as a result.

The Iowa experiment station has been gathering data recently relative to the damage done by the wheat head army worm in several counties of the state. Two broods of the worm hatch, the first feeding from late in May until well into July and the second from the middle of August until frost. Measures which have been tried to reduce the pest show that early cutting of badly infested fields is a help; also keeping the grasses cut on the roadsides and in the fence corners and early fall plowing. Most effective of all as a preventive measure was found to be the pasturing of infested fields during the early fall. The damage done by the worm is largely in the seed head, its habit being to eat the seeds and drop the chaff. In some fields examined as high as 40 per cent of the timothy seed heads were found damaged.

A York state orchardist reports a lot of time saved in clearing brush from his orchard using a two horse rake. It took one-fourth the time to do it that it would by hand.

PROPOSES A GOOD PLAN

C. J. Estlund, of Kennedy, Believes In Organizing Northwestern Minn. Fair

Thinks This Section Would Benefit Greatly By Such Organization.

In an address at Crookston recently O. J. Estlund, publisher of the Kennedy Star, after confering with a number of Kittson county people, appeared before the Crookston Commercial Club and made an address before a large representation of that organization and launched a plan to organize a Northwestern Minnesota Fair Association, in which the counties of Kittson, Marshall, Red Lake, Pennington, Norman, Mahnomen and Polk would be equally interested, and in a practical manner outlined the splendid benefits that would be derived from such an organization from an advertising standpoint, because of showing at one time the wonderful resources and possibilites of Northwestern Minnesota on a scale large enough to attract the attention of thousands who are looking for a desirable location.

Mr. Estlund will take the matter up with other counties and it is probable that a meeting of representatives of all counties interested will be called by him and others from outside counties in the near future, to discuss the proposition and take steps to put the plan in operation.

"Tigers" Won.

The "Tigers" captured the game played with the Red Lake Falls second team on the local diamond last Sunday, the result was a 8 to 7 score. The game at the beginning of the ninth inning stood 6 to 7 in favor of Red Lake but by a couple of "bingles" the locals were fortunate enough to bring in a couple of more scores. The following is the line-up and the score by innings:

SANGERFEST THIS WEEK

After 6 months of preparation and planning, of hustling and advertising on the part of the local men in charge of the "stevne", the great musical event in the history of Thief River Falls is at hand. The city is ready; all the necessary details have been attended to and as far as the preparation is concerned, the course of the Sangerfest will proceed smoothly and without a hitch. It is now up to the public. Musically the "Stevne" is bound to be successful. The makeup of the association and the various choruses comprised within it; the high standard of the soloists, one of them at least internationally known; the well trained orchestra of 30 pieces, with players from the Symphony Orchestra of Minneapolis and Duluth, and particularly the unquestioned merit of the music, songs to be produced—all insure in a preeminent degree, the successful outcome of the concerts, musically considered.

Will the public of Thief River Falls respond? Will the people back up an undertaking of this kind? The "stevne" is not a private enterprise calculated to benefit any private interests. It is a public affair, one that will be of incalulable benefit to the city and the public. The Sangerfest is a public enterprise, of which our city may greatly be proud; we have, however, no doubt but that the public of this community will gladly assist in the undertaking. We have sufficient faith to believe that the people will take advantage of the opportunity to hear the music that is invariably presented at the great Sangerfests of the large cities of Europe and America, moreover, music that everyone can understand and appreciate.

We have heard some people in the city state that they do not care to attend because the songs will be sung in the Scandinavian language, and consequently will not be understood by them. Let it be understood that a great portion of the songs will be in English; and no one ought to remain a away in the belief that the music will not be understood and appreciated—besides music is a universal language. It speaks from heart to heart, from soul to soul, and will make its appeal irrespective of language.

The prices of the tickets are low in view of the scale and expenses of the undertaking, and when compared with the prices charged at similar events in other cities, must be considered very reasonable. Tickets should be secured at once; they can be had at Swore's and from the ticket committee, members of whom are now about.

KILLED A MOOSE

South Bound Soo Flyer Runs Over A Moose Saturday Night.

Apparently Blinded By Head Light, Fails to Get Off Track.

What was undoubtedly a singular incident happened at a point near Karlstad last Saturday night when the fast south bound Soo flyer ran over a buck moose. The giant denizer was apparently blinded by the strong head light on the locomotive and seemed helpless as to which way to move, and was struck by the fast going train. The engineer discovered the moose on the track, but only too late to stop the locomotive in time to save it, and the result was that the animal was dealt a fearful blow by the fast moving train.

After the train had been stopped and the animal's condition investigated it was found that life was almost extinct.

Strandquist News Items.

Miss Magna Halseth left here Sunday evening for her home at Thief River Falls, Minn., to spend the summer with her folks. It is with deep regret that she leaves our midst.

There will be a moving picture show at the Englund church on Wednesday evening.

The Strandquist church is receiving a coat of new white paint and it will look first rate when the job is completed.

Mr. G. P. Janson, our genial blacksmith, has now gotten his car in shape, so that he can take pleasure out of it in making trips with his wife and family. We thought from the looks of it in the shop two weeks ago, that there would never be any more auto, but due to Mr. Janson's remarkable ability, it now looks as good as new.

Mr. John P. Nelson, Herbert Yackal and Miss Halseth were visitors at the C. K. Koland home on Saturday last, and we understand the former was so put out at something, that they did not arrive home in time to allow Miss Halseth to catch her train home. Of course there are two sides to every story, and this is one of the two.

Mr. W. C. Addy returned Monday morning from the city where he has been for a few weeks attending to some business matters. Addy and the city seem to be great friends of late.

Youth Sentenced to Reformatory.

Dedrick Schumacher, the Beltrami youth of nineteen years, who piled ties upon the Great Northern railroad tracks near Beltrami some time ago was sentenced last week before Judge Watts to a term in the reform school at St. Cloud.

The boy is neither vicious nor criminal but is found to be both physically and mentally weak, and it is considered that the reform school is manifestly the best place for him.

HELD HERE IN 1913

State Fire Convention Will Undoubtedly Be Held Here In 1913.

Local Delegates In Attendance At Meet Held In Owatonna This Week.

Denny LeSage, Louis Lonson, Jim Farr, Chris Porter and Paul Meddrigh left last Sunday night for Owatonna, this state, where they as members of the local fire department, went as delegates to the state fire convention which was held at that place on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. It is expected that in all there will be about 3,000 delegates to this convention and that there will be about 2,500 members of the various fire departments in the state in uniform.

It is almost a settled fact that Thief River Falls will be designated as the the place for holding the large convention in 1913, and the entertainment of this vast number of delegates. The convention will be held at Minneapolis next year.

TWO LARGE GATHERINGS

"Satesdals Stevne" and "Nordland's Laget" Drew Large Crowds To City.

Programs Consisting of Speeches and Songs Held at the Auditorium.

Last week saw two of the largest gatherings of Scandinavian people ever held in this city. Last Wednesday and Thursday the "Satesdal's Stevne" was held and about 500 people were in attendance, and Friday and Saturday the "Nordland's laget" was held at which also a large number were assembled. These gatherings, or more properly, reunions, are held at appointed places every year to which those who were born in certain districts in Scandinavia who have forsaken the old sod and become American citizens assemble to revive old incidents and renew acquaintances among their countrymen.

The programs at the meetings which were held in the afternoons and evenings took place at the Auditorium and were composed of speeches and also consisted of some fine vocal and instrumental music.

In the Open.

Many of the local people took advantage of the ideal weather conditions last Sunday to hie of to the woods to spend the day camping out to avoid the heat of the city. All the boats available were chartered for the day and some of them made many trips up the river with different parties. Owing to the heavy rain fall of late the river has raised sufficiently to admit of the larger boats traversing quite a distance up Thief River, which is impossible when the river is in its low stages.

A trip up either of the rivers this time of the year is one that is extremely pleasant. The banks along Thief River, especially, have many places that furnish ideal camping grounds and the beauty of the scenery is not to be exceeded anywhere.

WAS HANDED A LEMON

Local Ball Tossers Handed One in Game With Crookston Sunday.

Was One of the Fastest Games Played in the Queen City.

In one of the fastest contests played on the Queen city diamond for a long time the local ball team met defeat at the hands of the Crookston ball team by a score of 6 to 0.

The game was a fast and close fisted one throughout and was a "really" good article of baseball. The Crookstonites managed to place a few fortunate hits and were able to score their men, but the locals scattered their hits and were unable to get beyond second.

The Crookston team will play a return game with the locals in this city next Sunday and it will without a doubt be a fast game.

Silos And Ensilage.

It does not pay to devote high-priced land, for long periods, to pasturage and the productiou of hay. The land can be put to more profitable use. In order, therefore, that dairing may continue profitable, instead of depending, as in the past, wholly upon the pasture for the chief food-supply of their herds many of our farmers are turning toward the silo as affording a beneficient solution of the food problem. It is doubly beneficient in that it not only does away with the necessity of devoting so much land to pasture; but also, by making available a cheap supply of succulent and highly-relished food all the year round, it deprives stall-feeding of some of its objectionable features, while keeping the milk flow at a higher level. During the past two or three years, more silos have been built than in all previous years combined. The more prosperous farmers are often supplied, not merely with one, but with two good silos.

The economic value of this method of handling feed being generally recognized, the only real obstacle to the general introduction of the silo seems to be the first cost of the structure and of the machinery for filling it. More stock can be kept and profitably fed, per acre, when ensilage is grown, than by almost any other method of feeding.

The silo practically increases the producing capacity of the farm at least 10 per cent, and often more. A 160 acre farm with a silo will produce as much revenue as one of 180 acres without. Therefore, the first cost of a silo—like that of a dwelling house, a barn or a team—should be considered part of the initial investment; and, if one's capital is limited, it is better to buy a farm smaller by ten per cent, rather than dispense with a silo. The producing value of a silo on $50 land would be equal to that of twenty acres added to the 170-acre farm, or $1,000; on $100 land, it would be $2,000. This is a low estimate; for the stock-carrying capacity of the farm will often be increased fully 25 per cent by the adding of a silo. As compared with its producing value, the cost of constructing the silo is small. Round wooden silos cost from $1.50 to $3.00 per ton of capacity; those of stone; brick or cement, from $2 to $4. It has been shown by actual experiment in Minnesota that—working co-operatively in the purchase of materials, etc.—a number of farmers in a locality may erect on each of their farms a stave silo, of 140 to 150 tons capacity, for about $275.—Geo. P. Grout, University Farm.

IMMIGRATION COMMISSION

Was Named at Northern Minnesota Development Association Meeting.

Association Held Its First Meeting at Bemidji Saturday June 17th.

At the Duluth meeting of the Northern Minnesota Development Association an Immigration commission was held in Bemidji on Saturday the 17th, and it formally organized with W. A. McGonigle of Duluth as Chairman and Daniel Shaw of Thief River Falls as Vice Chairman. The object, of course, is to promote immigration to Northern Minnesota, and in order to raise funds, it is proposed to follow a plan that has proved very successful in Wisconsin, of levying a tax of one cent an acre on all lands held for sale. Of course this tax will be a voluntary contribution, but from the success that has attended the plan in Wisconsin, it is felt that it will be a success here.

W. R. McKenzie, of Bemidji, was named as Commissioner, and he will in all probability, open an office in St. Paul and conduct an aggressive campaign, calling an attention to the upper half of the State.

The contribution from land owners, exclusive of actual farmers, of one cent an acre yearly will create quite a large fund, which, if administered carefully will no doubt do a great deal of good. The plan appeals to business men as being quite feasible, and is regarded as one of the best things the Development Association has done.

Gains Many Immigrants.

The number of immigrants coming to Minnesota since January 1st exceeds in number the number going to any other six northwestern states, and is twice as large as the number going to the five northwestern provinces. This statement is based on figures compiled by the Great Nothern railroad for the St. Paul Association of Commerce. The Great Northern makes its estimate on the fact that 535 cars of immigrant movables were handled between January 1, and May 7, for Minnesota, while only 303 carloads were handled for Alberta, Britsh Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Ontario, and only 516 carloads for Idaho, North Dakota, Montana, Oregon, South Dakota, and Washington.

Minnesota is the only state, according to the figures, that shows a substantial increase in carloads of moving for 1911 over 1910.

The great Northern officials say that the Minnesota Exhibition car was responsible to a great extent for the increase.

The following table of cars of immigrant movables forwarded shows just how Minnesota stands:

	1911.	1910.
Alberta	74	53
British Columbia	3	1
Idaho	..	2
Manitoba	40	51
Minnesota	535	456
North Dakota	200	486
Montana	253	407
Oregon	11	3
Ontario	..	4
Saskatchewan	150	182
South Dakota	27	39
Washington	33	42

J. H. Beek, secretary of the Association of Commerce, and the railroad officials, believe that the figures for the remainder of the year will continue to show a gain for Minnesota.

CLAPP DEFENDS THE RECALL

Senator Says Power Is Not Designed Against Upright Judges.

Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota, the insurgent leader, defended the recall for judges as well as for executive and legislative officials in an address before the Progressive Republican league at Paterson, N. J.

"Judges are only human," he said. "The recall is not designed to be used against upright judges and I believe never will. It will be a travesty of sacrifice if all efforts for free government simply transferred unrestrained and uncontrollable power from the throne to the bench.

"I know that many hesitate at the idea of the recall, but it is as irresistible in free government as free government is inevitable in the progress of humanity."

BOLT KILLS MINNESOTANS

Man and Son, Sitting In Buggy, Are Lightning Victims.

John Berg and his seven-year-old son were struck by lightning and instantly killed while sitting in their buggy in front of the Paul Dagoberg home, twelve miles northwest of Warren. The horse was knocked down, but was not killed. The whole Dagoberg family were badly shocked. A bad wind storm that did much damage prevailed northeast of Warren.

Killed by Electric Wire.

While trimming a tree in the highway in front of the home of George T. Slade at Dellwood, White Bear, Carl Caster of Minneapolis, a professional tree trimmer in the employ of the Munson-Whittacker company of New York, was killed by an electric shock from a high tension wire running through the branches of the tree, falling about thirty feet into Mr. Slade's yard.

Train Kills Auto Driver.

Dan Smiley of St. Paul, thirty years old, a driver for the Twin City auto livery, was instantly killed when Northern Pacific passenger train No. 124 struck the automobile he was driving across the tracks on the White Bear road about a mile from the lake. Smiley's body was thrown several feet. The motor car was wrecked.

University Teacher Drowns.

John C. Trott, instructor in the department of architecture in the engineering college at the state university and an employe of Clarence Johnson, architect of St. Paul, was drowned at Lake Minnetonka. A canoe containing himself and Miss Eva Kaye of Minneapolis, a sophomore academic, was swamped.

Poison on Lemon Kills Baby.

The two-year-old daughter of Austin Cravath, residing on a farm in Elmira township, Olmsted county, sprinkled strychnine on a portion of a lemon and sucked the juice. When found a few minutes later she was writhing in agony and died within half an hour, before physicians from Chatfield could arrive.

IS THE WATER YOU DRINK AS PURE AS THIS?

Purity and cleanliness are the invariable rule at the Kiewel brewery. Success in brewing lies in keeping out impurities.

The water must be pure, and boiled, to make it germ proof. The yeast must be pure, the malt and hops must be pure. Even the air with which the materials come in contact must be pure and sterilized. Just as the secret of successful surgery lies in keeping germs away from the parts operated upon, so it is in modern brewing.

These are the days of germs. The water you are using may be contaminated, but you are always safe when you drink

AN ANTI-PEST BILL.

The state of Colorado has set an example in the matter of anti-pest legislation that might well be followed with profit by sister commonwealths. The measure in question, which is known as the Casady-Tellier bill, is the result of the activity and interest of the State Anti-pest association and in particular of the painstaking work of the secretary of the society, C. L. Fitch. Certain sections of Colorado suffered heavily from grasshoppers and potato bugs during the years 1908, 1909 and 1910, and it was this emergency that made the passage of the bill, though drastic in character, without amendment possible. The bill is especially worthy of publicity because it recognizes definitely the co-operative or community idea in the fighting of pests, a type of co-operation that is imperative if such work is to be effective and farreaching. Briefly the new law, which went into effect immediately upon its passage, provides for the protection of trees, fruits, crops and pasturage against the ravages of insects, rodents, weeds and plant diseases. This protection may be invoked whenever the owners of a majority of the acreage of a given district not exceeding thirty-six square miles file a petition in due form asking that a pest inspection district be established. This is directed to the board of county commissioners and not only gives the names and description of the lands of the interested petitioners, but defines the area to be set off as an inspection district and states the nature of the pest through which loss is threatened. The provisions of the new law are carried out under the supervision of the state entomologist and county inspectors, which are appointed by the county commissioners upon petition signed by twenty-five persons. The county inspectors are in turn assisted by the district inspectors who are named in the original petition.

The state entomologist is required to make inspections twice a year of all sections where he has reason to believe pests exist or when asked to do so by the district inspectors. He may direct extermination work to be done, and in case it is not the inspector may take it in charge. Violations of the provisions of the act or failure to carry out the directions of authorized inspectors is subject to a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $300, and each day's delay in obeying instructions is a separate offense, while the cost of work done by inspectors where the owner fails to act becomes a lien upon the land. Inspectors having pest work in hand must make monthly reports to the state entomologist, who furnishes them with necessary blanks and gives directions to property owners for fighting the pest. The state pays the additional salary of the entomologist and his deputies, while the county pays the salary of county and district inspectors and their helpers. The bill as passed resembles closely in important aspects the law in force under the British board of agriculture in her Indian, African and Australian colonies, where it has proved very effective. The idea of small district co-operation is a feature of the new bill suggested by a Colorado farmer.

SWEET CLOVER AS A SOIL RENOVATOR.

Some interesting experiments have recently been made in the use of sweet clover as a soil renovator. In an Illinois experiment it was found that in an acre of thrifty sweet clover, including leaves, stems and roots, there were 228 pounds of nitrogen, which is about twice the amount contained in an acre of alfalfa or red clover. It was also found that an acre of this wild legume contained 6.4 tons of dry matter, furnishing as much humus as would be contained in twenty-five loads of average barnyard manure. To grow it satisfactorily a piece of land should be well drained, be limed if sour and possibly inoculated with soil from a patch where sweet clover has grown. In any case it is worth trying, as it seems to grow most thriftily in the most forbidding and unpromising places.

FOR POTATO BLIGHT.

If the growing season for the potatoes should be damp and muggy and blight should develop, the vines should be sprayed with the bordeaux solution made by dissolving four pounds of bluestone (copper sulphate) in half a barrel of water and to this adding slowly, stirring the while, a limewater solution made by carefully slacking five pounds of fresh stone lime and diluting to about twenty-five gallons. If one wishes to hit the potato bugs in the same operation, and it is often wise to do so, paris green should be added at the rate of an ounce to every ten gallons. This solution should be put on under good pressure and kept thoroughly stirred.

Gumbo soil, composed largely of clay, silt and fine sand, is considered by geologists as a water deposit of relatively recent geological times, the sediment being carried to its resting place by glacial streams. While difficult to work and requiring special handling, the texture and workability of all gumbo soils are much improved by tile drainage, fall plowing and the turning under of green manuring crops.

A lady reader of a northern agricultural journal states that firing a shotgun off before sunrise at the four corners of a cornfield infested with cutworms will put a stop to the damage done by them. This sounds a bit fishy, being a trifle too much on the order of putting a stolen dish rag under a flat stone to cure warts, but it has this in its favor—that it's cheap and can be given a trial at a cost of 6 or 7 cents and the expenditure of enough energy to walk to four corners of the field.

A Missouri farmer broke a span of mules of the runaway habit (rather, it was the first time, and he did it to keep them from acquiring the habit) by keeping them in the open and letting them run till they got tired. He then kept them running for about four miles after they wanted to stop and then put them on a stiff piece of plowing until sundown. He says that mules that are given this kind of dope when they show the first symptoms of the runaway tendency never require a second lesson.

Following an unusually dry season such as last, an increased interest is being shown by corn belt farmers in that type of cultivator which will kill weeds and at the same time so stir the soil as in the largest measure to conserve the moisture. It has been found as a result of repeated experience that the surface or knife cultivator will do this. It cultivates thoroughly and kills many weeds that the shovel cultivator will miss, while there is a gain in yield at husking time of all the way from six to twelve bushels per acre.

There is many a supposedly refined and cultured woman who would not knowingly crush a worm or insect or needlessly inflict pain on cat or dog who at the same time will, with much pride, wear on her hat portions of the bodies of mother birds that have fallen easy prey to the greed of the pot-hunter because of their instinctive love for their young. In one sense such a woman is as savage at heart as the heathen female that wears sticks in her nose and weights on her lips, and even more responsible, for she has had more light and should know better.

Not the least of the good points that can be urged in favor of the silo is that it can be used to provide a succulent ration during the summer dry spell, when flies are bad and when the milk cows often fall considerably in their milk supply.

It is a pretty good rule to follow to cut out the trees about the house or trim the limbs up until the blue grass will get a foothold. Blue grass needs about so much sunshine to do well, and the folks in the house are the better for about the same amount.

Many are the drivers of horses who strangely seem to overlook the fact that harness repairs are cheaper than the services of a veterinarian or the labor involved in equine funerals. Added to this is the possibility that the driver may get his neck broken in the scrape and need the services of an undertaker.

In Montclair, N. J., they have set about putting an end to the mosquito nuisance by levying a fine of $10 per day on the owners of all premises who permit ponds of water thereon to contain "wrigglers"—mosquitoes in the larval stage.

The job of mowing the lawn may be simplified if the sod is cut away from the trunks of the shade trees thereon for a distance of three or four inches. This will improve the appearance of a mowed lawn and will do away with a pulling of the grass hugging the trunks or clipping it with shears.

The new canes in the raspberry patch will be much more sturdy and will bear far more fruit next season if the terminal shoot is pruned off about now, or as soon as it reaches a height of about three feet. This will induce the putting forth of many lateral shoots on which fruit will be borne next year.

One of the somewhat rare and very beautiful shade trees that are highly prized by the landscape gardener is the Camperdown elm. The tree is a rapid grower, has a large leaf and drooping limb habit, the growth of a single year on a young tree giving it a decided umbrella shape. The stock is grafted in France and sells at a fancy price.

An item in a daily paper not long since told of the extensive damage which it was supposed had been done to flocks in a certain neighborhood by wolves said to have their retreat in a not distant belt of timber. If the experience of some other communities we know of can be taken as a guide there is reason to believe that most if not all of this damage was done by members of the pack of marauders bearing in broad daylight the names of Shep, Tige and Rover in their masters' door yards. Wolves will do damage enough to poultry and young stock, but they ought not to be made scapegoats for the offenses of their distant and more civilized cousins of the dog family.

The damp cellar may not be primarily due to too much shade about the house, but there is no getting around the fact that the situation is aggravated by such shade. The germ destroying sunshine and fresh air ought to enter the cellar windows during a part of every day.

Not a little pleasure and real satisfaction can be got out of placing a shallow dish on the lawn and supplying it with fresh water every day or two. The birds will discover it very quickly and will come to the dish to drink and bathe, where their performances will prove very interesting to the members of the household.

There are all too many chaps who haven't time to "monkey or fuss" testing seed corn who stupidly spend hours and even days later in the season cultivating bare ground in fields which have half or a third of a stand because the seed used wasn't any good. And it is often these same fellows who blame the weather or the party in power or their bad luck because they don't get ahead in the world.

The present day practice of building dairy barns so that they will be provided with abundance of fresh air and sunlight is no longer viewed as a fad by men who think. These conditions mean health to the cows, which means increased milk yield, and this means more money in the bank; hence it resolves itself down to a practical dollars and cents proposition, a language that ought to be understood by the most dull of understanding.

Regrettable as the fact is, truth compels the statement that up to date the most skilled specialists in the medical world have not been able to discover a medicine that will kill the germs that cause cancer and tuberculosis. Other measures sometimes effect a cure in individual cases, but seldom medicine taken internally. Medicines claimed to have this power are on the market, but primarily for the purpose of separating sick folks of their money.

The old world has mighty little to offer boys who start out in life at ten years old sucking cigarettes, except quarters in insane asylums, penitentiaries or jobs holding down dry goods boxes, rubbing the sand off depot walls at train time or touring the country on brake beams. None of these occupations, by the way, yields a very handsome salary. It is well for the boy to look into the future far enough to make up his mind whether he wants to hang out with this kind of company. If he doesn't he would better cut the cigarettes out.

Figures gathered by investigators in the federal department of agriculture show that those engaged in the poultry business in the United States suffer a loss of $45,000,000, or 15 per cent of the annual value of the egg output, $300,000,000, through the careless handling of the product. This loss is traced to failure to provide adequate and clean nesting places, irregularity in gathering, keeping in warm instead of cool places and infrequency of marketing. It is safe to say, in addition, that the bulk of this loss is sustained by farm poultry raisers rather than those who make of poultry raising a primary business. The leak is one that should be stopped.

We heard the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hopping out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the rump strap or monkeyed with the tug or bridle a bit and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and, like others, we have sat for a good half hour, with the thermometer registering 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

Time was when cows needed their horns for self protection, but under modern domestic conditions they are useless and often dangerous appendages. The best and easiest method of dehorning is by the application of some caustic potash to the germ of the horns when the calf is a few days old. After the horn has got a good start the job must be done by saw or clippers. Many a dairyman hesitates to dehorn his cows because of the harmful effect he thinks it will have in reducing their milk flow. However, this is likely to be overestimated. A test made at the Kansas Agricultural college in a herd of twelve cows with a view to determining the shrinkage as a result of dehorning showed that in the five days prior to the operation it gave 1,142.5 pounds of milk, while in the five days following it gave 1,100.7 pounds, or a total shrinkage for the twelve cows of 40.8 pounds. This amounts to sixty-nine one-hundredth of a pound of milk per cow each day or about half a pint. On the fifth day after dehorning all except two of the cows were giving as much milk, and a few more than they did the day before their horns were removed.

F. E. Trigg

Notwithstanding the fact that timothy hay has but about one-eighth as much digestible protein as alfalfa, there are nevertheless many sections of the country in which farmers continue to raise it and use it as a ration for dairy cows. It is just about on a par with feeding a harvest hand boiled potatoes and skimmilk when he needs rather pork and beans, beef and brown bread.

Another Holstein cow has established a new world's record. This time it is Pontiac Clothilde de Kol, a New York cow, that in seven days produced 664.4 pounds of milk, from which 37.2 pounds of butter were made. In the thirty day period her milk yield was 2,588 pounds of milk and her butter output 125.23 pounds. There are reasons to believe that Clothilde will smash records for the longer periods.

Sensational Charges In Dumas Case.

One of the most sensational cases in the history of the country is now pending in Beltrami county. With two men wounded, one a prisoner in the Beltrami county jail and the arrest of Mayor D. T. Dumas of Cass Lake, in the lime light as the king of American cracksmen, Pinkerton detectives claim to have laid bare the greatest criminal sensation in months, and one in which the reputation of many prominent persons in Minneapolis, Bemidji and Cass Lake is at stake.

The crises of the episode came last Saturday morning about 1:30 when two safe robbers, Mike, alias "Curley" Davis and Billy Bean, were trapped by detectives while in the act of cracking a safe at Puposky, 18 miles north of Bemidji.

When discovered the robbers drew automatic revolvers, sending a volley at close quarters into the detectives and other officers but without effect.

A detective had his men armed with loaded with buck shot, and at the first bullet from the robbers gave the command to fire.

Bean, whose legs were shattered by the shot, was rushed to Bemidji on a special train on the Minneapolis, Red Lake & Manitoba and placed in jail.

Evidence is at hand showing that both of these men are expert safe crackers and they are charged with having been the men who blew th safe at Minnetonka several months ago, also one at St. Cloud and one at Shevlin in Clearwater county, twenty miles west of Bemidji six weeks ago. Davis, the man who is still at large, is believed to be the man who shot and seriously wounded Deputy Sheriff Andrew Johnson Thanksgiving day, 1909.

When Dr. A. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, faces trial on charges of arson and robbery brought by men who assert that he was the ringleader of a gang which deal in wholesale arson and robbery, he must explain a mass of testimony which will be used in an attempt to send him to prison.

Against the Cass Lake physician the detectives now assert that they have the following evidence, says the Minneapolis Journal:

Dynamite found in Dr. Dumas' office safe in Cass Lake.

Letters to Dr. Dumas from Ed Le Claire, said by the detectives to be a notorious yeggman, and letters from Dumas to LeClaire, in which LeClaire is asked to come to Cass Lake and bring a "good man".

Exact transcript of a saloon conversation between Dumas, Behan and a third man in which the Puposky robbery was planned.

Receipts showing Dumas had been buying explosives and an affidavit of a Cass Lake hardware merchant that dynamite was purchased by the physician two weeks ago.

Evidence that Dumas was a friend of Fred Hunter, now serving a seven year sentence in Stillwater for robbery.

A confession from William Behan, shot and captured at Puposky, implicating Dumas in the case.

The testimony of R. C. Smythe, who asserts that Dumas agreed to burn his store for $300.

The finding of two valises, containing yeggmen's tools, in the Bemidji saloon in which the robbery is said to have been planned.

Secured a Large Convention.

Rev. A. L. Larson was down to Willmar last week to attend the annual convention of the Lutheran Free Church which was held from the 13th to the 18th inclusive.

Thief River Falls was designated as the place for holding the convention next year, this place having secured a big majority of votes over North Minneapolis the other candidate for the place, and it was due to the hard and persistent work of our local pastor, Rev. Larson, that this place was fortunate in securing the meetings. The meeting next year will commence on the second Tuesday in June and continuing for a week.

Between 500 and 600 voting delegates were present at the convention, together with a large number of others who participated in the meeting.

Ball Game Sunday.

The local base ball team will play the Crookston nine on the local diamond next Sunday. This it is thought will be one of best games played on the local diamond. Crookston has one of the strongest teams this year they ever had and there is a nice little side bet on the game which will make the game an interesting one. The Crookston ball team and the Viking chorus are coming up on a special train and everybody should turn out to witness an extremely fast and interesting contest.

Zion Church.

Services will be held at Holt next Sunday at 10:30 a. m. The confirmation class will meet directly after the services. All welcome.

Services will be held at the [illegible] church next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

BREN AGAIN UNDER ARREST

Shortage of Former Treasurer of the State University Said to Be Growing.

Charged with being short $6,000, besides the $13,800 he says was taken from him by robbers, Joseph D. Bren, former cashier of the University of Minnesota, was rearrested and his bail raised from $2,500 to $10,000.

With information received from Deputy Public Examiner Frank N. Stacy that the shortage would reach $20,000, County Attorney James Robertson decided to have Bren rearrested and have his bail bond raised. He immediately had detectives detailed to the case to avoid any possible doubt of Bren's presence in court. About 9 a. m. the accused man was notified by telephone to appear before Judge Andrew Holt. He left his home immediately, followed by two "shadows."

At the same time his attorney, Norton W. Cross, was telephoned and the two men appeared about the same time in Judge Holt's courtroom. County Attorney Robertson and the officials also were on hand.

In presenting his case to the court Mr. Robertson said Public Examiner Stacy had reported to him that the books showed a shortage of $20,000 on the support and breakage funds.

Asked Bond of $25,000.

In view of this fact he believed the bail of $2,500 was too small and asked that it be increased to $25,000. Mr. Stacy corroborated the county attorney's statement, but added that the examination of the books was merely preliminary and further investigation might change the situation.

On behalf of his client Attorney Cross strenuously opposed an increased bail. He scored the police and newspapers. He said the police have been persecuting Bren and that the newspapers have aroused untold prejudice, digging up matters in no way connected with the case.

Judge Holt, in increasing the bail, declared that he deemed $2,500 bail too low and the $25,000 asked for by the county attorney too high. He therefore placed it at $10,000 and ordered Bren into the hands of the sheriff until the bail was forthcoming.

That Bren played the wheat market and lost heavily is the information claimed by the county attorney's office. It is alleged that Bren conducted his deals under the name of W. J. Bryant in the wheat pit.

It is claimed that Bren's losses amounted to $6,000 since March 29. Just how much more there might be has not been divulged.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

(First publication June 22, 1911)

Default having been made in the payment of the sum of one hundred twenty-three and 90-100 dollars which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by H. O. Atwood and Mabel Atwood, his wife, Mortgagors, to Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of March, 1910, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, on the 5th day of April, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 4 of Mortgages on page 470. Which said Mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said Oscar Bjorge, Mortgagee, to C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, by written assignment dated the 28th day of April 1910, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds, in said Red Lake County, on the 15th day of July, 1910, at eleven o'clock a. m., in book 2 of Mortgages, on page 107.

And Whereas, the said C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen, the Assignees and Holders of said Mortgage, have duly elected and do hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice, under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained; and whereas, there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sum of Seventeen Hundred and Seventy Dollars with interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, from the 16th day of March, 1910, and whereas the said power of sale has become operative, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the land and premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage viz:

The West half of the Southwest quarter and the South half of the Northwest quarter of Section fifteen in Township One hundred fifty-three, North, of Range Forty-three West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in Pennington County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; that the land and premises above described, were subsequent to the 15th day of July, 1910, lawfully detatched from said Red Lake county and made a part of said County of Pennington; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Pennington county at the front door of the Court House in the city of Thief River Falls in said Pennington county and State of Minnesota on the 5th day of August, 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of Seventeen Hundred and Seventy Dollars, and interest, and the taxes, if any, on said premises, and seventy-five dollars Attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated June 20, 1911.

C. E. Bjorge and O. Wangensteen,
Assignee of Mortgage.

A. S. King,
Attorney for Assignees,
Lake Park, Minn.

Kenneth Carver, aged sixteen years, son of a Presbyterian pastor, was instantly killed at the Luverne Brick and Tile company's factory, in an elevator accident. He was found caught by the neck between the elevator floor and the third floor of the building, his head being above the floor of the elevator and his body hanging beneath.

George Buehlman, aged twenty-three years, a bricklayer, was drowned in Fish lake, seven miles south of St. Cloud, while fishing in company with two other men. The boat capsized and the three men were thrown into the lake. Companions attempted to rescue Buehlman, but he became excited and made their efforts vain.

Robert Harp, formerly of Stillwater and in the employ of the H. Peterson Granite company of St. Paul, took carbolic acid on a train from Ely to Duluth and expired soon after arriving at a hospital. He was twenty-four and unmarried and no cause is assigned for his action except despondency.

The village of Clearwater was struck by a high wind that did much damage. Nearly all the large trees for which the town was famous were uprooted.

While bathing in the icy waters of Plamush lake, near Bemidji, Charles Jennings, twenty-one years old, was taken with cramps and drowned.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

E. G. Pake, a former resident of Duluth and a well known builder of saw mills, was accidentally killed in a plant that he had just completed at Madra, Mex. Mr. Pake was sixty-nine years old.

Colonel John R. Conway of Detroit, a member of the governor's staff until the reorganization about a month ago, is dead. Colonel Conway was appointed on the staff of Governor Johnson.

Pierre H. Robinson, sixty-four years old, a resident of Minneapolis since 1865, and a pioneer in the grocery business in Minneapolis, is dead.

THIRTY-FOUR HORSES BURNED

Only Twenty Animals Saved From $25,000 Barn Fire.

Thirty-four horses were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the barn of O. A. Narverud at Minneapolis. Firemen and stable employes succeeded in rescuing twenty horses from the flames, but the remainder were burned. The origin of the fire is not known.

In addition to the horses ten big vans were destroyed. Mr. Narverud estimates his loss at $25,000.

C. W. Post Loses Suit.

St. Louis, June 13.—Suit instituted by C. W. Post of Battle Creek, Mich., against the American Federation of Labor and the Bucks Stove and Range company, in which he sought to prevent a closed shop agreement and asked $750,000 damages, was dismissed by Federal Judge Dyer. The court acted on a demur in which the defendants contend the superior court had no jurisdiction.

Malt Bill Soon Law.

Among the new laws that take effect the first of next month is the Hanson malt bill which prohibits the sale of malt liquors except in licensed saloons The only exceptions to the rule is that drug stores may sell malt for medical purposes.

The law is so worded that manufacturers or wholesalers can sell malt drinks which will permit them to sell people who want it for family use in the home. But there will be no malt in candy stores and similar places. The fine for the violation of the law is $5 to $100 or ninety days imprisonment.

Live Stock Value High.

According to statistical reports in the official statement for Minnesota from the U. S. 1910 census bureau, the agregate value of all domestic animals, poultry and bees, in the state in 1910 was reported as $161,528,000, as compared with $89,065,000 in 1900, the amount of increase being $72,465,000, and the rate 81.4 per cent.

The total value of the domestic animals was reported as $156,695,000 in 1910, as against $86,621,000 in 1900, the increase amounting to $70,028,000, or 80.9 per cent.

Logging Privileges Urged.

Washington, June 20—Representative Steenerson today urged at the Indian office the immediate grant of logging privileges to the Indians on the Red Lake reservation. He was informed that, owing to the suspension of Superintendent of Logging Farr, no action could be taken at present, but that in a few days the office would know if favorable action could be taken. The Indian office was also asked by Mr. Steenerson to hurry up the issue of patents for townsite allotments in the village of Waubun on the White Earth Indian reservation.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Summer Capital Again.

Editor Martin Widstein, of the Warroad Plaindealer, was in the city over Sunday, and while here passed around some blotters with views of Rainy Lake and Warroad. STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota

Not guilty was the verdict returned for Dr. Albert H. Goodrich, a St. Paul dentist on trial in the Hennepin county district court on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree. Last October Dr. Goodrich was driving his machine from Minneapolis to St. Paul. At Bedford and University avenue his machine struck Mrs. Caroline E. Wilson, who was crossing the street, the accident resulting in her death.

Representative Davis of Minnesota is in receipt of a petition from members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Nicollet county requesting the exercise of his influence against the proposed arbitration treaty with Great Britain when it is submitted to the senate for consideration. The petition charges undue favoritism of England in the treaty.

Rev. Samuel G. Smith, pastor of the People's church, St. Paul, has been appointed by Governor Eberhart as a member of the state board of parole—the new board created at the last session of the legislature. Associated with him will be Warden Henry Wolfer of the state prison and P. M. Ringdal, chairman of the board of control.

The Minnesota passenger and commodity rate cases, recently appealed from the decision of Judge Sanborn, were advanced for argument by the United States supreme court. The cases were assigned for argument on Oct. 10 next, when rate cases appealed by Missouri and other states also will be heard.

Professor C. J. Posey has resigned as a member of the faculty of the Mankato normal school, to take effect soon. He has accepted a fellowship in the department of geography of the University of Chicago. Mr. Posey has been connected with the faculty of the Mankato normal for six years.

President Frank Nelson of Minnesota college, Minneapolis, has received word that the honorary degree of L. H. D., doctor of humanity, had been conferred on him by Bethany college, Lindsborg, Kan.

Mildred Washburn of Duluth was announced the winner of the Wellesley college song composition, held annually in an effort to raise the standard of college music.

The cash balance in the state treasury at the close of business May 31, according to the statement issued by the state treasurer, was $2,280,233.92.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

For the third time in three years the mill dam of George Florida in the Crow river at Rockford, Hennepin county, was partially destroyed by a heavy blast of dynamite. Fifty feet of the dam, the fish run and the big mill-wheel were destroyed. The dam stretched from Hennepin to Wright counties. There has been some feeling against it, farmers claiming that it caused their lands to be flooded.

Lying in the arms of the grandmother who, when attacked by apoplexy, fell to the floor, breaking the child's neck, Anna Erickson, fourteen months old, of Moorhead, was buried in the same casket with Mrs. L. E. Larson. At the time of the tragedy Mrs. Larson was found by neighbors in her home with her dead grandchild beneath her. She died forty-eight hours after the child.

The big bridge near New Duluth has been destroyed by fire. No doubt whatever exists in the minds of the authorities and the residents of New Duluth that it was of incendiary origin. An attempt was made a month ago to set the big structure on fire, but it was discovered in time to prevent more than the loss of one pile at one end.

A. W. Wolson of Otter Tail county was accidentally killed by a fall from his windmill. He had climbed to the platform to make repairs and the wind started the mill and knocked him off. He fell head foremost and his skull was crushed.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

James Burke, seventy-five years old, one of the most prominent farmers of Waukesha county, Wis., was drowned when his horse, frightened by a train, backed into the Knee quarry northeast of Waukesha, which is filled with water. When a young man Burke gained distinction while acting as a baggageman in Minnesota by fighting off the James boys, who attempted to hold up his train after the Northfield raid in 1876.

C. M. Taylor, father of Mrs. Louis W. Hill of St. Paul, is dead at Seattle, Wash. Mr. Taylor was seventy-eight years old. He was well known in St. Paul, having reached there from New York in 1855 and continued a resident until 1902.

Rev. J. O. Lundberg, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church at Beckville, is dead from an attack of apoplexy received while he was addressing his confirmation class.

Mrs. Ludwig Giefer is dead at Hastings from senile debility, aged seventy-five years. She was a pioneer resident of Dakota county.

Dr. Edwin Phillips, seventy-eight years old, a resident of Minneapolis for forty years, and a veteran of the Civil war, is dead.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

Senator Lorimer of Illinois faces another investigation at the hands of his colleagues. The inquiry will be conducted by a subcommittee of the committee on privileges and elections, composed of four Republicans and four Democrats, four of whom voted for the conviction and four for the acquittal of the senator last session. It took seven hours' debate to agree upon the system and it was adopted by a vote of 48 to 20.

The proposed Democratic revision of the wool tariff—the Underwood bill—was unanimously approved by a full Democratic caucus. Its endorsement followed some rapid maneuvering by the Democratic house leaders, who devised a scheme which effectually disposed of the opposition of the free wool advocates. The bill provides for more than a 50 per cent reduction in present duties.

That he received about $26,000 as his share of a fee from the American Sugar Refining company for services rendered by Henry W. Taft, brother of the president, when he was a member of the law firm of Strong & Cadwalader, was admitted by Attorney General Wickersham on the witness stand before the house committee on expenditures in the department of justice.

Because William J. Bryan advised some of his followers in the house to bolt the caucus if it did not declare for free wool, and because Mr. Bryan assailed in a current editorial those tariff makers who disagreed with him, there is an open breach between the Nebraskan and the Democratic leaders of the house.

The wool tariff revision bill has been favorably reported to the house by the ways and means committee. There was a strict party vote on the bill in committee, fourteen Democrats approving and seven Republicans voting against it.

WRECK CAUSED BY WASHOUT

Wife of Railroad President Killed Near Vergas, Minn.

Mrs. L. S. Berg, wife of the president of the New Orleans, Mobile and Chicago railroad, was killed and Mr. Berg and a dozen other passengers were injured in the wreck of Soo train No. 109. The wreck was caused by a washout in a cut a mile south of Vergas.

Mr. Berg's injuries were the only serious ones suffered by the passengers, many of whom had miraculous escapes. One man, a traveling salesman, jumped through a window and cut his hands. Other minor injuries were reported, but none serious.

All of the eight cars left the track except three. The engine plunged with the rest of the train. Three cars burned completely, including the private coach in which Mr. and Mrs. Berg were traveling. Of these only the iron substructure was left. The wheels were stripped clean from every car in the train except one.

MORTGAGE TAX IS $60,070

Great Northern Pays on $45,000,000 Property in Minnesota.

The state of Minnesota, through the plan of James J. Hill to issue $600,000,000 bonds by the Great Northern railroad, received as its share of the deal $60,070, the amount of mortgage registry tax due the state for filing the trust deed.

The instrument, which was filed with the secretary of state by the Great Northern, covers 123 printed pages and in effect reports the proceedings of the board of directors of the railroad company held in St. Paul May 25, which authorized the issue of bonds payable in gold coin and to mature June 1, 1961.

The $60,070 was paid to the state as the mortgage registry tax on $45,000,000 of the bonds, which is the value of the real estate of the company in Minnesota.

Three inches of rainfall strung along over a period of three days will cause the average man, previously fearful of burning up with drought, to holler for life preservers.

Apples should be thinned when they are about the size of a hickory nut to at least six inches apart, and in the course of the work only the thriftiest and most perfect apples should be kept on the tree.

A report recently issued by New Zealand dairy authorities places the value of an acre of pasturage when sold in the form of butter at from $15 to $45. The difference here indicated is directly due to the ability of the individual cow to convert grass into butter.

A little fine road dust sprinkled on young pear trees, cherry trees or rosebushes early in the morning when the dew is on will put a finish on the slugs that so often skeletonize the leaves. The dust is tough on their gizzards and sweat glands. The writer has tried this slug remedy and knows it does the business.

There is no more sly and brutal enemy of the birds than the spry and graceful small red squirrels that frequent the lawns and parks of almost every town and city. It may be tough treatment, but the writer favors shooting these wretches on sight, for they perform no service that in any way compensates for their ruthless destruction of eggs and young birds.

NEWS OF NOTED PERSONS

During the examination of Herman Ridder, until recently president of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, who appeared before the senate finance committee in support of Canadian reciprocity, Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota startled the committee by challenging one of his statements as an "absolute falsehood."

Miss Grace Bryan, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bryan, and Richard L. Hargreaves, a young business man of Lincoln, Neb., were married at Fairview, the Bryan suburban home, before a company of nearly a hundred relatives and friends.

BRIDGMAN TO QUIT HAMLINE

University President Resigns After Twenty-eight Years' Service.

Dr. George H. Bridgman, for twenty-eight years president of Hamline university at St. Paul and prominent in educational and church circles throughout the United States, tendered his resignation to the board of trustees of the institution, to take effect in June, 1912. The board, unanimous in its opposition to the president's resignation, accepted upon his insistence.

Dr. Bridgman has been contemplating this move for two years, according to members of the board, and is carrying out his intention, as expressed two years ago to Vice President Wyman and others of the board, to retire as soon as he had completed the raising of the $200,000 endowment fund, bringing the total endowment of the university up to nearly a million dollars. The last of the fund was subscribed last week.

HELPS FARM VALUES

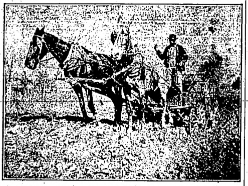
GOOD ROADS INCREASE SELLING VALUE OF RURAL PROPERTY.

LARGE AND SURE RETURNS

Improvement of Highways Is Not Matter of Expense, but an Investment—With Good Roads the Farm Will Produce Greater Revenue.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

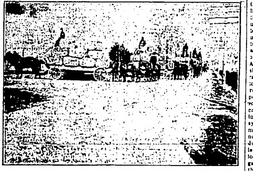
There is one very important factor that people are apt to overlook, and that is, the influence of good roads on the value of farm property. There is no fact that is better established or of which there is more abundant proof than that a good hard road leading from the farm to the market will increase the selling value of the farm far more than the amount of taxes required to be paid by the farmer to build the road. Hence when the matter is analyzed, it will be found that the building of good roads is not a matter of expense, but an investment that pays a larger and surer return than anything else one can name.



Two Mules Drawing One Bale of Cotton Over Bad Road at Jackson, Tenn.

This shows the conditions down in the cotton belt, where at times the roads are almost impassable. The team and driver are in harmony with the road. Ought any one expect thrift in such surroundings? The next cut shows the same road a mile nearer town, after it has been improved.

A progressive farmer will expend money on building good fences, tile his land, erect wind mills, barns, sheds, covers for his machinery, plant trees, and do many things to make his farm more attractive, more useful and more valuable. When a man has spent several hundred dollars on some of these improvements he figures his farm is worth more than the amount expended over what it was before. He is willing to expend money inside of his boundary fences, but when asked to go out beyond this to the public highway he is apt to feel that the amount of money spent is an expense that yields him no direct return. In fact, in no community, so far as the writer can ascertain, after a world wide study extending over 20 years, was the building of hard roads begun without the strongest opposition from those who were really to receive the largest benefit. Dire predictions were made that the property would be confiscated by the taxation, that the building of the roads would ruin the tax payer. But every community that has had the experience of building hard roads, using them and paying for them, has continued to build more and more from year to year. They found that while it called for the expenditure of money to meet the bills that it lightened their burdens in many other ways, that it made life better worth living, that there was more social life in the community, the children were better satisfied to stay upon the farm, and they could go to market any day in the year they liked, and thus take advantage of the market instead of the market taking advantage of them.



Two Horses Drawing Eleven Bales of Cotton Over Road Shown in Other Picture, After Improvement.

This is a road splendid constructed built by a county bond issue. Before the roads were built there was little or no sale for farms, afterwards they were in demand at an advance of from 30 to 50 per cent., all on account of the good roads.

It is within the experience of millions of farmers that they had grain or live stock on hand ready to sell; the price was right, but the roads were so bad they could not reach the market. A few weeks later when the roads improved, perhaps there was a drop in the market.

The secretary of agriculture (and there is no higher authority) says that good roads, usable every day in the year, so the farmers can take advantage of market conditions, are worth two or three cents on every bushel of grain, and ten to thirty cents a hundred on cattle and hogs. Hence, with good roads the farm will produce a larger revenue, it is a more desirable place to live and it is worth more money.

If one were to go out to buy a farm, and when he alighted at the railway station, was met by the real estate agent, who told him he had two farms practically alike, one four miles east on a good macadam road, and the other four miles west, on a dirt road, the chances are ten to one that the buyer would prefer the farm upon the good road and willingly pay more money to get it. One of the first things the owner would say if he cared to sell, would be that he could go to town any day in the year and haul a good load, while a farmer eight miles west of him at times would not be able to turn a wheel.

One county in Kentucky spent over $200,000 upon the highways. The record is that former values nearly doubled. The same is true of Texas. It is also true of Indiana, and true wherever good roads are built. Distance is measured by the time it takes to go from place to place. Ask how far it is to a given point, and you are told it is about five minutes' walk, or to another inquiry, "it takes an hour by rail." Distance is measured by the clock's tick, and not by the yard stick.

A hard-headed German farmer at Sheboygan, in a very graphic and comprehensive way, told of the value of good roads as it appeared to him.

He said: "My farm is ten miles from market. If it was only five miles from market it would be worth $15 an acre more. I cannot move my farm in, but if we can build a good road to my farm I can come in the ten miles with my produce easier than I could come in five miles with bad roads. Therefore to build a good road moves my farm in half way to town."

The writer has traveled in many states and foreign countries and studied the road problem. In every locality where good roads have been built the people are enthusiastic; they say they do not see how they ever could have gotten along so many years without them, for they have better schools, more social advantages, that the people live better, dress better, and the people in town are strongly attracted to rural life; that where there was an opportunity to sell a farm once with the bad roads, there were several opportunities with the good ones.

If any state or community will take up the building of good roads upon the right basis, and spread the payments over a series of years, they will find it is the best investment they could possibly make. More than one-half the states now are assisting the townships to build good roads, by paying anywhere from one-third to three-fourths the cost. To aid road building the state of New York issued $50,000,000 of bonds, and will spend $5,000,000 per year for ten years upon the highways, assisting the counties and the states in permanently improving the main thoroughfares. This is a step in the right direction. Scores of states are doing the same thing in a somewhat smaller way. In some states the counties are taking up the proposition, voting county bonds for this purpose. Wayne county, Michigan, last fall voted a bond issue of $2,000,000, to be spent upon the highways of Wayne county. The state will also help, and the result will be 250 to 300 miles of first class highways, covering the county with Detroit as a center. By spreading the payment over 20 years it is found the increase in taxation is so small as not to be noticeable. On an average 80 acre farm it will be something like $1.30 a year.

Roads well built are permanent, given a moderate amount of attention and expense for maintenance.

There is no reason why the present generation should carry the whole burden, and the future should be relieved therefrom.

The plan of building a small piece of road every year by an annual tax, and extending the road a mile or two at a time is unsatisfactory in results, the cost is considerable more than it should be, and it takes a long time to get the roads. If 20 miles were built at one time in a township, there would be strong competition among contractors and the tax payers would find they could get their roads from 10 to 25 per cent. less money, that they would have better built roads and would have them to use at once instead of waiting ten years or more to build them piecemeal, and have the first mile practically worn out before the last one was finished. Of course there would be interest to pay on the bonds, but if the use of the roads is not worth more to the community than the interest on the bonds, it would not pay to build the roads. Money can be borrowed at four or five per cent., and those in a position to form good judgment, will say that first class roads will pay for themselves every five years, or in other words, that their use is worth 20 per cent. of the cost each year.

One sometimes hears a farmer, who is opposed to the building of hard roads, say that he can raise no more grain or get a larger return from the farm by reason of having good roads. Such a one will attempt to sustain his position by stating only part of the whole proposition. Of course it is true that the road has no influence upon the productivity of the farm along which it passes, but it does not follow that the net results are the same, whether the roads are good or bad.

Only a few days ago the writer was down in the corn belt of Illinois and saw four horses hauling a load of corn into town. It was all the horses could do to handle the load, although the country was comparatively level. The mud in the road was nearly a foot deep. No fair minded man will say that a crop can be marketed under such conditions as cheaply as when the roads are good, and a single team can handle the same at twice the speed.

The value of the farm does not depend alone upon what the soil will produce, but upon its accessibility to market, the environment and whether the farm is in every way desirable as a place to live. We spend money for pleasure and for comfort, and it is right that we should do so. Probably as a rule too little is spent for this. Whenever good roads have been built, in any community, there has been a sharp advance in the price of land, because the farms are more accessible. The writer has in mind a county in northern Indiana, where about ten years ago a system of 24 miles of hard roads were built, covering the main highways of the township. About $55,000 were spent upon the improvements, the payment spread over ten years. Within a year after the roads were built the farmers were asking and getting $15 to $25 an acre more for their farms than they could have gotten before the roads were built. In some cases the advance was even more. The increase in taxation was hardly felt.

One of the prominent residents of the township, in commenting upon the improvement, said that the building of the roads exerted a powerful influence upon the lives of the people of the township—everybody began to slick up, a new picket fence replaced the old tumble down board fence, the house was painted, walks laid out, and an air of thrift was apparent everywhere. Also following the good roads, a township high school was built, and arrangements made to carry the children to and from school. This was a great relief to the isolation the young people were placed under before the roads were built. The new school became the social center and they found in that township that the building of a system of roads was the best investment they had ever made, and under no circumstances could they be induced to go back to the old way. It is the same story everywhere; in every locality where any community ever began to build good highways, and had the experience of building, using and paying for them, the community was not only satisfied but kept on building more and more roads.

In the last analysis it will be found that the building of highways adds to the value of the farm served by them several times the cost, and this increase in farm values is only one of the many advantages that grow out of splendid highways.

Good roads will effect economies in many ways; they will make life more enjoyable; they mean better schools, more social life and more profit; they mean progress and civilization.

A Selfish Viewpoint.

Champ Clark, the Democratic leader, was discussing, at a Washington banquet, a measure of which he disapproved.

"This measure," he said, "is a sign of narrowness and selfishness. It reminds me of the scholar to whom his teacher said on the first of February:

"'Why was George Washington a great man?'

"'Because,' said the scholar promptly, 'we don't have no school on his birthday.'"

THE CUTWORM PEST.

While cutworms do more damage during the month of May than later, a suggestion or two now relative to preventing damage by them will not be out of place. In no season that the writer can remember has the damage in the north central states been so heavy as that which has been inflicted on farmers and gardeners within the past few weeks. Not only has corn on sod ground been badly riddled and had to be replanted, but even worse havoc has been wrought in the town and country garden patch. One gardener in speaking of the matter the other day said that of 1,000 cabbage plants which he had set out the cutworms got all but two. So voracious are they that they have even attacked potato vines. Two things may be done to prevent damage. The stalks of transplanted stuff like cabbages and tomatoes may be protected by wrapping them with a couple of thicknesses of newspaper, allowing the paper to extend an inch below and an inch and a half above the surface of the ground. To poison the worms moisten bran with a solution made by adding one ounce of paris green to four or five gallons of water and thinly scatter while moist close to the stems or stalks of the plants to be protected. The worms are also very fond of green clover or alfalfa, and if this is wet in the poison solution and similarly placed it makes an excellent exterminator. A garden that is thoroughly hoed or cultivated will not suffer as much damage as one that is not, while a further advantage is that the worms may be killed as they are thrown to the surface.

A PURE BRED SIRE LEAGUE.

The department of animal husbandry of the University of Wisconsin has lately set afoot a campaign that is deserving of publicity. It aims at the organization of a nation wide pure bred sire league, a voluntary, nonincorporated association, of which any person may become a member by owning and using a pure bred sire in the production of any of the several kinds of farm animals. The purpose of the organization, as suggested, is the improvement of the live stock of the country by the use of pure bred registered sires in place of those of grade, scrub or mongrel breeding. Those who join the league pledge themselves so far as is possible to use pure bred sires, to advocate the general use of such sires, to work for the improvement of pure bred sires along the line of breed character and individual excellence and, lastly, to discourage the use of grade, mongrel or scrub sires or sires and dams of whatever breeding that are diseased or unsound in any way. The improvement in the breeding and character of all kinds of farm animals has been marked in the past few years, and there is reason to believe that an organization such as the above will do much toward helping the good work along.

COST OF PRODUCTION HAZY.

The chief lack in the system of accounts kept on the average farm is the uncertainty relative to the cost of production. It's an easy matter to figure out the receipts from a crop of small grain, corn, potatoes or hay at so much per bushel or ton or of live stock at a given price per hundredweight, but not so simple a matter to figure exact cost of production, including the items of preparation and cultivation of soil, the cost of harvesting, storage, interest on investment, deterioration in equipment, etc. Yet it is only by keeping tab on these and a good many other items that makes it possible for the farm owner to know whether his season's operations have been really profitable or not. It will take some time and attention to keep a set of farm books simply, yet it is well worth while that one may know just where he stands—what operations have been profitable and what followed at a loss.

SHOULD LIVE WITH THE WORMS.

It is hard to have patience with the man who, though entirely dependent upon the kindness of nature for fertile soil, productive fruit tree, bush and vine, sunshine and rain, is so narrow and selfish that he will ruthlessly kill the finest and most useful of our song birds because, knowing a good thing when they see it, they take a bit of toll from him in the shape of ripe and luscious berries. Folks of this type ought to be herded by themselves in a territory bug and worm cursed because never visited by our feathered friends and compelled to subsist on what worms and insects leave. They would soon have enough of the business and would return to dwell with civilized folks, thankful for bird life and having a better conception of reciprocity, the square deal and the eternal fitness of things.

The actual loss in the handling of one "loafer" in the dairy herd in the course of a year will often more than pay for a Babcock milk tester, which can be bought at between $4 and $5.

While many folks lay great store by luck, so called, it is always well to reduce the operation of this uncertain factor to a minimum, which can be done by the use of one's wits, good judgment and careful planning.

While there is some conflict in aim in the attempt to secure a type of cattle having beef and dairy capacity in marked degree, there is in the case of sheep no difficulty in the raising of a type which will do well in the line of both wool and mutton. General thriftiness and vigor are the prime essentials in the case of both meat and wool.

Too much importance can hardly be attached to carefully sealing or painting over wounds made by the removal of large limbs from the head or upper trunk of fruit trees. Of course it is preferable to adopt from the start such a style of pruning as will make such heavy cutting unnecessary, but now and then one comes into possession of an orchard tract which has been neglected, when such heavy cutting has to be done late or never. When the surface of such cuts has become sufficiently dry to take paint it should be coated over at intervals with two or three coats of any good white lead paint. If the cut is not more than an inch and a half in diameter it should be covered with grafting wax. The prompt application of either paint or wax will prevent the entrance of rot fungus and keep that portion of the trunk or limbs sound and firm and will contribute to the long life of the tree.

MUSHROOM CORNS
Most Painful of All Foot Ailments.
How to Cure Them.

The Mushroom corn is so called from its pitted cone top, resembling a tiny mushroom. It burrows deep into the toe and gets more inflamed than other corns. For the quick relief and cure of these and all corns and callouses the following is the most effective remedy known to science: Dissolve 2 tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently massaging the sore parts. (Less time will not give desired results.) All soreness instantly disappears and the corn or callous can be easily peeled off. It may be necessary to repeat this for a number of nights for a complete cure, but if adhered to it will surely succeed. A little olive oil rubbed on the part is very beneficial. This Calocide is a very remarkable preparation for all foot ailments and is no longer confined to doctors' use. Any druggist has it in stock or will quickly get it from his wholesale house. A twenty-five cent package is usually sufficient to put the worst feet in fine condition. Bad smelling feet and tender feet need only a few treatments, likewise with inflamed bunions. This item will be welcomed by persons who have tried ineffectual powders and tablets.

FACTORY REOPENED

The Sash and Door Factory Has Commenced Operations.

Firm Is Known As The Thief River Falls Manufacturing Company.

The Sash and Door Factory has commenced its operations and has at present about a half a dozen men working at the machines taking care of the fast incoming orders. The company, as incorporated, is known as the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company and the officers are T. Ostbye, manager and president; O. O. G. Johnson, treasurer and J. P. Grothe, Secretary.

This new company is starting out with an encouraging volume of business and has its hands full from the start.

Only last week a job which involves some $1,500 was landed by the firm, and other similar orders have been secured in addition to a large number of smaller ones. The only handicap to the company at present is the lack of a sufficient number of machinists to carry on the work, but it is expected that these will be secured in a short time, which will greatly increase their force of workmen.

Mr. T. Ostbye, the manager, has had many years of experience in this line of business; he had up to a within a short time ago owned and operated a similar factory at Moorhead.

C. O. G. Johnson, the treasurer, has just recently moved here with his family, and others connected with the firm who have moved to this city are Messrs. L. Schultz, of Fargo, and C. Stang.

Those Who Passed.

The following returns of the High School Board Examination which was held March 20th and 21st has been received:

- Dist. No. 37.—Mildred Hooper, teacher—Highlanding; Herbert W. Cousin, age 17 years,-3 certificates, Arith. Geo. and American History.
- Dist. No. 25.—Katie B. Dahl, teacher,—T. R. Falls; Harris A. Smith, age 17, Geography; Ruth J. Christenson, age 16,-Geography; Thea Erickson, age 15, Geography.
- Dist. No. 165.—Miss Emma Jones, teacher, Thief River Falls; Inga E. Becken, Geography. Second Ex. held May 26—June 1st.
- Dist. No. 37.—Herbert W. Cousin, Spelling; Emma Dunn, age 15, two certificates, Arith. and Spelling; Laura Wold, age 14, two certificates, Arith. and Spelling.
- Dist. No. 25. — Harris A. Smith, 2 certificates, American History and Arith.; Ruth J. Christenson, 3 certificates, American History, Arith. and English Grammar; Thea Erickson, Arith.; Ester Kellberg, 2 certificates, American History and Arith.; Carl Johnson, Arith.

Soil moisture can be conserved for next year by early plowing. This has been demonstrated in Oklahoma in a five year test. Land plowed there in the middle of July, during a five-year period, produced twenty seven bushels of wheat per acre; that plowed during the middle of August produced twenty-four bushels per acre; that plowed during the middle of September yielded twenty-two bushels per acre. It will be found, when a comparison is made, say about the middle of September, between land that is plowed now and a fine mulch maintained, and land plowed in September—that there is a vast difference in the soil moisture, in favor of early plowing and harrowing. This will be especially noticeable when the comparison is made with land on which weeds have been permitted to grow until plowing is done in September.

Changes In Rates.

Agent Baker, of the Great Northern, has been formally notified from headquarters of the changes in fares and rates on that road to become effective next Saturday, July 1st. According to the new schedule the passenger rate in milage varies in some instances, according to the old schedule based on the 2 cent rate. As in the instance of the fare between this city and Crookston, only 7 cents additional is charged under the new schedule, making the rate to become effective $1.07 as against $1.00 as heretofore. Another instance is that of the passenger rate between this city and St. Paul. The charges under the new rate will be $9.74 as against $6.34 under the 2 cent rate. This exceeds the former 3 cent rate which was effective before the 2 cent fare was instituted and based on the rate of 317 miles.

There are many other instances where on this line alone the mileage under the schedule does not tally with the former rate.

Takes Long Trip Alone.

Two of the most youthful travelers who have boarded the local trains on a long journey alone are the little Misses Perl and Alice Dalton, who are about 10 and 12 years old, who departed unaccompanied on the Great Northern train last Tuesday afternoon for Seattle, Washington, where they go to meet their father and make their home with him in the west. These girls have made their home with their Aunt and Uncle near Carmel, in eastern Marshall county ever since Mr. Dalton's departure for the west some time ago in search of a home. They were brought to town by them Monday and seen safely off on their long journey.

Elected First Vice President.

At the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Minnesota firemen which was held at Owattonna last week Ira C. Richardson, of this city, was elected first vice-president of the association.

This city was also selected as the place of holding the convention in 1913 and it was only by the influence and hard work of the local delegates to the convention that this was brought about as several other places were in the field for the convention and were waging a hard fight. The convention next year will be held in Minneapolis.

The Crookston School.

The first Senior Annual published by the class of 1911, Crookston School of Agriculture, contains an interesting historical article by Mr. Harry Hedin, one of the members of the class. The farm on which the school is located was donated to the state in 1894 by James J. Hill, Prof. T. A. Hoverstad, a graduate of Minnesota Agricultural College, was its first superintendent. The land was broken up, stock was purchased and various demonstrations were carried out. In 1904 Prof. Wm. Robertson took charge of the station, and soon afterwards the school was organized. A system of drainage was installed on the farm. Several school buildings were erected, and the school grew from 30 pupils the first year to 120 in 1909. In 1910 Prof. C. G. Selvig was appointed superintendent of the farm and station. Two new buildings were completed last summer, and several will be erected this year. The school enrollment reached 140, with 115 additional Short Course students. The sixth year of the school opens October 3. The new catalog, giving the nature and scope of the work done by this school, is out. Anyone wishing a copy may procure it by addressing the Superintendent, School of Agriculture, Crookston, Minnesota.

SANGERFEST CAME TO A CLOSE SUNDAY

One of the Most Eventful and Successful Musical Meetings Held In Northern Minn.

Comes to a Close Last Sunday Afternoon With an Outing at "Squaw Point"

What was one of the most interesting meetings and the greatest musical event in the history of this city and possibly in any city in Northern Minnesota, came to a close last Sunday, when the much talked of and widely advertised Sangerfest came to a close. Never has such a large number of accomplished musicians ever gathered in our midst at one time and only those who were fortunate in being present at the concert and in hearing the result well nig training for this event — to find out choruses, soloists — cost money and are worth many can realize the and they will pay for the programs. r and over again ever well drained and well

It is only with road with a good binder linquent work on here from $4,000 to t such a road mittee in charge that will last for tinous task of arranging everything so satisfactorily could be accomplished, and as a result when the day of the festivities dawned there was nothing left undone to make the event a pleasant and notable one, and, in accordance, the city were dressed in gala attire for the event and furnished a most beautiful and brilliant spectacle.

While a larger attendance from the outside was expected, the spacious Auditorium, nevertheless, was fairly crowded at both the concerts and in attendance were people who had traveled hundreds of miles to take in the concert.

The choruses, and others who accompanied them, arrived on the 11:05 Great Northern train Friday morning and was met at the depot by the City Band and citizens and escorted down town in automobiles and carriages. In the afternoon preceeding the grand rehearsal the address of welcome on part of the city and local choir was given by Rev. Rosseland, and Mayor Hamro. At five o'clock the grand parade took place and was participated in by all the choruses, soloists, band and citizens in carriages and automobiles, and was lead by Grand Marshall Backe. At 8 o'clock in the evening the opening concert was given in the Auditorium and was opened by an overture by the orchestra, lead by Prof. H. G. Maxwell of this city.

At 10 o'clock Saturday morning automobiles left the Auditorium with the visitors on a sight-seeing tour of the city. At four o'clock Saturday afternoon the annual convention of Red River Valley Singers association took place in the Commercial Club Rooms and the following are the officers elected to represent the association the coming year:

President—Syver Serumgaard, Devils Lake N. D.
Vice Pres.—Dr. Kjelland, Fargo N. D.
Secy—Ole Holm, Devils Lake, N. D.
Treasurer—H. P. Halvorson, Fargo, N. D.
Director—In—Chief—P. A. Rudd Fargo, N. D.
Assistant Director—Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, Thief River Falls, Minn.

The following resolutions were adopted by the guests at the convention Saturday:

AN APPRECIATION

Before leaving your beautiful city after having spent with you three days of unalloyed pleasure we feel it an imperative duty to express in this formal manner a sincere and hearty "thank you."

We want to thank you, Mr. Mayor, for the unconditional surrender of the city into our hands. Our fondest hope will ever be that we return it even better than we found it.

We want to thank you, citizens, for the cordial welcome you have extended to us and the courtesy shown us while guests among you.

We want to thank you, ladies, for the attention given us as well as our lady friends who came here to spend a holiday with us.

We want to thank you boys and girls, for the civility and respect paid to every one of our visitors.

We want to thank you, owners of automobiles and homes, placed at our disposal and the many acts of real hospitality shown us in every conceivable way.

We want to thank the Commercial club, the Antlers club, the Auditorium company and the light company, for turning over to our use everything in their possession and for looking after the smallest detail for our convenience.

And we want to thank you "Brage" who made this meeting possible. You and your wives and daughters and sisters and cousins who have worked early and late and brought to a complete arrangement everything conceivable for our comfort, entertainment and enjoyment.

We leave you with "three cheers and a tiger" for Thief River Falls and with an earnest wish that it will some day be our fortune to in some measure reciprocate.

UNITED SCANDINAVIAN SINGERS OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.

Just preceeding the concert on Saturday evening large crowds gathered outside the Auditorium to witness the high dive of Prof. William, of Bemidji, from the top of Auditorium to the life saving net below. Prof. William, who was announced to have defied the laws of gravitation on hundreds of occasions and dived from any height, nevertheless turned out to be a rag dummy and as a consequence there was no job for the undertaker and no funeral expenses to pay as was expected by the innocent on lookers.

Just after the concert on Saturday evening the banquet held away at the Mozark roller rink and was prepared and served by the Ladies of the United church and this lasted to the wee small hours of the morning. In addition to the swell "feed" speeches and toasts were delivered and music was rendered by the Mozark Orchestra.

On Sunday, as the closing number on the Sangerfest program, was held the outing at "Squaw Point", which lasted throughout the day, and the guests departed on the special train which came up from Crookston Sunday afternoon and brought them back to that place on their journey to their various points of destination.

Fargo is the place selected to hold the Grand Sangerfest which will comprise all the choirs in the American Association and two years hence the Sangerfest of the Red River Valley Singers Association will be held in Devils Lake, N. D.

The orchestra under the directorship of Prof. Maxwell of this city was, in addition to the best musical talent in the city, composed of some of the very best musicians in the state, and numbered in all about thirty members.

The following outside musicians took part in the orchestra:

Violin—Shefstad, Crookston.
" —Hanson, Grand Forks.
Viola—Finston, Duluth.
Cello— " "
Bass—Holten, " Tympani,—— "
Flute—Jacklin, Warren.
Clarinets—Hertzgaard, Fargo.
" —Lukasson, Grand Forks.
Bassoon—Heynou, Mpls.

Railroads Must Report Accidents By Wire.

Washington, June 24.—Every common railway carrier will be required, after July 1, 1911, to report to the interstate commerce commission by telegraph, "any collision, derailment, or other accident," resulting in death of one or more persons.

By the terms of an order just issued by the commission, the report must be sent "immediately after the occurrence of the accident," by a responsible officer of the carrier."

Details of railway accidents have not in the past been promptly reported to the commission. In many cases they are obtained only by circuitous methods.

The commission being required by law to keep a record of such accidents, decided more drastic rules of reporting were necessary.

"Flower of the Ranch."

Picturesque and colorful are the three acts of "The Flower of the Ranch," the successful musical comedy which comes to the Auditorium Monday, July 11 for an engagement of one night.

The foothills of the Rockies in California is the locale of the play, and the characters are such as one might naturally expect to find among rough environment. There are Indians, Mexicans, cowpunchers, ranchmen, and little "Flower," an attractive specimen of budding womanhood beloved by everyone. Jack Farnum, the hero of the plaudible and spirited story, is a manly young rancher, whose property an unprincipled sheriff seeks to secure with the aid of a Mexian bad man. Little "Flower", whose affection for Jack is undisguised, is instrumental in thwarting the designs of the plotters, of course. The comedy element in the play is constant and keen. Skivers, a smart and scrappy chore boy, with a penchant for timely rhyme and whose nimble feet execute divers eccentric dances, romps gaily through the three acts with Flower; while Timberline Ike and Little Mac, an Irish sergeant at the military post, contribute their share of fun. "The Flower of the Ranch" is not a "shoot up opera," for there is but one pistol shot during the action of the play, and that is "off-stage." It is good, clean, wholesome entertainment of decidedly novel character, and ought to duplicate in this city its great success of last season in the large cities of the The cast of principles this season is, with two exceptions, the same as last.

PLAYED A MEAN TRICK

The Crookston Ball Team Places Locals in a Bad Predicament.

Failed to Keep Their Appointment. Played a Game With Grafton Instead.

That the Crookston bunch of would-be ball tossers have as much regard for decency and respect as a "yaller" dog has for breaking into a prayer meeting was plainly shown when they failed to show up Sunday and keep their appointment to play with the local ball team, and, as a result, kept half the metropolis in suspense and waiting and placed the base ball boys in a bad predicament. The day was without a doubt the most favorable one for a game this season and it is doubtful if the ball park will ever again this season be graced with as large an attendance as this day had a prospect of having.

In order to get the best places a large crowd had gathered at the grounds in the early part of the afternoon, but as the visitors did not turn up, the money was refunded and the crowds turned "loose".

As a substitute for their Royal Highnesses the Crookston bunch sent up a team late in the afternoon which was supposed to be a crack bunch of amateurs, but as a matter of fact after the game had barely begun, plainly showed that they knew as much about the national game as Mother Eve knew about the Harem skirt or the aeroplane walk, and the locals scalped them to the tune of 20 to 5 without half trying to. They would have been making circles around the diamond yet had not manager Peterson begged of his men to stop the onslaught and let the visitors depart for home before midnight.

The reason assigned for the Crookston team's action on Sunday is that they played a game with the Grafton team at the former place, but as Manager Peterson says that he was not informed of this he has been the innocent victim of a practical joke, and it is one that will not be forgotten in a hurry.

The game in the evening, however, had a good attendance but the crowds left the field in the early part of the game, disgusted at the manner in which it was played.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL XXVIII | THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, JUNE 29. 1911 | NUMBER 27

FACTORY REOPENED

The Sash and Door Factory Has Commenced Operations.

Firm Is Known As The Thief River Falls Manufacturing Company.

The Sash and Door Factory has commenced its operations and has at present about a half a dozen men working at the machines taking care of the fast incoming orders. The company, as incorporated, is known as the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company and the officers are T. Ostbye, manager and president; C. O. G. Johnson, treasurer and J. P. Grothe, Secretary.

This new company is starting out with an encouraging volume of business and has its hands full from the start.

Only last week a job which involves some $1,500 was landed by the firm, and other similar orders have been secured in addition to a large number of smaller ones. The only handicap to the company at present is the lack of a sufficient number of machinists to carry on the work, but it is expected that these will be secured in a short time, which will greatly increase their force of workmen.

Mr. T. Ostbye, the manager, has had many years of experience in this line of business; he had up to a within a short time ago owned and operated a similar factory at Moorhead.

C. O. G. Johnson, the treasurer, has just recently moved here with his family, and others connected with the firm who have moved to this city are Messrs. L. Schults, of Fargo, and C. Stang.

Those Who Passed.

The following returns of the High School Board Examination which was held March 20th and 21st has been received:

Dist. No. 37.—Mildred Hooper, teacher—Highlanding; Herbert W. Cousin, age 17 years,-3 certificates, Arith. Geo. and American History.

Dist. No. 25.—Katie B. Dahl, teacher,-T. R. Falls; Harris A. Smith, age 17, Geography; Ruth J. Christenson, age 16,-Geography; Thea Erickson, age 15, Geography.

Dist. No. 165.—Miss Emma Jones, teacher, Thief River Falls; Inga E. Beckee, Geography. Second Ex. held May 26—June 1st.

Dist. No. 37.—Herbert W. Cousin, Spelling; Emma Dunn, age 15, two certificates, Arith. and Spelling; Laura Wold, age 14, two certificates, Arith. and Spelling.

Dist. No. 25.—Harris A. Smith, 2 certificates, American History and Arith.; Ruth J. Christenson, 3 certificates, American History, Arith. and English Grammar; Thea Erickson, Arith.; Ester Kellberg, 2 certificates, American History and Arith.; Carl Johnson, Arith.

Soil moisture can be conserved for next year by early plowing. This has been demonstrated in Oklahoma in a five year test. Land plowed there in the middle of July, during a five-year period, produced twenty seven bushels of wheat per acre; that plowed during the middle of August produced twenty-four bushels per acre; that plowed during the middle of September yielded twenty-two bushels per acre. It will be found, when a comparison is made, say about the middle of September, between land that is plowed now and a fine mulch maintained, and land plowed in September—that there is a vast difference in the soil moisture, in favor of early plowing and harrowing. This will be especially noticeable when the comparison is made with land on which weeds have been permitted to grow until plowing is done in September.

Changes in Rates,

Agent Baker, of the Great Northern, has been formally notified from headquarters of the changes in fares and rates on that road to become effective next Saturday, July 1st. According to the new schedule the passenger rate in milage varies in some instances, according to the old schedule based on the 2 cent rate. As in the instance of the fare between this city and Crookston, only 7 cents additional is charged under the new schedule, making the rate to become effective $1.07 as against $1.00 as heretofore. Another instance is that of the passenger rate between this city and St. Paul. The charges under the new rate will be $9.74 as against $6.34 under the 2 cent rate. This exceeds the former 3 cent rate which was effective before the 2 cent fare was instituted and based on the rate of 317 miles.

There are many other instances where on this line alone the mileage under the schedule does not tally with the former rate.

Takes Long Trip Alone.

Two of the most youthful travelers who have boarded the local trains on a long journey alone are the little Misses Perl and Alice Dalton, who are about 10 and 12 years old, who departed unaccompanied on the Great Northern train last Tuesday afternoon for Seattle, Washington, where they go to meet their father and make their home with him in the west. These girls have made their home with their Aunt and Uncle near Carmel, in eastern Marshall county ever since Mr. Dalton's departure for the west some time ago in search of a home. They were brought to town by them Monday and seen safely off on their long journey.
